Imports.—Any goods may be imported from Germany, and paid for, without licence except goods whose importation from all foreign countries is prohibited. The import prohibitions established during the war by means of Royal Proclamations issued under Section 43 of the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876, a list of which, so far as they remained in force after 1st September, 1919, was published in Parliamentary Paper Cmd. 454, have been temporarily suspended pending either reversal of Mr. Justice Sankey's judgment or legislative action to secure powers to impose a limited number of restrictions. Importers, however, should clearly understand that, in the event of these powers being conferred by Parliament, or in the event of the judgment being reversed on appeal, licences to import restricted goods will not be granted merely on the ground that the goods had been ordered between the date of the judgment and that of the re-establishment of the restrictions, but will be based solely on consideration of the reasonable requirements of the country.

Other transactions.—Other transactions of a commercial or financial nature with firms in Germany are permissible without further licence, provided they do not involve any of the following matters, namely :—

(a) The payment or receipt of money arising out of pre-war transactions ;

(b) The delivery of or dealing with property held in this country for persons in Germany since before the outbreak of war ;

(c) The transfer of securities by or on behalf of a person in Germany ;

(d) The allotment or transfer of securities issued by a Company to or for the benefit of a German subject ;

(e) The transfer of any debt or other obligation due to a person in Germany, arising out of pre-war transactions.

It should, of course, be understood that, as regards the financing of transactions, traders must make the best arrangements they can, and, in the case of uncertainty as to the best mode of procedure, they should consult their bankers.

Money due to or property acquired by German nationals as a result of transactions entered into since the resumption of trade with Germany was authorised are not liable to sequestration in this country.

II.—TURKEY, BULGARIA AND THE TERRITORIES PREVIOUSLY INCLUDED IN THE AUSTRO-HUNGARIAN DOMINIONS.

The British regulations are the same as those set out above in the case of Germany except that the collection of debts owed by persons or firms in these territories is allowed.

III.—NORWAY, SWEDEN, DENMARK, HOLLAND AND SWITZERLAND.

It is no longer necessary to obtain certificates from Importing Associations in these countries, or to procure other forms of guarantee, or to consign goods to such Associations

Export licences, for which application should be made to the Imports and Exports Licensing Section at the address given above, are required only for goods on Lists "A" and "B" of prohibited exports.

IV.—POLAND, FINLAND, ESTHONIA, LETTLAND, LITHUANIA.

So far as British regulations are concerned, there are no special restrictions on trade with these countries, but as in the case of other foreign countries export licences are required for goods on Lists "A" and "B" and general prohibitions of import apply to these as to other countries.

Consular Certificates of Origin and Interest.—These certificates are no longer required for goods imported into this country.

Declarations of Ultimate Destination and Disclosure of Names of Consignees.—These declarations will no longer be required to be made in respect of exports from the United Kingdom, and disclosure of the name of the consignee on Bills of Lading or Shipping Manifests is unnecessary, except in a limited number of cases where the Imports and Exports Licensing Section may continue to specify on an export licence the name of the consignee.

NOTE.—The above statements deal only with such regulations as are in force in the United Kingdom Traders should also have regard to the restrictions on imports and exports in operation in foreign countries. Information on this subject may be obtained from the Department of Overseas Trade, 35, Old Queen Street, Westminster, S.W.1, and 73, Basinghall Street, London, E.C.2, and is published from time to time, as received, in the "Board of Trade Journal."

Bills introduced in the Indian Legislative Council, Reports of Select Committees presented to the Council and Bills published under Rule 23.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 18th February 1920:—

No. 6 OF 1920.

A Bill to declare that the members of the Cutchi Memon community are subject to Muhammadan Law.

WHEREAS there is in the Presidency of Bombay and elsewhere a class of persons known as Cutchi Memons, and questions have from time to time arisen as to the Law by which such persons are in matters of succession and inheritance governed;

AND WHEREAS the Cutchi Memons consider that they are or desire that they should be governed in those matters by the Muhammadan Law of the Hanafi School;

AND WHEREAS it is expedient that the applicability of that Law to such persons in those matters should be placed beyond dispute; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called the Cutchi Memons Act, 1920.

Law applicable to Cutchi Memons.

2. It is hereby declared that the Cutchi Memons residing in the Bombay Presidency and elsewhere are governed by the Muhammadan Law of the Hanafi School; and that Law shall, notwithstanding any custom to the contrary, apply to them and their property in each part of British India in all matters of succession and inheritance to the same extent as it applies to other Muhammadans in that part.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The Cutchi Memons claim that they are the descendants of the Muhammadans who settled in Cutch after migrating from the coast of Oman. Except for the historical fact that they were originally Hindus and were converted to Muhammadanism about four or five hundred years ago, they are at the present day good and strict Moslems. It has been held by the Courts on more than one occasion since the judgment of Sir Erskine Perry in the year 1847, in what is commonly known as the Khojas and Memons case, that in some particulars they are still governed by the Hindu Customs instead of Muhammadan Law. The Cutchi Memons have always felt aggrieved and considered the principle so established was incorrect both in Law and in practice.

Realising this grievance of the Cutchi Memons a Bill was brought in by Mr. Justice Amir Ali about the end of 1885. That Bill intended to make it permissive to the members of the Cutchi Memon community to declare themselves subject to Muhammadan Law. The Bill provided for such a declaration to be made in a prescribed form. By reason of certain difference of opinion as to its provisions the Bill was not proceeded with.

In the year 1896, another Bill was submitted to the Imperial Legislative Council. That Bill was drafted on practically the same lines as the Bill of 1885. The Government of India would appear to have been still of opinion that it would not be right to accept such a measure unless it were shown to be in accordance with the wishes of the entire community. The Bill was referred to a Select Committee The Committee made its report on the Bill and the matter was allowed to rest there, and as no motion with respect to the Bill was made for two years, the Bill was removed from the List of Business on the 21th March, 1900, by an order of the President under rule 43 of the Rules for the conduct of Legislative Business.

From the manner in which the Cutchi Memons have been agitating this question in their community it would appear that they are unanimous that they should be governed in all particulars by Muhammadan Law of the Hanafi School.

The main alterations which we have made in the Bill are detailed in the following paragraphs.

2. Clause 1.—We have provided that the Act shall automatically come into force in British Baluchistan.

3. Clause 2.—We have amended the definition of a "Government security" to make it clear that the expression "promissory notes" includes Treasury Bills.

4. Clause 3.—The proviso to this clause has been re-drafted and converted into a sub-section for the purpose of making the intention more clear.

5. Clause 4.—In this clause we have provided for the case of a security payable in the alternative. We understand that doubts have arisen as to the rights of survivors, and, we think, it should be provided that in these cases the representatives of deceased holders should be placed on the same footing as surviving holders.

6. Clause 10 (2).—We consider that the prescribed officer might be allowed discretion as to the time of issue of a duplicate security, and have therefore omitted the last eight words of this sub-clause.

7. Clauses 11 to 13.—We have re-arranged these clauses so as to provide separately for the renewal of bearer securities, of promissory notes and of other securities. New clause 11 with slight drafting changes takes the place of sub-clause (2) of the original clause 11. Sub-clause (1) of clause 11 is replaced by clause 12. It has been represented to us that a Malabar tarwad is in all respects in the same position as a Hindu undivided family governed by the Mitakshara law, but that it is doubtful whether such a tarwad would get the benefit of the first proviso. We have, therefore, added an Explanation to make the position of these families secure. Many of the authorities consulted on the Bill have expressed an opinion that, where a Government promissory note is renewed after due inquiry, the holder of the renewed note should be given a clean title. We have, therefore, omitted the second proviso to clause 11 (1) and have drafted a new clause which provides for a clean title in the case of renewals, conversions, etc., and also extends the provisions of sub-clause (3) of clause 13 to renewals. In clause 12 which in the amended Bill has become clause 13, we think the original draft did not make it sufficiently clear what was to happen when any of the parties had obtained a final decision from the Civil Court. We have, therefore, re-drafted sub-clause (1) (a). We have also provided that the evidence for the purposes of the inquiry referred to in this clause may be recorded by a Magistrate of the second class empowered in this behalf. We have added a new clause 14, which provides that Government stock certificates and other securities not specially provided for shall be renewable in the manner prescribed by rules under the Act. We have provided in clause 13 (now clause 15) that conversion, etc., shall be subject to conditions prescribed by rules. In the event of a bearer bond being presented for consolidation with another security not payable to bearer difficulties would arise in applying the provisions of the Bill as to the discharge of Government's liability and we think power should be provided to prohibit consolidation of securities in this form.

8. Clause 16, now clause 18.—The Bill as drafted had no provision for discharge in the case of repayment of a security other than a bearer security. We think that Government's discharge in this case should be the deferred discharge provided by clause 15, and we have made some changes in this clause accordingly.

9. Clause 16, now clause 19.—An opinion has been generally expressed that the period of three months allowed by this clause for obtaining probate, etc., was too short and we have therefore extended it to six months. It has been pointed out that the Explanation to sub-clause (1) would enable a large holder of Government securities to evade payment of the fees for a succession certificate in respect of R5,000 of his holding. As the clause is intended to be of benefit to small holders only we have omitted the Explanation.

10. Clause 17, now clause 20.—We think that the provisions of the rules to provide for payment in cases where securities are held by minors and lunatics should only apply where the value of the security does not exceed R5,000, and we have introduced an amendment to effect this.

11. Clause 19, now clause 22.—We think that it is desirable that rules should be made also regarding the obtaining of information from Government securities themselves as well as from the books of the Public Debt Office.

12. Clause 20, now clause 23.—We are of opinion that it is undesirable that prosecutions for offences under this clause should be initiated by private persons, and we have accordingly added a sub-clause which requires that a complaint should be made by the authority concerned.

13. Clause 21, now clause 24.—In sub-clause (2) (a) we have substituted the word "made" for the word "recorded." This will enable rules to be made, if necessary, for payment of small sums through the agency of the Post Office. We have altered the drafting of sub-clause (2) (o) to assimilate it more closely to the English Act of 1917 from which it was originally taken.

14. Further changes made in the Bill which have not been specified in the preceding paragraphs are no more than drafting amendments.

BILL No. 34 OF 1919.

[AS AMENDED BY SELECT COMMITTEE.]

[Words printed in italics indicate the amendments suggested by the Select Committee.]

A Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Government Securities.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to Government securities; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Securities Act, 192 ;

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, including British Baluchistan, and;

Definitions.

2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(a) "Government security" means promissory notes (including treasury bills), stock-certificates, bearer bonds and all other securities issued by the Governor General in Council or by any Local Government in respect of any loan contracted either before or after the passing of this Act, but does not include a currency-note; and

Notice of trust not receivable save as provided.

3. (1) Save as otherwise provided in or under this Act, no notice of any trust in respect of any Government security shall be receivable by the Government.

(2) The Government shall not be deemed to have received notice of any trust by reason only of the fact that it has recognised an indorsement on a Government security by an executor or administrator as such, nor shall it inquire into the terms of any will by which such executor or administrator may be bound, but, on being satisfied of the due appointment of such executor or administrator, it shall be entitled to treat him as the full owner of any Government security belonging to the estate of the person whom he represents.

Right of survivors of joint or several payees of Government securities.

4. (1) Notwithstanding anything in section 45 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, IX of 1872.

(a) when a Government security is payable to two or more persons jointly, and either or any of them dies, the security shall be payable to the survivor or survivors of those persons, and

(b) when a Government security is payable to two or more persons severally, and either or any of them dies, the security shall be payable to the survivor or survivors of those persons, or to the representative of the deceased, or to any of them.

(2) This section shall apply whether such death occurred or occurs before or after this Act comes into force.

(3) Nothing herein contained shall affect any claim which any representative of a deceased person may have against the survivor or survivors under or in respect of any security to which sub-section (1) applies.

Indorsements to be made on security itself.

5. Notwithstanding anything in section 15 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, no indorsement of a Government promissory note shall be valid unless made by the signature of the holder inscribed on the back of the security itself. XXVI 1881.

Holding of Government securities by holders of public offices.

6. (1) In the case of any public office to which the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, declare this sub-section to apply, a Government security may be made or indorsed payable to or to the order of the holder of the office by the name of the office.

(2) When a Government security is made or indorsed as aforesaid, it shall be deemed to be transferred without any or further indorsement from each holder of the office to the succeeding holder of the office on and from the date on which the latter takes charge of the office.

(3) When the holder of the office indorses to a third party a Government security made or indorsed as aforesaid, he shall subscribe the indorsement with his name and the name of the office.

(4) A writing on a Government security now or heretofore standing in the name of the holder of a public office, whereby the security has been or was made or indorsed payable to or to the order of the holder of the office by the name of the office, shall not be deemed to be or to have been invalid by reason only of the security having been so made or indorsed.

(5) This section applies as well to an office of which there are two or more joint holders as to an office of which there is a single holder.

Issue of securities to rulers of States in India.

7. Notwithstanding anything in the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, the Governor General in Council may, in respect of any loan, issue to the ruler of any State in India Government securities in such form and subject to such conditions as to negotiability, succession and other matters as may be prescribed. XXVI 1881.

Indorser of Government security not liable for amount thereof.

8. Notwithstanding anything in the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, a person shall not, by reason only of his having indorsed a Government security, be liable to pay any money due, either as principal or as interest, thereunder. XXVI 1881.

Impression of signature on Government securities.

9. (1) The signature of the person authorised to sign Government securities on behalf of the Government may be printed, engraved or lithographed, or impressed by such other mechanical process as the Governor General in Council may direct on the securities.

(2) A signature so printed, engraved, lithographed or otherwise impressed shall be as valid as if it had been inscribed in the proper handwriting of the person so authorised.

Issue of duplicate, renewed, converted, consolidated or sub-divided securities.

10. (1) When a Government security is alleged to have been lost or destroyed either wholly or in part, and a person claims to be the person to whom but for the loss or destruction it would be payable, he may, on application to the prescribed officer, and on producing proof to his satisfaction of the loss or destruction and of the justice of the claim and on payment of the prescribed fee, if any, obtain from him an order for—

Issue of duplicate securities.

(a) the payment of interest in respect of the security said to be lost or destroyed pending the issue of a duplicate security; and

(2) An order shall not be passed under sub-section (1) until after the issue of the prescribed notification of the loss or destruction.

(3) A list of the securities in respect of which an order is passed under sub-section (1) shall be published in the prescribed manner.

11. The holder of a bearer bond or other Government security payable to bearer, may, on application to the prescribed officer, on delivery of the bearer bond or other security, and on payment of the prescribed fee, if any, obtain from such officer a renewed bearer bond or other security, as the case may be.

Renewal of bearer bonds.

12. Subject to the provisions of section 13, a person claiming to be entitled to a Government promissory note, may, on applying to the prescribed officer, and on satisfying him of the justice of his claim and delivering the promissory note receipted in the prescribed manner, and paying the prescribed fee, if any, obtain from such officer a renewed promissory note payable to him:

Renewal of promissory notes.

Provided that, when application is made for the renewal of a Government promissory note which appears to the prescribed officer to stand in the name of a deceased member of a Hindu undivided family governed by the Mitakshara law, a renewed promissory note shall not be issued to the applicant unless he furnishes a certificate signed by such authority and after such inquiry as may be prescribed to the effect that the deceased belonged to a Hindu undivided family governed by the Mitakshara law, that the promissory note formed part of the joint property of the family, and that the applicant is the managing or sole surviving male member of the family.

Explanation.—The expression "Hindu undivided family governed by the Mitakshara law" shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to include a Malabar tarwad.

13. (1) Where there is a dispute as to the title to a Government promissory note in respect of which an application for renewal has been made, the prescribed officer may—

Renewal of promissory notes in case of dispute as to title.

(a) where any party to the dispute has obtained a final decision from a Court of competent jurisdiction declaring him to be entitled to such note, issue a renewed note in favour of such party, or

(b) refuse to renew the note until such a decision has been obtained, or

(c) after such inquiry as is hereinafter provided and consideration of the result thereof, declare by order in writing which of the parties is in his opinion entitled to such note and may, after the expiration of three months from the date of such declaration, issue a renewed note in favour of such party in accordance with the provisions of section 12 unless within that period he has received notice that proceedings have been instituted by any person in a Court of competent jurisdiction for the purpose of establishing a title to such note.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this sub-section the expression 'final decision' means a decision which is not appealable or a decision which is appealable but against which no appeal has been filed within the period of limitation allowed by law.

(2) For the purpose of the inquiry referred to in sub-section (1), the prescribed officer may himself record, or may request the District Magistrate to record or to have recorded, the whole or any part of such evidence as the parties may produce. When such request has been made to the District Magistrate, such Magistrate may himself record or may direct any Magistrate of the first class subordinate to him, or any Magistrate of the second class subordinate to him and empowered by general or special order of the Local Government in this behalf, to record the evidence, and shall forward a copy thereof to the prescribed officer.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this sub-section the District Magistrate means the District Magistrate having jurisdiction in the place where interest on the promissory note is payable and, where interest is payable at a presidency-town, the Chief Presidency Magistrate, or at a place in a State in India, the Political Agent.

(3) The prescribed officer or any Magistrate acting under this section may, if he thinks fit, record evidence on oath.

14. Government securities other than those mentioned in sections 11 and 12 may be renewed in such circumstances and in such manner as may be prescribed.

Renewal of other securities.

15. (1) The prescribed officer may, subject to such conditions as may be prescribed, on the application of a person claiming to be entitled to a Government security or securities, on being satisfied of the justice of the claim and on delivery of the security or securities receipted in the prescribed manner and on payment of the prescribed fee, if any, convert, consolidate or subdivide the security or securities, and issue to the applicant a new security or securities accordingly.

Issue of converted, etc., securities.

(2) The conversion, consolidation or sub-division referred to in sub-section (1) may be into a security or securities of the same or different classes or of the same or different loans.

Liability in respect of promissory note renewed, etc.

16. (1) When a renewed Government promissory note has been issued under section 12 or a new Government promissory note has been issued upon conversion, consolidation or sub-division under section 15 in favour of any person, the note so issued shall be deemed to constitute a new contract between the Government and such person and all persons deriving title thereafter through him.

(2) No such renewal, conversion, consolidation or sub-division shall affect the rights as against the Government of any other person to the security or securities so renewed, converted, consolidated or sub-divided.

Discharge.

Immediate discharge in certain cases.

17. On payment by or on behalf of the Government to the holder of a bearer bond or other Government security payable to bearer of the amount expressed therein on or after the date when it becomes due, or on renewal of a bearer bond or other security payable to bearer under section 11, or on renewal of a Government promissory note under section 13, or on conversion, consolidation or sub-division of a bearer bond or other security payable to bearer under section 15, the Government shall be discharged in the same way and to the same extent as if such bearer bond, promissory note or other security were a promissory note payable to bearer:

Provided that, in the case of a Government promissory note renewed under section 13, nothing in this section shall be deemed to bar a claim against the Government in respect of such note by any person who had no notice of the proceedings under that section, or who derives title through any such person.

18. Save as otherwise provided in this Act—

Discharge in other cases.

(i) on payment of the amount due on a Government security on or after the date on which payment becomes due, or

(ii) when a duplicate security has been issued under section 10, or

(iii) when a renewed security has been issued under section 12 or section 13, or a new security or securities has or have been issued upon conversion, consolidation or sub-division under section 15—

the Government shall be discharged from all liability in respect of the security or securities so paid or in place of which a duplicate, renewed, or new security or securities has or have been issued—

(a) in the case of payment—after the lapse of six years from the date on which payment was due;

(b) in the case of a duplicate security—after the lapse of six years from the date of the publication under sub-section (3) of section 10 of the list in which the security is first mentioned, or from the date of the last payment of interest on the original security, whichever date is later;

(c) in the case of a renewed security or of a new security issued upon conversion, consolidation or sub-division—after the lapse of six years from the date of the issue thereof.

Summary procedure in certain cases.

Procedure on death of holder of securities not exceeding an aggregate value of five thousand rupees.

19. (1) If within six months of the death of a person who was entitled to a Government security or securities (other than a security payable to bearer) the nominal or face value of which does not in the aggregate exceed five thousand rupees, probate of the will or letters of administration of the estate of such person or a certificate granted under the Succession Certificate Act, 1889, is not produced VII of 1889.
to the prescribed officer, such officer may, after inquiry in the manner provided in sub-sections (2) and (3) of section 13, determine who is the person entitled to the security or securities or to administer the estate of the deceased, and may—

(a) in the case of any such security relating to a loan due for repayment, authorise payment of the amount due thereon to such person; and

(b) in the case of any such security relating to a loan not due for repayment, authorise, in the case of a promissory note, the renewal of such promissory note in favour of such person, or, in the case of stock, the registration of the name of such person in substitution for the name of the deceased.

(2) Upon the payment or renewal of any promissory note in accordance with sub-section (1), the Government shall be discharged from all liability in respect of the note so paid or renewed; and any substitution of names made in accordance with clause (b) of sub-section (1) shall, for the purposes of any claim against the Government, be deemed to have effected a valid transfer of the stock in respect of which it was made.

(3) Any creditor or claimant against the estate of the deceased may recover his debt or claim out of money paid to any person under sub-section (1) and remaining in his hands unadministered in the same manner and to the same extent as if the said person had obtained letters of administration of the estate of the deceased, and nothing in this section shall affect any claim of an executor or administrator or other representative of the deceased against such person other than a claim to recover amounts lawfully paid by him in due course of administration of the estate of the deceased.

Securities held by minors and lunatics.

Payment in case of securities held by minors and lunatics.

20. Where a Government security stands in the name of or is held by a minor or a person who is insane and incapable of managing his affairs, the interest accruing thereon, or the capital sum payable in respect thereof on the maturity or discharge of the loan, shall, where, in the case of interest payable, the nominal value of the security, or in other cases the sum payable, does not exceed five thousand rupees, be paid in such manner as may be prescribed, and on any payment being so made, the Government shall, notwithstanding any provision of any enactment to the contrary, be discharged from all liability in respect thereof.

Indemnity.

Indemnity.

21. Notwithstanding anything in sections 10, 12, 13 or 15, the prescribed officer may in any case arising under any of those sections—

(i) issue a duplicate or renewed security or convert, consolidate or sub-divide a security or securities upon the applicant giving the prescribed indemnity against the claims of all persons claiming under the original security or under the security or securities so renewed, converted, consolidated or sub-divided, as the case may be, or

(ii) refuse to issue a duplicate or renewed security or to convert, consolidate or sub-divide a security or securities unless such indemnity is given.

Inspection of registers, books and documents.

Inspection of documents.

22. No person shall be entitled to inspect, or to receive information derived from, any Government security in the possession of the Government or from any book, register or other document kept or maintained by or on behalf of Government in relation to Government securities or any Government security, save in such circumstances and manner and subject to such conditions as may be prescribed.

Penalty.

Penalty.

23 (1). If any person, for the purpose of obtaining for himself or for any other person payment of interest or of the capital sum due in respect of any Government security, or the issue of a duplicate security, or the renewal, conversion, consolidation or sub-division of a Government security or securities, makes to any authority under this Act a statement which is false and which he either knows to be false or does not believe to be true, he shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

(2) No Court shall take cognizance of any offence under sub-section (1) save on the complaint of the authority to whom the false statement was made.

Rules.

Power to make rules.

24. (1) The Governor General in Council may after previous publication make rules to carry out the purposes of this Act.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may provide for all or any of the following matters, namely:—

(a) the manner in which payment of interest in respect of Government securities is to be made and acknowledged;

(b) the circumstances in which Government securities must be renewed before further payment of interest thereon can be claimed;

(c) the form in which and the conditions subject to which Government securities may be issued to the rulers of States in India;

(d) the fees to be paid in respect of the issue of duplicate securities and of the renewal, conversion, consolidation and sub-division of Government securities;

(e) the proof which is to be produced by persons applying for duplicate securities;

(f) the form and manner of publication of the notification mentioned in sub-section (2) of section 10 and the manner of publication of the list mentioned in sub-section (3) of that section;

(g) the officer who is to exercise all or any of the powers and to perform all or any of the duties referred to in sections 10, 11, 12, 13, 15, 19 and 21;

(h) the manner of making the inquiry mentioned in the proviso to section 12;

(i) the circumstances and the manner in which securities other than securities payable to bearer or promissory notes are to be renewed;

(j) the form in which securities delivered for discharge, renewal, conversion, consolidation or sub-division are to be receipted;

(k) the conditions subject to which securities may be converted, consolidated or sub-divided;

(l) the person to whom and the manner in which payments are to be made in respect of Government securities standing in the name of, or held by, minors or persons who are insane and incapable of managing their affairs;

(m) the taking of indemnities against adverse claims of third parties from persons who receive payment of interest or of the capital sum due in respect of Government securities, or who obtain duplicate, renewed, converted, consolidated or sub-divided securities;

(n) the manner in which any document relating to Government securities or any indorsement on a Government promissory note may, on the demand of any person who from any cause is unable to write, be executed on his behalf;

(o) enabling holders of Government stock to be described in the registers of such stock as trustees, and either as trustees of any particular trust or as trustees without qualification, and for the recognition of powers of attorney granted by holders of stock so described;

(p) the holding of Government stock by the holders of offices other than public offices, and the manner in which and the conditions subject to which stock so held may be transferred;

(q) the mode of attestation of documents relating to Government stock;

(r) generally, all matters connected with the grant of duplicate, renewed, converted, consolidated and sub-divided securities; and

(s) the circumstances and the manner in which, and the conditions subject to which, inspection of securities, books, registers and other documents may be allowed or information therefrom may be given under section 22.

(3) Nothing in any rules made under clauses (o) and (p) shall, as between any trustees or as between any trustees and the beneficiaries under a trust, be deemed to authorise the trustees to act otherwise than in accordance with the rules of law applying to the trust and the terms of the instrument constituting the trust; and neither the Government nor any person holding or acquiring any interest in any Government stock shall, by reason only of any entry in any register maintained by or on behalf of the Government in relation to any Government stock or any stockholder, or of anything in any document relating to Government stock, be affected with notice of any trust or of the fiduciary character of any stockholder or of any fiduciary obligation attaching to the holding of any Government stock.

(4) Rules made under this section shall be published in the Gazette of India, and shall thereupon have effect as if enacted in this Act.

Repeals.

Repeals.

25. On and from the date on which this Act comes into force, the Indian Securities Act, 1886, and so much of the First and Second Schedules of the Repealing and Amending Act, 1914, as relates to the Indian Securities Act, 1886, shall be repealed.

Proceedings of the Indian Legislative Council.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915. (5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61.)

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Wednesday, the 11th February, 1920.

PRESENT:

His Excellency BARON CHELMSFORD, P.C., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., G.C.M.G., G.C.B.E., Viceroy and Governor General, presiding, and 56 Members, of whom 49 were Additional Members.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked:— 11-5 A.M.

Reduction in fares and reserve accommodation on railways.

1. " (a) Were large profits made by the railways last year?

(b) Do Government propose to consider the question of reducing return-ticket fares to the pre-war level and to revive the system of giving reserve accommodation in first and second-class compartments for three and four fares, respectively?"

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied:—

" (a) The profits of the railways last financial year have been published in the Administration Report for the period.

(b) Consideration has been given to the question of reverting to pre-war passenger fares. In view of the great increase in working expenses which has now to be met, Government are not prepared to consider at present the reduction in return-ticket passenger fares to the pre-war level. Nor, having regard to the great demands for passenger accommodation and the limited room available, is it practicable to relax the conditions for reserved compartments."

[Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur; Sir Arthur Anderson; Sir Thomas Holland; Maharajá Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi.] [11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

Re-construction of railway lines.

2. "When do Government propose to re-construct railway lines which were discontinued for war purposes?"

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied :—

"Government propose to commence the re-construction of dismantled lines during the ensuing year and to carry them to completion with the least possible delay. It is, however, not at present possible to forecast dates on which work on individual lines will be taken in hand."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

British Empire Exhibition in London.

3. "(a) Is it proposed to hold a British Empire Exhibition in London in 1921, with a view to promote the extension of Imperial trade by bringing before buyers from all parts of the world exhibits of the industries, inventions, raw materials, and produces of the Empire?

(b) Are Government taking necessary steps for the representation of Indian products, especially Indian art products, in the Exhibition?"

The Hon'ble Sir Thomas Holland replied :—

"(a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) I place* on the table copies of a Press Communiqué which was issued on the 3rd January, showing that the Government of India approved of the proposal, and, although unable to participate officially in obtaining representative exhibits of all products, industries and raw materials, they desired to commend the Exhibition to the general public and manufacturing firms. The Communiqué was issued to all Local Governments for publication in the Provincial Gazettes, and the Indian Munitions Board has informally addressed the Provincial Directors of Industries, suggesting that they might be able to utilise the experience gained at the British Industries Fair of this year to organise a larger display of Indian art products at the Empire Exhibition next year."

4. "(a) Is it a fact that there is no waiting room at the railway station at Jhikargacha Ghât, a station on the Eastern Bengal Railway?

(b) Do Government propose to take up the matter and give effect to the scheme which was considered before the war broke out?"

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied :—

"(a) Jhikargacha Ghât station already has waiting accommodation for 3rd class passengers and Indian ladies.

(b) The Eastern Bengal Railway Administration is now examining the scheme framed a few years ago, and, it is hoped, a decision will be arrived at shortly."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

Unclaimed deposits.

5. "(a) Will Government be pleased to state the total amount of unclaimed lapsed and forfeited money that has been lying with them in all parts of India since 1901 under the following three heads :—

(i) Deposits in Boards of Revenue;

(ii) Deposits in Presidency Banks; and (iii) Investments in Government Promissory Notes.

*Not included in these Proceedings.

[11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi; Mr. W. M. Hailey; Sir William Vincent; Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda.]

(b) Are these amounts ever shown in any Budgets? If so, under what heads will they be found? Are these absorbed in the ordinary revenues, or is any special use made of them or the interest thereon?"

The Hon'ble Mr. W. M. Hailey replied:—

"(a) (i) It has not been possible to separate the figures for unclaimed revenue deposits from other items of deposits which have lapsed to Government, for example, lapsed civil and criminal courts deposits, but a statement showing the total amounts credited to Government under the minor head 'Unclaimed Deposits' since the year 1901 is laid on the table.*

(iii) The outstanding balance on account of Government promissory notes notified for discharge which have not been claimed and have therefore been written-off to Government is R15,35,990.

(b) Outstanding amounts of Government loans written off to revenue are credited in the 'India' books under the head 'XXV—Miscellaneous,' and lapsed deposits under the minor head 'Unclaimed Deposits' under the same major head in both the 'India' and Provincial books. The amounts are included in the Government balances and not devoted to any special purpose."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked:—

Allotment made in the Bengal Government's Budget for re-organising the Munsifs service.

6. "(a) Is it a fact that in the current financial year, 1919-1920, the Bengal Government have budgetted for a sum of R1,25,000 for giving partial effect to the scheme for re-organisation so far as the class of public servants known as Munsifs are concerned?

(b) Is it a fact that, if orders are not passed before the expiry of the present financial year, the greater portion of this sum will lapse, and that this will be detrimental to a large number of officers who have been in expectation of the benefits of the scheme since 1912, when it was first drawn up by the Local Government?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied:—

"(a) The answer is the affirmative.

(b) Pending the issue of orders on the detailed recommendations of the Public Services Commission, relating to the Provincial Judicial Service, the pay of the lowest grade of Munsifs in Bengal was raised in May last from R200 to 250 a month, and a part of the sum provided for in the local Budget has been expended in this connection. As stated in answer to another question, the Secretary of State was addressed on the 9th December in regard to the recommendations of the Public Services Commission relating to the pay of the Provincial Civil and Judicial Services. He has now replied and his orders have been communicated to the Local Governments. The lapse of a Budget provision is a matter of accounts only, and there is no reason why such a lapse should prove detrimental to the service concerned, since the Bengal Government is competent to make fresh Budget provision in the coming year, and will no doubt do so."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked:—

Backward tracts of Assam.

7. "(a) Will Government be pleased to state what part, if any, of Assam it is proposed to declare to be a 'backward tract' in accordance with the provisions of section 15 (2) of the Government of India Act, 1919?

*Vide Appendix A.

[Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda; Sir William Marris; Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha; Sir William Vincent; Mr. H. R. C. Dobbs.] [11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

(b) What are the exceptions and modifications, if any, subject to which it is proposed to apply the Government of India Act to such 'backward tract?'

(c) What Acts of the Indian Legislature, if any, is it proposed to apply and not to apply, respectively, in such 'backward tract'?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Marris replied:—

"The Hon'ble Member is referred to the Government of India's despatch No 7 of 1919 to the Secretary of State, dated June 5, 1919. The provisional proposals in this regarding the treatment of the hill districts of Assam are still under consideration between the Government of India and the local Administration, and the Government of India are not at present in a position to make any further announcement as to details"

The Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha asked:—

Number of Indians, Europeans and Anglo-Indians employed in the Government of India Secretariat.

8. "Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing separately the total number of Indians, Europeans and Anglo-Indians employed on the 1st of January, 1920, in each of the Departments of the Government of India Secretariat, drawing a salary of not less than R25 per mensem, and further showing in the case of the Indian employees the numbers belonging to each province?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied:—

"The information will be collected and laid on the table."

The Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha asked:—

Raids committed by the trans-Frontier tribes.

9. "(a) Will Government be pleased to state:—

(i) the number of raids committed by the trans-Frontier tribes in the year 1919 in each of the districts of the North-West Frontier Province;

(ii) the nature of the extent of loss, if any, to life and property in each district as a result of such raids?

(b) Is it a fact that a number of women were forcibly carried away by the raiders? If so, will Government lay on the table a statement showing their number, specifying the community they belonged to, and also how many of them and under what circumstances were ultimately ransomed or brought back?

(c) Is it a fact that many people in the province have been driven, by reasons of the depredations, to give up their village homes and their belongings and take refuge at District Headquarters?

(d) What action, if any, have Government taken, or what action do they propose to take, to ensure the safety of life and property of the people of the Frontier Province and to make them immune from such raids in future?"

The Hon'ble Mr. H. R. C. Dobbs replied:—

"The information asked for will take some time to collect. It will be laid on the table when complete and when it is in the public interest that it should be published."

The Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha asked:—

Abolition of recruitment for the Indian Army in Bihar.

10. "(a) When was recruitment for the Indian Army finally abolished in Bihar prior to the commencement of the last European War, and what was the reason?

[11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief; Mr. H. R. C. Dobbs.]

(c) Was recruitment re-commenced in Bihar during the last European War? If so, when? What was the total number of combatants and non-combatants so recruited?

(d) Has recruitment in Bihar Districts ceased since the close of the war, or is it still being continued? If the former, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons therefor?

(e) Do Government propose to reconsider the question of recruitment in Bihar with a view to maintain and give play to the martial spirit of the people? If not, why not?"

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied:—

"(a) Recruitment for the Indian Army in Bihar was not abolished prior to the war.

(b) The districts of Shahabad, Saran, and Gaya.

(c) Recruitment in Bihar continued throughout the war. The numbers recruited up to the date of the Armistice were—

(i) Combatants	8,576
(ii) Non-combatants	32,976

(d) No. Therefore, the last question (e) does not arise."

The Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha asked:—

Divisional and Sessions Judges in the North-West Frontier Province.

11. "Will Government be pleased to state (a) the number of Divisional and Sessions Judges in the North-West Frontier Province; (b) their respective qualifications; (c) whether they are members of the Indian Civil Service, Barristers or Military men; and (d) what judicial experience each of them had at the time of his appointment as such Judge?"

The Hon'ble Mr. H. R. C. Dobbs replied:—

"There are three Divisional and Sessions Judges in the North-West Frontier Province:—

(1) Divisional and Sessions Judge, Peshawar.

(2) Additional Divisional and Sessions Judge, Peshawar.

(3) Divisional and Sessions Judge, Derajat.

(1) is held by Mr. T. B. Copeland, M.A., I.C.S. He is a member of the Indian Civil Service and of the Political Department. Before his appointment as a Divisional and Sessions Judge, Peshawar, from January, 1916, he has held the appointments of District Judge, Peshawar, District Judge, Hazara, District Magistrate and Collector, civil and military station Bangalore, etc.

(2) is held by Major R. A. Yule, an officer of the Indian Army and of the Political Department. Before his appointment as Additional Divisional and Sessions Judge, Peshawar, he has held the following appointments:—

(i) District Judge, Peshawar.

(ii) Additional District and Sessions Judge, Peshawar.

(iii) District and Sessions Judge, Derajat.

(iv) Divisional and Sessions Judge, Peshawar.

(3) is held by Lieutenant-Colonel C. F. Minchin, D.S.O., an officer of the Indian Army and of the Political Department. He held no judicial appointments before his appointment as Divisional and Sessions Judge, Derajat—an office he has held since 15th November 1911. He, therefore, has at present more than eight years' judicial experience in the post which he holds."

[Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha; Mr H. R. C. Dobbs; Mr. G. S. Khaparde; Sir Arthur Anderson; Sir George Barnes.] [11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha asked :—

Number of raids committed and value of property looted in the North-West Frontier Province.

12. "Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a comparative statement showing the number of raids committed, the approximate value of the property looted, the number of persons killed or injured, and the number of men, women and children kidnapped and then ransomed in the districts at present constituting the North-West Frontier Province during the years 1898, 1899, 1900 and 1901, and 1916, 1917, 1918 and 1919, respectively?"

The Hon'ble Mr. H. R. C. Dobbs replied :—

"The information for the years 1898—1901 is not available. The information for the years 1916—1919 is placed on the table.* The period of twelve months runs in each case from the 1st April to the 31st March, as the Annual Reports are for that period; and the returns for 1919-1920 are therefore not yet complete.

A definition for statistical purposes of the term 'raid' presents some difficulty, since the local officers who report occurrences of this nature do not always discriminate between a raid proper and an ordinary dakaiti. The statement, therefore, includes all cases in which there is reason to believe that trans-Frontier offenders were concerned.

The figures given as the value of property stolen represent the complainants' estimates of their losses. There is a natural tendency to exaggerate the value of lost property, and it is impossible to secure anything like accuracy in such figures."

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde asked :—

Appointment of railway visitors.

13. "Do Government propose to consider the advisability of appointing railway visitors from among the elected members of the Indian and local Legislative Councils?"

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied :—

"Government do not consider it advisable to appoint railway visitors from among the elected members of the Legislative Councils."

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde asked :—

Indian Settlers in British East Africa.

14. "Will Government be pleased to state the purport of the recommendations of the Economic Committee which is believed to have reported against Indian settlers in British East Africa?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"The Government of India have not yet received from the Secretary of State a copy of the East Africa Economic Commission's Report, but telegraphed some little time ago to the Secretary of State asking that a copy should be sent to the Government of India, and urging that Indian interests should be fully represented at any discussion with regard to it between Lord Milner and the Governor of East Africa, who is at present in London on leave. From another source we received yesterday a copy of Part I of the Final Report of the Economic Commission and I shall be very glad to show this copy to the Hon'ble Member if he so desires."

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde asked :—

Placing of the rules under the new Government of India Act before the Council.

15. "Will Government be pleased to state whether the rules to be framed under the new Government of India Act will be placed before this Council, as was done in the case of the proposals contained in the Montagu-Chelmsford Report, and the opinion of the non-official members taken?"

Vide* Appendix B.

[11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Sir William Marris; Sir George Lowndes; Mr. Shafi; Sir George Barnes; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.]

The Hon'ble Sir William Marris replied:—

"The rules to be made under the Government of India Act are too numerous and detailed for the opinion of the Council as a whole to be obtained upon them with advantage, even if time allowed of such a course. The Government of India, however, propose to forward a copy of the suggested rules, as they are ready, to every non-official member requesting him to offer any observation in writing, and also to take the rules and comments into consideration with a Committee largely composed of members of this Council."

PROVINCIAL INSOLVENCY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"My Lord, I have the honour to present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill further to amend the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1907." 11-15 A.M.

INDIAN CENSUS BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. Shafi:—"My Lord, I have the honour to present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to provide for certain matters in connection with the taking of the Census. Hon'ble Members will notice that the only principal changes introduced by the Select Committee have been with reference to clauses 4, 5 and 10 of the Bill. In clause 4 the figure 20 has been modified into 10. In clause 5 an addition has been made to the authorities who may be required to give assistance in the taking of the Census, and in sub-clause (b) a provision has been made for a penalty for the disclosure of information received by a Census officer in the course of his duty. 11-16 A.M.

The remaining changes are merely drafting amendments and need no discussion in detail."

INDIAN STEAM-SHIPS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes:—"I beg to move, my Lord, that the Bill further to amend the Indian Steam-ships Act, 1884, be taken into consideration. I explained this Bill when I moved for leave to introduce it. Its object is simply to correct a small mistake which was contained in the original Act and which unfortunately has taken some 36 years to find out. 11-17 A.M.

"I beg to move that the Bill be taken into consideration."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes:—"My Lord, I beg to move that the Bill be passed."

The motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN ARMY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief:—"My Lord, I beg to move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Army Act, 1911, be taken into consideration. 11-18 A.M.

[His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief; Mr. Shafi; Sir William Vincent.] [11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

The object of the Bill, as I explained, is merely to supply a deficiency in regard to the disposal of moveable property of men who are declared to be missing on active service."

The motion was put and agreed to.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief:—"My Lord, I beg to move that the Bill be passed."

The motion was put and agreed to.

UNITED PROVINCES TOWN IMPROVEMENT (APPEALS) BILL.

11-19 A.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Shafi:—"My Lord, I beg to move that the Bill to modify certain provisions of the United Provinces Town Improvement Act, 1919, be taken into consideration."

The motion was put and agered to.

The Hon'ble Mr. Shafi:—"My Lord, I beg to move that the Bill be passed."

The motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN TARIFF (AMENDMENT) BILL.

11-20 A.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"My Lord, I move for leave to introduce a Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894. The reasons for this measure are fully explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, and I do not think I need detain the Council for long in respect to it. Under the present law the Government realise from dealers importing certain classes of fire-arms into this country a fixed fee, but when the arms are re-sold to private purchasers a refund is allowed to the dealers of anything in excess of the general 20 per cent ad valorem duty. It has been found that this results in inconvenience to the dealers in that it necessitates a certain amount of their capital being locked up, which can only be recovered gradually as the arms are re-sold. It also involves a good deal of account-keeping and inconvenience to them in realising the refund and a good deal of extra work to the Customs officers. It is proposed, therefore, to modify the tariff in the manner suggested in the Bill, the minimum rates for certain articles being still retained, as Hon'ble Members will see if they refer to the Bill before the Council. My intention at present is only to move for leave to introduce the Bill, and it will be published in due course in the Gazette of India."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"My Lord, I now introduce the Bill and move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English."

The motion was put and agreed to.

DACCA UNIVERSITY BILL.

11-21 A.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Shafi:—"My Lord, I beg to move that the Bill to establish and incorporate a unitary teaching and residential University at Dacca be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Sir George

[11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Mr. Shafi.]

Lowndes, the Hon'ble Mr. Sharp, the Hon'ble Maharaja Sir M. C. Nandi, the Hon'ble Nawab Nawab Ali Chaudhuri, the Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea, the Hon'ble Mr. Moncrieff Smith, the Hon'ble Mr. De, the Hon'ble Mr. de la Fosse, the Hon'ble Mr. L. M. Chatterjee, the Hon'ble Chaudhuri Muhammad Ismail Khan, and myself.

"My Lord, in September last when I had the honour to move for leave to introduce the Bill I ventured, in some detail, to trace the history of the origin and subsequent development of the movement for the foundation of a University at Dacca. The Bill, in pursuance of the motion then adopted, was published in the Gazette of India and in the local Provincial Gazettes of Bengal, Assam and Burma. The reception with which this measure has met from all quarters must very naturally be a source of great gratification to your Excellency's Government. Not a single discordant note has been struck anywhere with reference to the desirability, as well as the necessity, of the early establishment of the Dacca University; and while criticisms have been received with regard to certain details of the measure, some of which I have no doubt will receive careful consideration at the hands of the Select Committee, its main principles have, except perhaps in one instance, received general approval.

"My Lord, since this Bill was last before this Hon'ble Council, I have had the opportunity of making a careful study of the whole problem on the spot. Towards the end of December last, accompanied by the Hon'ble Mr. Sharp, the Hon'ble Mr. Hornell and Mr. Stapleton, officer on special duty in connection with the Dacca University, I paid a visit to Dacca. While there we carefully inspected the proposed University site, came into close personal contact with representatives of public opinion at Dacca, and received two representative deputations, one on behalf of the Hindu and the other on behalf of the Muhammadan community. I was immensely struck with the possibilities of Dacca as an educational centre. Indeed, no one who has not personally visited Dacca can have a really adequate conception of those possibilities. In the University area, which has already been mapped out, we have an ideal University site. In the magnificent edifice which was to have been the Government House of East Bengal, we have a palatial residence for the Vice-Chancellor and halls and rooms suitable for meetings of the Court, the Executive and the Academic Councils and other University bodies. In the vast pile of the Secretariat building with its central hall suitable for holding the annual convocation, in the beautiful building of the Dacca college with its lofty hall and class rooms, in the building at present occupied by the Engineering school and the two hostels at the back of these two buildings, we have already material ready for the reception of the new University. And in the extensive site surrounding these beautiful buildings we have room not only for the erection of the Muhammadan and the Jagannath halls, which will no doubt be taken in hand immediately, but also space for the construction of the Medical, the Engineering and the Agricultural Halls which, I doubt not, will come into existence at no distant date.

"My Lord, at the various gatherings which were arranged by the hospitable citizens of Dacca we had opportunities of exchanging views with representative Hindu, Muhammadan and European gentlemen, and the two representative deputations I have already spoken of placed their views before us. There was complete unanimity of opinion amongst all classes and creeds in Dacca on behalf of the early establishment of the University which your Excellency's Government proposed to establish there. Some misgivings were no doubt expressed by some Dacca gentlemen lest the opposition which they feared in certain quarters in Calcutta might result in the postponement of the realisation of their dream. But I for one was confident that those misgivings were not justified, and I am able to announce, here in this Council, that during my three weeks' residence in Calcutta, having come into close contact with representative public opinion in Bengal, I found that my confidence in the patriotism and broad-mindedness of Calcutta Educational circles was fully justified. My Lord, with these words I beg to move that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the gentlemen I have already named."

[Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea.] [11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

11-28 A.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea :—"My Lord, as a representative of the Hindu community of Bengal and as one deeply interested in the cause of education in my Province, for I have been nearly forty years a teacher of youth, I desire to extend a cordial welcome to the proposal to establish a University at Dacca. We were not so minded in the early stages of this controversy. There was indeed a time when there was a feeling of opposition to the establishment of this University. My Hon'ble friend, Mr. Sharp, will perhaps remember that when Lord Hardinge visited Calcutta—I think it was soon after the modification of the partition of Bengal, somewhere in August 1912—a deputation waited upon him, led by that prince of Indian benefactors, Sir Rash Behari Ghose, protesting against the establishment of the Dacca University The feeling at that time was that the creation of a rival University might have the effect of interfering with the utility and the expansion of the mother of Bengal Universities, namely, the Calcutta University. That feeling has altogether disappeared. So great is the pressure upon our educational institutions that we find it impossible to provide accommodation for the young men who seek to obtain admission into our colleges and schools. That being so the establishment of the University of Dacca should afford relief, and I hope sensible relief, to the educational institutions connected with the Calcutta University. But though I am prepared to accord this welcome to the University at Dacca, there are certain matters which deserve careful consideration and criticism. My Lord, my friend referred to the note of unanimity which was struck on the occasion of his visit to Dacca in connection with the University. I am sorry to say that I am going to raise a discordant note on this occasion I object to the principle of communal representation which finds a place in the Bill. My Lord, in this matter I invoke your Excellency's high authority. In the Montagu-Chelmsford scheme report communal representation in the Legislative Councils is emphatically condemned. It was accepted because it was a settled fact and there was no escape from it The principle of communal representation not only finds a place in the Bill, but a very broad and enlarged place. There is to be communal representation in the Senate, or Court as it is called, there is to be communal representation in the Syndicate or Executive Council, as it is termed. There is to be further a Muhamandan Advisory Board. Let me say in this connection that the system of communal representation as outlined in this Bill was objected to by two very distinguished Muhammadan representatives. One of them is among the foremost intellectual men of the Muhammadan community, the Hon'ble Dr. A. Suhrawardy, who was a member of the Committee appointed by the Senate of the Calcutta University. He protested against the acceptance of this principle in the University Bill. Furthermore, Nawab Khwaja Mahammad Yusaf, Khan Bahadur, the Chairman of the Dacca Municipality, a member of the Nawab family long connected with the public life of Dacca, also objected to the introduction of the communal principle in the proposed University. Now, my Lord, I must present the other side of the shield. I find that the Committee in connection with the Dacca University recommended the principle. Therefore, that is a strong point in favour of communal representation finding a place in the Bill. What we fear is that it may be extended to the local institutions of Bengal, and furthermore, that it may be allowed later to determine the question of teachers and professors in the Dacca University. That would be disastrous, because it would interefere with the efficiency of the University. My Lord, I think it is desirable to limit this communal representation at any rate by starting electorates of a mixed character, consisting of Muhammadans and non-Muhammadans. It will be perhaps in the recollection of this Council that Lord Morley in the early stages of the Morley-Minto scheme controversy suggested mixed electorates for the purpose of sending representatives to the local Council. My suggestion is only a repetition of the recommendation made by Lord Morley.

"Then, my Lord, there is another point to which I desire to call attention in connection with this Bill. I am bound to say that the personnel of the University is very largely official. Perhaps to some extent this is inevitable in the circumstances and conditions of Dacca, but there was one suggestion made by the Committee which I find has not been incorporated in the Bill, and I desire to draw the attention of the Council to the suggestion that not more than twenty members shall be nominated by associations to be selected by His Excellency the Chancellor. I hope and trust that this recommendation will find a place in the Bill.

"Then, my Lord, I come to the question of Faculties. I find that only three Faculties are mentioned in the Bill, the Faculties of Arts, Science and Law. My Hon'ble friend the Member in charge of the Bill, in his speech referred to three others if I remember aright. He mentioned the Faculty of Medicine, the Faculty of Engineering and the Faculty of Agriculture, and I should add the Faculty of Technology. These four ought to be specifically mentioned in the Bill. I quite recognise the fact that there is a provision in the Bill which will enable the University to add to the number of its Faculties as circumstances may require, but, I think, it would be a distinct advantage to have all these Faculties definitely and specifically mentioned in the Bill itself. This will appeal to the popular imagination, awaken popular interest and will facilitate the flow of funds. However, when the Select Committee comes to consider this matter, I hope that these Faculties will find a place in the Bill.

"Then, my Lord, there is to be an Islamic Department of studies. I welcome that recommendation, but why not a Sanskrit Board of Studies also? That will complete the Oriental side of the University. We have great respect, I am speaking as a representative of my community, we have great respect for Islam the culture of which is at the root of the great religion which commands the homage of so large a portion of mankind. But we have also got Aryan tradition and an Aryan civilisation which have coloured the thoughts of our race for thousands of years. I think there ought to be Boards of Studies both as regards Islamic and Aryan culture. Then there are one or too little matters to which I desire to call attention. The Local Government as explained in the Bill is the Governor in Council. I would add two or three words 'together with his Ministers.' I think that is very necessary in view of the fact that Education is to be one of the Transferred Subjects, Then, my lord, a very large measure of powers is given to the Visitor; the Visitor happens to be the Governor General himself. The powers given to the Visitor are similar to those given to the Governor General by the Benares University Act. The Calcutta University has made a recommendation, namely, that when the Governor General orders an inspection of the University, or in respect of the manner and method of the working of any department, the University should have a representative on the Board of Inspection. I think, my Lord, that is a very sensible suggestion and one that ought to be accepted.

"I do not think I should detain the Council at greater length. The Dacca University will be a model one and I am sure that it will be so if properly started. May I be permitted to express the hope that His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales will be invited to open this University. It will give it a start which will facilitate the flow of funds, commensurate with the dignity that will thus be bestowed upon the University."

The Hon'ble Nawab Saiyed Nawab Ali Chaudhri :— 11-40 A.M.
"My Lord, nearly five months have elapsed since the Dacca University Bill was introduced into the Council at Simla by the Hon'ble Member in charge of Education. At that time, I accorded a cordial and enthusiastic welcome to the Bill; but in the exuberance of my feelings, I could not then discuss its provisions in detail and reserved the same for a future occasion. That occasion has now come when the Bill is going into the Select Committee, and I crave the indulgence of your Excellency to bear with me for a few minutes and permit me to put forward certain definite suggestions which, I hope, will be favourably and sympathetically considered by the Committee in the light of Muslim opinion in Eastern Bengal where the University is going to be established.

[Nawab Saiyed Nawab Ali Chaudhri.] [11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

"My Lord, I do not like at the present moment to go into the details of the Bill which is going to be referred to the Select Committee for discussion of the details, but I would confine myself to broad principles underlying the Bill. It is very gratifying to find, my Lord, that the Government has taken this opportunity of redeeming its pledges to the Mussalmans, but it has to be regretfully admitted that the present Bill does not go far enough to fully satisfy the reasonable aspirations of the people of Eastern Bengal. It is unfortunate that the Government has thought fit to confine the salutary activities of the Dacca University within the narrow limits of the town of Dacca, and thus denied the East Bengal colleges the privileges of closer association with this more modernised University. As the decision of the Government is based upon the recommendation of the Calcutta University Commission, I may be excused if I take a little of Council's time to examine the grounds underlying this recommendation.

"My Lord, we read in Chapter XXXIII of the Report that the 'affiliating nexus would tend to restrict the natural development of Dacca on its own lines; there would be constant conflict between Dacca, the strongest centre, that it should be allowed to progress, and the equally legitimate claims of weaker Mufassil colleges, that they should not be overpressed.' Difficulties, my Lord, these undoubtedly are, but they are not insurmountable. Recognising the possibilities of such difficulties in the sister University of Calcutta too, the Commission recommends the constitution of a Mufassil College Board as the adequate solution of the problem. For, in the words of the Commission, 'we regard it as essential, therefore, that the organisation set up for the Mufassil Colleges should not be of such a kind as to hamper or retard the work of the Teaching University in Calcutta or limit the range and character of the training which it gives, to those which are attainable for Muffassil colleges.' Such an organisation they find in the establishment of a special Board of the Calcutta University, to be known as the Board of Mufassil colleges. Now, my Lord, if the Board remedies the evils of affiliation, why not have such another Board of Mufassil colleges at Dacca? We are told it would be 'unwise' and 'wasteful.' I regret that the learned Commissioners did not consider it necessary to elaborate their arguments and dismissed such an important and perhaps inconvenient question in a short laconic sentence. 'The affiliating nexus' that was possible in Calcutta, practicable at Patna, curiously enough metamorphosed itself into a wasteful weed at Dacca to hamper the development of the University there. The unwisdom, I presume, consists in the 'wastefulness,' but a distracted world is left to guess whether the latter is financial or an uneconomic diversion of energy from the teaching to the administrative field. My Lord, the disadvantages of the financial wastefulness of duplication bear such a small proportion to the enormous benefit of increased efficiency consequent upon the division of unwieldy territorial jurisdiction of the Calcutta Board, that the proposal deserved some consideration from the point of view of the success of the Board itself. Even now the mammoth size of the Calcutta University hampers the satisfactory performance of mere examining function; and saddled with the same duties it is extremely doubtful whether the infant Board at Calcutta, with rapidly increasing number of students to deal with, can cope successfully with the Herculean task. As to the latter supposition, I am unable to subscribe to the view that occasional attendance at the meetings of the Board by the University staff would seriously interfere with the proper discharge of their tutorial duties.

"My Lord, with the sole exception of the authorities of the Calcutta University with whose natural desire to retain and extend the domain of its power and influence I sincerely sympathise; there is little public opposition to the view I advocate. In view of the influential support of the distinguished educationists like Rai Kumudini Kanta Banerjee Bahadur, Dr. Hira Lal Haldar, Professor Hem Chandra Das Gupta, Atul Chandra Sen, Mohamopadhaya Promotha Nath Tarkabhusan in favour of affiliation, 'the grave doubts' of the Commission 'whether affiliation to Dacca would be welcomed by the majority of the colleges' seem rather unwarranted. To a layman it appears that they would rather welcome the connection with the neighbourly Dacca rather than with the distant Calcutta ; for, my Lord, we have as yet no occasion to suspect that the East Bengal colleges would suddenly develop a strong prejudice against Dacca, the intellectual, if unfortunately, not the political, capital of the eastern districts. Besides, the unanimity of the Moslem opinion, my Lord, demanded a more sympathetic consideration than has actually been vouchsafed to it ; for it is not perhaps inopportune to recall once again that it is the Moslem needs and requirements that the University was primarily intended to cater for. Quite apart from the Moslem point of view, I may be permitted, my Lord, to mention the vigorous arguments of the Hon'ble Mr. J. B. Cunningham, of late the Director of Public Instruction, Assam, in support of affiliation. He observes 'if the new University is to be afforded the fullest opportunity of serving the requirements of Assam, and Eastern Bengal and the end of its creation, as they are stated in Hon'ble Mr. Sharp's letter No. 811, dated the 4th April 1912, it should assume the form of a teaching and federal instead of a purely teaching University. To grant it territorial jurisdiction would be to secure to it the wisest charter of liberty and to afford to the University education in India, the largest hope of advancement and reform. To restrict the University to the town of Dacca and to leave the Assam and Mufassil colleges unattached, will be to subject the growth and development of the new venture to all the adverse influence of competition. It would only be secure of those students least necessary to it—the students resident in Dacca For others, it will have to come to the market. At every point, it will have to vie with Calcutta for students' favour ; to offer advantages which are superior or at least equal in the eyes of the public to those offered by the colleges of the older University. And in this competition the advantages for the sake of which the University is brought into existence will either weigh little or weigh in the opposing scale' I am glad to note, my Lord, that the 'Herald' the only English daily in Eastern Bengal also shares my views which further has the distinguished support of Sir Nicholas Beatson-Bell, the Chief Commissioner of Assam. In forwarding the opinions of the Assam administration on the Dacca University Bill, the Hon'ble Mr. Edwards refers to the opinion of the Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner thus—'His chief regret, a regret which he already expressed as Commissioner of Dacca, is that the outlying colleges are primarily debarred from the privileges of the new University. The Chief Commissioner trusts that the time is not far distant when the colleges in Assam will cease to be affiliated to any Corporation outside the Province, but if they are to be so affiliated, he would much prefer that they should be affiliated to the Dacca University, rather than to the University of Calcutta, old or new.' Backed up by the unanimous Muslim opinion and the opinions of the eminent Hindu educationists on the one hand, and those of the high and the responsible officers of the Government on the other, I feel, my Lord, I am voicing the opinion of Eastern Bengal, when I do most respectfully urge upon the Government the necessity of making some provision in the Bill about bringing the East Bengal colleges under the influence of the University of Dacca.

"Leaving aside the geographical, there have further been academic limitations that take much away from the utility of the University itself. In the present economic condition of the country, the need for vocational training cannot be too strongly emphasised, but provisions for such training is almost conspicuous by their absence in the proposed constitution of the Dacca University. At a time, my Lord, when the industrial resources of the country are crying for pioneers in the industrial field ; when agriculture is still carried on under primitive conditions ; when the demand for medical men far exceeds the present inadequate supply, a miniature University at Dacca, concerned only with literary instructions, scarcely meets the needs of the situation. The Calcutta University Commission has recommended the association of the agricultural study with the University, and one is naturally led to the conclusion that the most convenient place for such an experiment is Dacca, where an Agricultural farm exists and not a crowded city of over ten millions population. Their preferential recommendation in favour of the Calcutta University is all the more surprising in view of the decidedly superior facility that exists in Dacca for Agricultural education. Though Industrial Bengal centres mainly in and around Calcutta, East Bengal is primarily an agricultural province. The Agriculture Department of the Government of Bengal has been transferred from Calcutta to Dacca, with a view to securing a more intimate touch with the local agricultural problems. Besides, the establishment of an Institute of Agriculture is already under contemplation and an Agricultural Faculty, my Lord, would be a fitting concomitant to the allied institutions designed for the advancement of scientific agriculture in the country.

"The need for medical education, my Lord, is as great as if not even greater than the Agricultural training. The two colleges in the Presidency are quite inadequate to the requirements of the Province. The very large number of students that are refused admission every year for want of accommodation in the Medical colleges, is a clear index to the great demand for higher Medical studies. In Dacca, we have an efficient Medical school which can be developed into the college to serve, to some extent, the needs of Eastern Bengal. Even so far back as 1912, the Dacca University Committee recommended the institution of the Faculties of Medicine, Agriculture and Engineering in the proposed Dacca University. We have no evidence to conclude that circumstances have so materially changed that the raison d'etre of such Faculties no longer exists. On the contrary, I firmly believe that the efflux of time has added to, rather than diminished from, the gravity of those needs and requirements which the Faculties were meant to satisfy. The Sadler Commission have emphasised the need for higher Medical studies in Bengal, where 181,000 people are served by one Medical graduate only and have welcomed the establishment of a Medical college at Dacca 'in the interest of the University of Dacca and in the development of Medical work in the Presidency.' They further remark 'it is good for a University to have represented in it a variety of interests, and a Medical Faculty would strengthen it in many ways.' In spite of the recommendation of the Calcutta University Commission the provision for Medical Faculty has not been made in the Bill. But, my Lord, there is yet time to rectify. I earnestly hope that the Government would earn the gratitude of Eastern Bengal by a greater responsiveness to their unanimous demand.

'At one time it was contemplated to transfer the Civil Engineering section of the Engineering college at Shibpore to Dacca. Such a transfer, my Lord, would strengthen the teaching of Mechanical Engineering at Shibpore, and would help the institution at Dacca of the Faculty of Engineering which has been recommended by the Dacca University Committee and approved by the Government of Lord Carmichael.

"My Lord, I may be permitted to take a few minutes of the Council's time to refer to the question of separate Moslem representation which is most vital to the interests of the Mussalmans of Eastern Bengal. The exclusion of the provisions for separate Mohamedan representation from the main body of the Act, is causing the Mahomedans much anxiety and alarm. The constitution of the different bodies of the University has, of course, been provided for in the Statutes, and it may very pertinently be asked, why should an exception be made in the case of Mahomedan representation? But, my Lord, the case of Mahomedan representation stands on a footing entirely different from, and having nothing in common with, the other categories of interests sought to be represented in the Court. Leaving aside those estimable gentlemen whose high sense of public spirit and patriotism would sooner tolerate the loss of the University rather than allow the Mahomedans to co-operate in its administration, the liberal and impartial element in the educated Hindu community is alert to the necessity of allowing the Mahomedans a voice in the direction and control of the University education. But there is still, I know, considerable opposition. The recognition of the Muslim claim to a separate electorate is a new departure, a novel feature of the present Bill. To the Mohamedans, it has been a hard-earned recognition, long withheld from them, owing to the persistent opposition of powerful interests. The justice of the Mohamedan cause has, after all, received its due recognition from the impartial British educationists of the Calcutta University Commission and the present Bill attempts, to some extent, though not entirely, to remedy the evils that have been greatly responsible for the backwardness of the Mohamedans in the higher education. But, my Lord, even this meagre recognition has been a tocsin of alarm to the vested interests and is being resented as an encroachment upon their undisputed supremacy in the fields of University education. My Lord, in the whole course of history the monopolists have never been known to surrender their privileges without a fight, and in spite of the unanimous recommendations of the Sadler Commission, the opposition to the Moslem electorate has not entirely died down Prejudice and predilections, my Lord, die hard and the Mohamedans are naturally anxious that their position in the University should be clearly and precisely defined in the Act itself. An Act for the establishment of a University meant as an earnest of Government's effort towards the educational salvation of the Mussalmans, but with no specific provision for the Mohamedan representation seems to me, my Lord, like the Drama of Hamlet with the Prince of Denmark entirely left out. It may be contended that the Statute guarantees Mohamedan representation, but who will guarantee the stability of the Statutes themselves? Depending for their existence on the sweet will of the Court, the Statutes offer but an infirm and insecure foundation to stand upon The Mohamedans are alarmed at the prospect of their legitimate rights being thus made the subject of the caprice of a none-too-sympathetic Court and are anxious that this apprehended forfeiture be securely guarded against by the inclusion of the sections in the Act itself. Nor can the Mussalmans put too much reliance on the safety valve of the Chancellor's prerogative; for the Chancellor's veto is an exceptional power, which is meant to be very sparingly exercised. Its exercise, even in the present days of Governmental Paternalism is fiercely resented and in the coming days of popular control of education, even the judicious use in defiance of the majority, I am afraid, is sure to be misrepresented as an act of high-handed and needless interference. To avoid the risk of exposing the Chancellor to these unnecessary attacks and to allay the Muslim apprehension, I would suggest the transfer of the provisions from the Statute to the Bill.

"Closely related to Moslem representation is the question of Islamic Studies which the Mussalmans all over India were given to understand would be a special feature of the Dacca University. The Dacca University Committee recommended the institution of a special Faculty of Islamic Studies having equal status to the other Faculties of the University. The Calcutta University Commission, for the academic reasons that the holders of the degree in Islamic Studies should get the degree in Arts, i.e., B. A. instead of B. I., included the Islamic Studies as a department of the Faculty of Arts. The provision for Islamic Studies is mentioned neither in the Bill nor in the Statutes, and there are apprehensions in the mind of the Mohamedans that it may be entirely dispensed with. To allay the apprehensions of the Mussalmans and to safeguard the interests of Islamic Studies, I am strongly of opinion that the Department of Islamic Studies should be mentioned in section 23 of the Bill or elsewhere, and a few details may be described in the Statutes. It is a question of so vital importance to Muslim education in Bengal that it should not altogether be allowed to be dealt with by regulations and ordinances only which can be altered or amended without reference to Government. I do not like, my Lord, to go into the details of the subject; but one point in which Muslim feeling is very strong is, that there should be no differentiation in name and privileges between the students of Islamic Studies and students reading other subjects belonging to the Faculty of Arts.

" The Bill has provided that no institution lying within a radius of five miles of the Convocation Hall should be affiliated to any other University. This limit, my Lord, is too narrow. It is intelligible that all the institutions forming the integral part of the Dacca University, with the possible exception of the Agricultural Farm, will lie much nearer than the proposed maximum limit; but, my Lord, we have to consider not only the convenience of the lecturers and the students, but we have also to consider the fact that a fair start should be given to the Dacca University and unfair competition should be avoided. The Calcutta University Commission have already pronounced that the standard of examination in the Calcutta University is very low, and it will be unfair to the Dacca University if colleges, awarding cheap degrees, are established next door. It will have the additional disadvantage of a possibility of misunderstanding between the Universities of Dacca and Calcutta. I, therefore, suggest that the limit of five miles for non-affiliation to the Calcutta University should be extended to fifteen miles in order to exclude the possibility of creation of cheap colleges at Narayanganj or Tangi. Such provision which Nawab Sir Syed Shams-ul-Huda has also advocated is absolutely necessary in view of the opinions now prevalent about the Dacca University among the leaders of the Calcutta University.

"My Lord, sect on 31 of the Bill lays down that the Ordinances shall be made by the Executive Council. I am not sure if, like the Statutes, this refers only to subsequent addition, alteration or modification, or if the authorisation includes the power of framing the first Oruinances as well. If the latter is also contemplated, I am afraid it is open to serious objection. The duties of the Executive Council to set the whole machinery in motion in the beginning would be tremendous in all conscience, and to impose upon them the additional obligation of framing the Ordinances also is surely not the best way of expediting the business. It will only pave the way for procrastination and delay. I am not convinced, my Lord, of the wisdom of repeating a procedure that proved a failure during the re-constitution of the Calcutta University in 1904, when exasperated by the dilatoriness of the Senators to whom the work was first entrusted, the Government of India was compelled to appoint a small Committee to draw up the new rules and regulations of the University. The experience of the past warns us against the delegation of such duties to an unweildy or overworked body, and to prevent the chequered history of the Calcutta regulations to repeat itself at Dacca, I would suggest that the Government of India be pleased to appoint a small Committee of eminent educationists to draw up the Ordinances of the University of Dacca The inclusion of outside experience would secure to the proceedings of the Committee a weight and authority which can hardly attach to the deliberations even of all the talents locally available at Dacca.

"Before I conclude, my Lord, one more point I want to urge—the one to which I attach the greatest importance—I mean the appointment of Mohamedans to the University Staff. I indulge in no exaggeration, my Lord, when I say that the University will entirely fail in its purpose, so far as the advancement of Mohamedans in the higher education is concerned unless there is a number of Mohamedan teachers on the staff, not a mere sprinkling of them, my Lord, but a staff well saturated with Moslem element. The great, vital and imperative need of Mohamedan professors did not escape the notice of so shrewd a body of observers as the Calcutta University Commission, and they make special mention of it in the Report itself. They observe that the Committee of Selection, as a rule, should 'bear in mind the necessity of appointing an adequate number of Mussalmans to the teaching Staff' and, should the general opinion demand it,' the final appointment should be left to the Chancellor of the University, so as to leave open the possibility of representations if either the Moslem or Hindu community were likely to suffer owing to a disproportionately small number of appointments of members of that community.' My Lord, the Mussalmans realise that all their hopes, all their aspirations, will prove a chimera and illusion without the inspiring presence of a body of Muslim professors to stimulate, to encourage, to guide the Muslim youths in their preparation for the battle of life, to work with the zeal, earnestness and enthusiasm of a missionary for the uplift of their co-religionists from the depth of darkness and ignorance, to which years of apathy and neglect of education have reduced them. Their very presence, I repeat, my Lord, will be electrifying—the living examples of attainable ideals for the youths of our community to emulate and follow.

"My Lord, the cry has often been raised, and, I am sure, will be raised again, that competent Mohamedans are not available. That plea, my Lord, I refuse to admit. From my place here in the Council, my Lord, I take this opportunity of contradicting once again the baseless aspersion cast on our community and assure Government that offer of generous prospects and emoluments is sure to attract the deserving and desirable Mohamedan candidates from different parts of India, and, I hope, financial considerations will not stand in the way of securing the services of competent Mohamedan teachers for the University.

"My Lord, with these observations I beg to support the motion."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda :—"My Lord, regard being had to the circumstances connected with the origination of the Dacca University scheme, the recognition by the Government of their duty to satisfy the natural and the very legitimate desire of the Moslem community of Eastern Bengal, to stimulate their educational activities and the relations on which that community will necessarily stand towards this University when it is established, I submit, my Lord, that the University ought to possess some distinctive Islamic characteristics, some special features which will at once mark out the degrees and diplomas granted by the University as something apart from the degrees of the existing Universities. 12-9 P.M.

"The Bill in a way recognises this and seeks to give expression to it in the composition of the governing bodies of the University which are to be on a racial basis. My Lord, I shall have something to say about this shortly, but at the present moment I would like to call attention to, to emphasize, the fact that that is not a characteristic feature which in my opinion ought to be conferred on this University. I would like to have a special feature which will at once point to the character and the quality of the training which the University will impart, to the culture which will be acquired therein and to the academic atmosphere, if I may say so, which will be created in the University. When you meet an alumnus, a graduate or a scholar of a University, you do not pause to inquire how the governing bodies, the Senate or the Syndicate or whatever other names they may be called by in this Bill, are constituted. But you look to the studies, to the various branches of learning which the University specialises in; you look to the reputation for scholarship of its professors, you look to the academic environments. These are the features, my Lord, which ought to be kept in mind in having a University created with special reference to the desires of the Moslem community. My Lord, in this view I would recommend that the Faculties ought to comprise new Faculties, Faculties which do not find a place elsewhere in India; and among them I would have a Faculty of Islamic studies in the forefront, or better still a Faculty of Oriental studies to make it more comprehensive. You cannot say that there is no material at hand. There is in Dacca a Madrassah of a very high order, and there are Madrassahs also in the mufassal in Chittagong and elsewhere; and although the Bill does not seem to recognise it, there is a Madrassah of a very superior grade in my district, Sylhet, which has lately been established by my Government. You have in Eastern Bengal a very large and cultured Moslem community which will be able to supply a constant stream of students for this Faculty. I would, therefore, suggest that among the Faculties to be created, there ought to be constituted a Faculty of Oriental Studies. We may have also a Faculty of Sanskrit studies, not as a counterpoise to the one of Islamic studies, but because you have here also ready-made very good material. Bikrampore is a very ancient and very well-known seat of Sanskrit learning; and its Pandits are welcomed and received everywhere for their deep scholarship. You have in the town of Dacca itself a unique Sanskrit institution, the Saraswat Samaj, which has long received recognition at the hands of Government. I think, my Lord, therefore, that there ought to be a Faculty of Oriental Studies, not merely departments of the Faculty of Arts. We must of course have the usual Faculties of Arts and Science, but I am not quite sure about Law. I am prepared to relegate Law to make room for Medicine, if necessary. It is very important, my Lord, that a medical college should be started from the very beginning. It is a matter of greater necessity to have a medical college than to have a college of law. My Lord, it was recognised in the report of the Dacca

[11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda.]

University Committee which my Hon'ble Friend Mr. Shafi referred to when introducing the Bill; it is also recommended in the report of the Calcutta University Commission. If you say that you cannot have a full-fledged Medical College at Dacca without in part depending on Calcutta, I may point out that as regards law too you have to depend on Calcutta. You find in clause 48 of the Bill where it is provided as follows :—

'Provided further that it shall be lawful for the Faculty of Law to assemble at Calcutta, whenever, in the opinion of the Vice-Chancellor, such a course is necessary.'

"Therefore, my Lord, I think you ought to provide for a medical college from the very beginning In this connection I shall, with the indulgence of the Council, read out a portion from the minority report of the Calcutta University Commission :—

'The Government intend the University of Dacca to rank among the more influential modern Universities; but it can hardly expect to attain that rank unless it be entrusted with a Medical Faculty and College. In view of the need for more medical men in India we recommend that, as early as possible, the medical school at Dacca should become a medical college.'

My Lord, we have now at present two medical colleges in Calcutta, including the one which was recently started by non-official agency with a subsidy from Government. The annual output of these two would be a mere drop in the ocean, when you consider that there is no medical college not only in the rest of the Presidency of Bengal, but in Assam, in the Central Provinces and in Bihar and Orissa. My Lord, the utter helplessness of the people as regards medical aid was painfully demonstrated during the late influenza epidemic, and I therefore respectfully urge that a Faculty of Medicine and a medical college should be started from the very beginning.

"My Hon'ble friend the Nawab Ali Chaudhri has referred to the need of a Faculty of Engineering. I think it is a matter for surprise that although some-time ago in the course of a debate on a resolution to transfer the Civil Engineering College from Sibpur to Dacca, it was accepted by Government that this college would be removed to Dacca effect has not been given thereto. Even if you give us these Faculties of Medicine, and Engineering in addition to the Faculties provided for in the Bill, you do not give us anything new. These are the usual Faculties to be found in existing universities. But, my Lord, we must have something more. I urge the establishment of a Faculty of Agriculture and a Faculty of Commerce and Technology. The Calcutta University is preparing to start a Faculty of Agriculture and a Faculty of Commerce. I say, my Lord, it is surprising that this has not been accepted so far as the Dacca University is concernead As regards agriculture, at any rate, Dacca is in a better position than Calcutta. We have a nucleus for that in Dacca; there is a fine Government demonstration farm near Dacca, and what is more the Government Department of Agriculture is now located at Dacca.

"My Lord, if Calcutta can have a Faculty of Agriculture it is reasonable that Dacca should have one. I submit that these Faculties ought to be provided for and not merely referred to in clause 23 as being left to be created hereafter.

"Now, my Lord, coming to the difficult and intricate question of communal representation—well, when I say difficult I mean it is only difficult with reference to Dacca. There is no manner of doubt that such a thing as communal representation ought not to find a place in a seat of learning, one whose motto should be the advancement of learning. This I said when speaking on the motion to introduce the Bill. I adhere to that view generally speaking, but, my Lord, as regards Dacca, there are particular circumstances which require consideration. There is an intense feeling amongst the Moslem community which was referred to by the Hon'ble Nawab Sahib. We have that provided for in the report of the Calcutta University Commission, and I do not think it would be right to brush it aside simply because we consider it unsound in principle. Well, as regards this matter we feel greatly indebted to your Excellency and Mr. Montagu for having condemned this principle in the joint report on Reforms. But as regards the Dacca University we have to give special consideration to this matter in view of the fact that the Moslem community desire it. The conclusion which I have come to after giving the matter the most careful and anxious consideration is that so long as that community demand it we must allow it, I say so deliberately. I have every hope that the cultured leaders of that community will in course of time and with the progress of education come to realise that it is detrimental to their interests and that it is unsound. Having given the matter most serious consideration I find myself in agreement substantially with the recommendations of the Calcutta University, which I will quote and which runs as follows :—

'We are not in favour of the principle of communal representation in connection with academic bodies. Having regard however to the special circumstances connected with the inception of the Dacca University scheme, we agree to the adoption of this principle in a modified form as a temporary measure. Further, the question of communal representation in the Dacca University should be re-considered at the end of ten years in view of the general advancement of education amongst all sections of the country. The temporary provisions for communal representation should lapse at the end of that period.

We recommend combined electorates for the election of Muslim members to the Court and the Executive Councils.'

"I commend this suggestion to the Government of India more especially in view of the fact that this recommendation has been supported, among others, by Mr. Turner, Principal of the Dacca College, Mr. Barrow, Principal of the Presidency College and the Reverend Mr Urquhart, a distinguished educationalist of Calcutta. I may say that these gentlemen were members of the Sub-Committee appointed by the Calcutta University, and that they are impartial and independent men. What is more it has the support of the Hon'ble Dr A. Suhrawardy to whom reference has been made by the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea. My Lord, I do not find his note of dissent from the majority report in the papers which have been circulated. I shall read an extract from what he says :—'It would be a mistake to make communal interests the sole determining factor in purely academic appointments, specially those of a high grade, but such considerations may well be allowed to have weight in the matter of appointments in subjects connected with the advancement of Islamic studies and learning, subordinate teaching appointments and appointments of an administrative character. In the matter of elections where seats are reserved for Muslims, I am in favour of at least a few seats being filled up by election by a mixed electorate. Finally, I wish to emphasize the standpoint that a community which is constrained to seek protection afforded by communal representation is bound in self-interest to make strenuous efforts so to re-organize itself as to be able sooner or later to dispense with such assistance. On this ground I agree to the proposal that the temporary provisions for communal representation should lapse at the end of ten years unless re-enacted at the end of that period.'

"My Lord, it is also a fact that a leader of the Moslem community, Nawab Mahomed Yusuf, the Chairman of the Dacca Municipality, who has been mentioned by the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea, supports this principle partially. He says that the election of Moslem members to the Court should be by mixed electorates. I do not understand why the Moslem community should object to these provisions.

"Then, my Lord, the next feature of the Bill to which I would call attention is that it is highly officialised. Out of 115 members, it will be found that only 35 are to be elected and the rest are nominated. Contrast with this the composition of the Senate under the Patna University Act which was passed two years ago. Out of a maximum of 73, 50 are elected. . . .

The Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha :—"Out of 95, 65 are elected?"

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda :—"Thanks for the correction. It is still better. We are going back. This is a matter that requires serious consideration. You find in the composition of the non-elected element a large number of officials. On this point I cannot do better than read to the Council the opinion of the Director of Public Instruction, Bombay, expressed in better language than I can employ:—

'In the discussion in Council on the first reading of the Bill, objection was taken to the number of officials who in one way or the other are included on the main organic bodies of the University. According to a statement made by the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi in his introduction of the Bill the University is to be an autonomous and not a Government institution, and it is to have control over its own staff. It is also to have large and independent power in regard to finance and regulation. These things being so, I venture to submit that it is undesirable indirectly to reduce the autonomous and non-official character of the University's organisation by overloading its organic bodies with a number of officials appointed ex-officio. If the University is really to express and to carry out after due consideration public feeling, it seems rather inconsistent with this object to insist upon a large representation of officials, more particularly so if official members are to be required merely to support Government's views on the various matters that come before them and are to be prohibited from taking any independent line of their own. It does not follow that officials should not be appointed or elected, but it would seem preferable that they should sit on the University bodies concerned rather in virtue of their personal, educational or scientific or other special qualifications than ex-officio. Further, I am disposed to think that, in view of the facts that the Visitor is to be the Viceroy, the Chancellor is to be the Governor of Bengal and the Treasurer is to be appointed by the Governor of Bengal, it would be preferable that the Vice-Chancellor should be elected by the University from among its own members rather than appointed by the Chancellor. It also seems to me that there is a danger of the Court becoming a somewhat unwieldy body and that the proportion of elected members is unduly restricted especially when it is remembered that in other Universities the demand is for a much higher proportion of such members.'

"My Lord, with these views I am in entire agreement. I trust that this matter will receive consideration at the hands of the Select Committee.

"There is one other matter, my Lord, to which I desire to call the attention of Council, and that is regarding the position of my Province of Assam as regards this University. This Bill no doubt recognises that we have some claim and the Chief Commissioner of Assam has been given the right to nominate certain Fellows and the Director of Public Instruction is also to be a member of the Court ex-officio. But it will be found that the Calcutta University has taken exception to that. My Lord, I ought to mention this fact. Hon'ble Members may find some difficulty in understanding why the Government of another Province should have anything to do in connection with the Dacca University. Assam was formerly a part of Eastern Bengal when the first conception of this University was made, and if Assam was not cut off from East Bengal, it would automatically take its share in the University, and we are geographically and in other respects closely connected with Dacca, and I hope the claims of my Province will receive due consideration at the hands of the Select Committee. With these remarks, my Lord, I support the motion."

12-33 P.M. The Hon'ble Major Malik Sir Umar Hayat Khan:— "My Lord, when I came here I thought there was not going to be so much discussion because all the arguments that we have so far heard could have been urged in the Select Committee and threshed out there. But now as the discussion has been started, I feel that the Punjab Mohammedans should also take part in it. I do know that Mohammedans are backward, and I think if we have any such special Universities it will help us greatly, and we will be able to impart proper religious education, because we are now finding a great deal of difficulty as the boys do not understand their religion and they do not think of religion at all. We are also frightened that Bolshevism may come in, and I think that if people only know their religion they will not catch the contagion, so I hope that our Hindu brothers who have shown us that they are our great friends will not object if we have something of this sort."

[11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer; Mr. Srinivasa Sastri.]

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer: — "My Lord, I had no desire to say anything to-day on the proposal placed before the Council by the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi, but after hearing my Hon'ble friend Mr. Surendranath Banerjea, I consider it my duty to my constituency to sound a note of warning to the attempt which certain of our friends are making to deprive us of certain hard-earned rights, the most valuable of which is the communal representation. Government have recognised it in the case of Legislative Councils and local self-government, but it is much more imperative in the case of Universities which prepare the groundwork for national progress. My Lord, I fully associate myself with the weighty words of my Hon'ble friend Nawab Ali Chaudhri and make an earnest appeal to our Hindu friends not to interfere with our cherished rights of communal representation in the University." 12-35 P.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri: — "Your Excellency, some of us who were on this Council two years ago may remember an animated debate when the Hon'ble Nawab Ali Chaudhri brought forward a Resolution about the Dacca University. At that time we witnessed a most interesting duel between him and the Hon'ble Mr. Basu in which, as far as I could recall the event, there was neither victor nor vanquished as has happened in many other generous encounters before. I had hoped that the animosity then slightly exhibited would have died out. As far as I could see at present, the movement for the Dacca University has received unanimous support from all sections of the community, and I heard with special pleasure the testimony borne to that fact by the Hon'ble the present Member for Education. It is, therefore, somewhat disappointing to find that the Hon'ble Nawab Ali Chaudhri still makes references to the enemies of the Mohammedan movement, references which find some emphatic echo in a representation made by the Mohammedans of East Bengal to this Council. I am not able to see in the published papers any justification for the continuance of this complaint. The one shadow of justification is the attitude assumed by the Calcutta University towards one of the cardinal features of the scheme, namely, that of communal representation. Now, my Lord, those that refer to this principle must always do so with a very heavy sense of responsibility, and I wish on this occasion to allude to this principle and make clear what, in my judgment, it carries with it. I am afraid too many are under the impression that this is a good and sound principle per se, that it would be well to welcome it on all occasions and in all matters, whereas the fact is that we all admit it into constitutions as a necessary evil, as a deduction from the principle of efficiency and national spirit which it is expedient in the present condition of Indian society to make. An undue extension of this principle, a desire to perpetuate it and to safeguard it against future inroads, these seem to me to be entirely wrong as an attitude to take up. We ought to recognise, whenever we admit this principle, that it is a lamentable necessity that compels us to do so, and we ought to look forward to the time when we should discard it in the interests of the general community. If possible, we should in admitting it make such provision for such discarding in course of time. I am very sorry, more sorry than I can tell, that in the constitution of the present Legislative Councils, these two necessary safeguards were at first ignored. We have admitted this principle without qualification. It has had the evil effects which might have been anticipated. It has led the favoured community from time to time to demand its extension in aggravated forms into departments where it is not only illegitimate, but bound to be pernicious in its results. We have had demands made that it should be introduced into the constitution of local boards and municipalities. We have had demands, emphasized to-day all too strongly, that it should be admitted as a righteous, as a sound principle even in education. My Lord, I know of no department of human activity which should be kept sacred from the infection of this principle as education. I will admit it in the case of the Dacca University as an inevitable necessity, and I would ask the Council whether the limitations recommended by the Calcutta 12-36

[Mr. Srinivasa Sastri.] [11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

University are not reasonable in themselves. They submit to the necessity; they would admit the principle of communal representation, but they ask that the necessity should be examined at the end of ten years; if it is considered still a matter of expediency, continue it. If, however, as we all hope and trust, the Mohamedan community have shaken off their diffidence in the meantime, this principle should be abandoned altogether in the future composition of the Dacca University. I think, your Excellency, that that is a consideration which should be borne in mind. Besides, they recommend that if communal representatives should be chosen, it is best that they should be chosen by mixed electorates and not merely by separate electorates. That, again, is a principle worthy of consideration. Your Excellency, I feel rather strongly on this subject. I feel that much mischief has been done, which if we had only observed these two safeguards in the beginning, would have been avoided, and I cannot but recall with sadness to this Council a Resolution passed by a non-Brahmin federation in Madras some years ago in solemn meeting assembled, to the effect that the principle of communal separation should be carried to this extent, that educational establishments, all colleges and schools of every grade, from the collegiate to the elementary, should be communal: separate schools for Brahmins, separate schools for non-Brahmins, each community to be taught by teachers of their own community. That is the kind of thing to which this leads, and want of timely precautions is likely to land us in similar difficulties. I would, therefore, solemnly entreat the Members of the Government of India and their official advisers, you who know the difference between the national and the sectarian spirit, you who know how to work a constitution and will realise how the sectarian spirit, if allowed to roam unchecked, will choke off and kill the national spirit, you ought to help us in putting these safeguards on an admittedly evil principle which is to be introduced into the education of this country.

" Now there is a second point of capital importance to be borne in mind in considering the Dacca University scheme. That is the principle of what is called academic freedom, the liberty of the University authorities to arrange their own affairs, to establish curricula, to promote students from stage to stage and in fact govern the internal affairs of the University according to their own convictions. This principle is recognised everywhere. In India, however, its recognition has been very slow and fitful. We seemed in the case of the Patna University to have shaken off this principle of official subordination of the University to the Government of the Province; we seemed for the moment to have shaken it off. But I am afraid the Dacca University scheme resiles altogether from that advanced position and puts us backward to a situation which I can only recall as having existed before the Universities Act of 1904. We are now face to face with a constitution in which officials and official nominees predominate in every agency of administration of this University. Look at the Court, look at the Executive Council. The Court particularly, which is the supreme authority of the University, is entirely dominated by officials and official nominees. Now that seems to me to be entirely inimical to the principle of academic freedom. No University, your Excellency, can function on the highest plane, yielding benefits of the first quality unless the professors there have perfect freedom to regulate internal affairs as to them may seem fit and proper. It is political considerations, which too often have prevailed in India, which have induced the Governments of the Provinces to control University functions Now these political considerations must be of diminishing importance in this country in educational matters, and, I think, the time has arrived when in instituting a unitary and teaching University for the first time—Patna was only mixed and the Hindu University was sectional—on a national scale, we should recognize also what is the very life-breath of academic independence, namely, the right of the University authorities to regulate their own affairs as they please. You will find not only in the personnel of the Committees, but in the distribution of powers also, the balance always reposes in the officials. The Visitor as supervising authority is empowered to inspect and to have anything which he considers wrong examined. That in itself is a distinct and, if I may say so, a very useful provision, calculated if anything goes seriously wrong, speedily to set it right. But not content with that, we proceed to invest the Chancellor, who is the Governor of the Province, with enormous powers at every stage The Chancellor appoints the Vice-Chancellor, and the Vice-Chancellor is the very pivot of the whole scheme, having in his hands the substance of every conceivable power.

"Putting all this aside, I wish to ask you to examine the way in which professors are to be appointed, professors on whose quality, on whose independence, on whose spirit of free research, the whole efficiency of a University should depend. Now, how are the professors to be appointed? A glance at clause 18 of the Bill ought to fill any one with serious misgivings. Now, what does clause 18 say? It says 'that not less than a third of the professors should be appointed in England by means of a special board to be constituted.' Now I am one of those who believe most sincerely, your Excellency, that Indian education stands to gain at every turn by the infusion of men of first-rate talent from all parts of the world, and not merely from the United Kingdom. We want experts of quality from every country which can afford to spare them for us. We welcome them; we will pay them any terms that may appear proper, but we do not want to be tied down. It is very wrong to tie us down to any particular source of recruitment and to say that a certain proportion shall be recruited in such and such a manner. But that is not all. There is worse and worse to follow in that clause. We are told that to this Advisory Board there should be appointed five people, only two by the Academic Council in Dacca and the remaining three by the Secretary of State. Then, when the Board so constituted, gives advice as to the appointment of professors, that advice is not to be treated as advice usually is, that is taken or rejected as the appointing authority may please, but in cases where the University authority does not accept it, the matter has got to be referred to the Chancellor who may finally throw the decision on the Secretary of State. That means that the Secretary of State and the Chancellor have the deciding voice as to the choice of all the professors under this clause. I think, your Excellency, it is a principle of exceeding danger. I hope the Select Committee will watch very minutely the wording of this clause when they come to examine it and put it on a proper basis. The only basis on which it can rest is that the Unversity authorities must have freedom to choose their professors from all parts of the world and on any terms that they may choose to offer. It will not do to tie them down.

"A word, your Excellency, may not be out of place in connection with the appointment of professors, for I attach the greatest weight to this. Some time ago I remember the late Mr. Gokhale complained in this very Council of the recent deterioration in the quality of the professors imported from the West; but Mr. Gokhale might be a prejudiced judge. On the same occasion—it was many years ago and I doubt whether any of the officials were here at the time, I was not but I read a report of the proceedings at the time -a gentleman who had held the office of principal of one of the Government Colleges in Madras and subsequently rose to the high office of Director of Public Instruction for a time, speaking officially in this very Council during the Viceroyalty of Lord Curzon, gave expression to the view that for some years past the choice of the Secretary of State to professorships in India had tended to deteriorate the quality of professors. Now I know as a matter of fact that complaint is very general all over India. You will find it deplored by Indians that when in this Council we determine salaries and tenures and conditions, we do so on the footing that the men imported will be the very first men available and that they will be of the soundest quality, men to whom any terms might be offered and not be excessive. In the event, however, it turns out that we get men not of that quality but of much inferior quality. But we pay them exceedingly high salaries and we make them a burden to the poor Indian taxpayer who does not get a sufficient return for the money which he spends on these costly professorships statutorily provided for in Acts of Incorporation. The matter does require the attention of the Select Committee on the Bill, and I strongly commend this particular aspect of the Bill to their attention."

12-57 P.M. The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"My Lord, if I rise to speak on this Bill it is because the community to which I belong, the Andhra community, is particularly interested in a correct solution of the University problem as enunciated in this University Bill. Our condition in Madras is almost analogous to the condition of the Muhammadans in East Bengal. Our population under the Madras University is about 22 or 23 millions, exactly the same as that of the Muhammadans in East Bengal. Our position in the Senate, our position in the Syndicate, is almost exactly the same as that of the Muhammadans in the Calcutta University, almost negligible. Our students find great difficulty in obtaining admission to the Madras Colleges just as the Muhammadan students found difficulty, I suppose, in finding admission to some of the Calcutta Colleges. Therefore, my Lord, we have been pressing for a University for the Andhra districts, and we were referred by the Director of Public Instruction to this Imperial Council for a determination of that problem. I am only mentioning that for the purpose of showing that if I rise to speak, it is because I am particularly interested in the matter and my Moslem friends will forgive me if I differ from them on some fundamental questions, because although I feel that our sectional interests may be temporarily improved by the acceptance of the principle involved in this Bill, still, I think, I should be guilty of dishonesty to myself and to the community if I for one moment give my adherence to principles which would be disastrous to the nationhood of India in the future.

"My Lord, before I proceed to that question, may I be permitted to say one thing with regard to the composition of the Select Committee, and I hope before we rise this afternoon the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi will tell us exactly the principle governing the constitution of this Select Committee. I mention that for this reason, my Lord, that, under the Reform Scheme, University legislation in future is to be with the Government of India, and non-official members from all over India would be responsible for any scheme which may pass through this Council. I know that this particular Bill is one which appertains to Bengal and East Bengal, and it is therefore properly competent for Bengali members to decide in the Select Committee as to what suits them best. Still, when the Bill is passed into law, it will go out with the authority of the whole Council, and we shall have similar difficulties facing us whenever a new University scheme is placed before us.

"That is the reason why, my Lord, I hope that the Hon'ble Member will see his way to put some sound educationists from other Provinces on this Select Committee. I speak with the greater freedom because although I was connected with education many years ago, I cannot profess to be an educationist and consequently I am disinterested in making this suggestion. My Lord, I may submit that it is absolutely necessary that this Bill should be examined from the standpoint of educationists all over India in order that we may have right principles enacted in the Bill, and I allude for one minute to this fact because the Director of Public Instruction from Madras in his note distinctly says that under clause 36 it is possible for the Dacca University not to recognise examinations in other Universities. Sub-clause (4) of that clause runs—

'The University shall not, save with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, recognise (for the purposes of admission to a course of study for a degree) as equivalent to its own degree any degree conferred by any other University or as equivalent to the Intermediate Examination of an Indian University any examination conducted by any other authority.'

So there are various matters in this Bill in which other Universities are deeply interested, and I hope, therefore, that notwithstanding the fact that Bengal is peculiarly interested in this, other educationists will be put on the committee.

[11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.]

"Then, my Lord, to come to this question of communal representation about which the Hon'ble Nawab Ali Chaudhuri feels so deeply interested, may I be permitted to say that, though I am interested in the principle of communal representation being accepted in the interests of my community, I implore him not to ask for any extension, and, if possible, to see his way to giving up the provision in the Statutes. I know that it is hopeless to indulge in any expectation that the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal will give up what has been conceded to them in the Statutes and in the Bill, but I think it is my duty to point out that if this matter is to be taken as a peculiarly Bengalee one, we in this Council may draw up a skeleton Bill, approve of it and give the Bengal Government power to adjust matters in any way they choose, make it a peculiarly Bengal matter, but I hope that this Council composed of representatives from all provinces will not take upon themselves the responsibility of enunciating principles of action which would be detrimental to the future interests of the country. I was shocked to find that the mania of communal representation goes so far as to suggest that care should be taken that a proportion should be Muhammadan teachers necessarily. My Lord, I can see the necessity, especially in Dacca and East Bengal, of appointing efficient Muhammadan teachers wherever they can be found. But I am hoping for the dawn of the day when the object of the Indian Universities would be to give their Alumni the best world culture that is possible, to make young men realise that they are not merely Hindus, or Muhammadans, or Indians, but citizens of the world, to feed the humanitarian instinct in them and strengthen it; it is for that that we send boys to Universities for higher education. It is not in the hope that they may emerge therefrom staunch Muhammadans, staunch Bengalies or staunch Indians, but we want there should emerge from these Universities citizens of the world, having world interests at large in their hearts, and I hope therefore that when this, the first teaching and residential University of India is going to be inaugurated under your Excellency's auspices, such a pernicious doctrine will not be allowed to find a place in the Statute-book.

"My Lord, a complaint was made that several Faculties were not included in this Bill. I sympathise deeply because fortunately I am also interested in the subject; but I take it that there is nothing to prevent it if the Bengal Provincial Government has funds to institute these Faculties and develop them; there will be nothing to prevent the institution of the Faculties next year; and I therefore think that that criticism is not of very much force or validity.

"But another remark that was made by my Hon'ble friend Nawab Ali Chaudhuri deeply interests me, and that is, as to whether your Excellency's Government cannot, having regard to the extensive population of Bengal, give Dacca the chance of being not only a teaching University, but also being for some purposes an affiliating University. I say that because we are exactly in the same position, we have a distinct language of our own; we have to make provision for the education of about 20 million people, and we cannot, therefore, be content with a teaching University exclusively located in a particular district or particular area; we are deeply interested in seeing that this problem is solved on right lines in Dacca. I therefore hope that the Select Committee would examine, if possible, as to whether there is any chance of making this University somewhat analogous to the Patna University in its constitution without fundamentally interfering with the essential functions which are to be exercised by a teaching University.

"Then, my Lord, a word about finance would have greatly interested me because I am deeply interested in the Universities of the future which will have to be started throughout India knowing where they would be financially. Of course if this expenditure is to be met from the Provincial Government's revenues and the Government of India are not going to undertake the burden, then certainly I have nothing to say; but I hope to hear something as to whether the Government of India would in some form through the land-revenue head or some other head treat this as a generous gift and, I was hoping that something might be done in order that similar claims might be advanced by us, but I was disappointed. I hope, therefore, that the Hon'ble Member will tell us something about the financing of this scheme; no scheme can be sound unless it is based upon sound finance, and I am sure the Government take it that when they introduced this Bill the necessary financial provision would be made by the Government concerned."

1-8 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha:—"Your Excellency, I heartily agree with the very sound views expressed by my Hon'ble friends Mr. Surendranath Banerjea and Mr. Sastri and also by Mr. Sarma. I think their reasons are very sound. I am afraid my Muhammadan friends here are too narrow-minded. They do not understand what are the true functions of a University. On my part I take it that a University is a great temple of learning, a temple of learning where on its doors is inscribed 'No sectarianism. No one who entertains sectarian views shall enter here.' But what do you find here? You find particularly that the Muhammadan community desire to introduce sectarianism again in the new University. Sectarianism has been partly introduced in political matters for the sake of expediency; but that is no reason why in a temple of learning like a University such a thing should be expedient or essential. I am therefore strongly against any of those denominational matters being introduced in the Bill which is before us, but which have been objected to by Mr. Surendranath Banerjea and Mr. Sarma.

"I take it for granted that a University is a University, a seat of learning where there is freedom of thought; and freedom of thought does not recognise Hinduism or Muhammadanism, or Christianity or Judaism, or any other ism. It is broad-minded, it is unsectarian; it is universal in its scope; the very word 'University' means that there should be imparted universal knowledge which has no reference to either race or creed or any form of belief. Therefore, my Lord, why at this stage, particularly in this twentieth century, when we see Europe herself has in fact completely outgrown the types of mediæval Universities that flourished long ago, should we, Indians, who are now taking models from the greatest of the modern Universities in England and Europe and America try to re-establish principles for our new Universities which are really pernicious. Let us have in India Universities with nothing sectarian about them at all. The Dacca University Bill has a great deal of it and so far as the scheme has been propounded by the Hon'ble Member in charge of Education, I cannot give my adhesion to a University of this character. In fact, I shall oppose it. I think in the interests of India there should be no University with a constitution of this character at all. I appeal to my Muhammadan friends in this matter and urge them earnestly to proscribe sectarianism. I say let them dismiss from their minds all questions of sectarianism. In a seat of learning there should be no Muhammadanism, no Hinduism, no Christianity, no Hebraism, nothing but broad intellectual all-pervading freedom and thought. In fact there should be no questions of race or creed in their minds when they propose to establish a University of the best modern type. With these words I beg to oppose the scheme as it now stands."

[At this stage the Council adjourned for Lunch.]

2-33 P.M. The Hon'ble Rai Sitanath Ray Bahadur:—"My Lord, while supporting the principle of the Bill intended to establish a University at Dacca, I beg to associate myself wholeheartedly with what has fallen from the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri about the pernicious effects of communal representation, even in the sacred cause of education. As a resident of Dacca I beg to enter my emphatic protest against the principle. Whatever may be urged in favour of communal representation in other spheres of activity and in political matters, there is hardly any room for it—as so aptly expressed by my esteemed friend Sir Dinshaw Wacha—in the temple of education, in matters intended to promote education. I cannot understand why there should be a separate

[11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Rai Sitanath Ray Bahadur; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

Advisory Board for Muhammadans, while no such Board should be allowed in the case of Hindus.

"My Muhammadan friends would kindly excuse me if I were to say—it is pernicious that our Muhammadan brethren should continue to advance their rights of communal representation from one sphere to another till they succeed in establishing their rights in all departments and spheres. Clause 26 of the Bill before us lays down that the Muhammadan Advisory Board 'should concern itself with Muhammadan interests in the University.' What special and separate interest, I ask, can our Muhammadan brethren have in a University financed by the people irrespective of caste or creed, and intended, as has been explained in the Bill, for 'all persons of either sex and of whatever race, creed, or class'? In section 5, moreover, it is distinctly laid down :—

'It shall not be lawful for the University to adopt or impose on any person any test whatsoever of religious belief or profession in order to entitle him to be admitted thereto as a teacher or student, or to hold any office therein, or to graduate thereat, or to enjoy or exercise any privilege thereof, except where such test is specially prescribed by the Statutes, or, in respect of any particular benefaction accepted by the University, where such test is made a condition thereof by any testamentary or other instrument creating such benefaction.'

The Calcutta University, my Lord, has been in existence for, more than 65 years—the only University in the Province. There is no provision for communal representation in that University, and Hindus and Muhammedans have worked together in it in harmony for the advancement of learning. Can our Muhammadan friends cite a single instance in which that University, standing far above communal representation, has hampered the cause of Muhammadan education in United Bengal? On the contrary, we find everywhere education spreading rapidly amongst our Muhammadan friends. Even before the scheme of the Dacca University had attained maturity, the official reports disclosed the gratifying fact that Muhammadans were leaving Hindus behind them in the race for primary education. From my personal experience I can say that to-day even the poor Muhammadan cultivators in Char lands of Eastern Bengal make it a point to give their children a liberal University education.

"Under the circumstances, I fail to understand the gravity of the reasons which could actuate the framers of the Bill to introduce sectarian principles in the scheme for a University at Dacca."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—"My Lord, I welcomed the Dacca University Bill when it was introduced and I still consider it a matter of satisfaction that the Bill has been introduced. I then pointed out that there were certain provisions which required liberalising, and I adhere to that view. I should like just briefly to draw attention to a few points which, I think, are of vital importance. The discussion to-day has shown that there is a reasonable anxiety in the minds of many friends of education that the University should be a model University. The provisions that are contained in the Bill do not exclude the modernising of the University, but probably it will have to be made clearer that it is so. For instance, when it is stated that the Faculties to be constituted shall be those of Arts, Science and Law and such other Faculties as may be prescribed by the Statute, if after science the words 'pure and applied" were put in, and if Agriculture, Commerce and Medicine were added, I think that the object of those friends who desire that the University should be a model one would be achieved. 2-38 P.M.

"I do not think at this era of the world's progress any long argument should be needed to convince the Government, the Member for Education and the Secretary of the Education Department of the justice and the reasonableness of this demand. The whole world has modernised University education and the Universities of Manchester, Sheffield and other places are what are called modern Universities. They have provided in the Charters of the several Universities that education shall be imparted not merely in Arts and Science subjects as used to be the case in the past, but that Engineering and Chemistry, Applied Science, Technology and Agriculture and Music, all these shall have sufficient attention paid to them. I think, my Lord, that we may safely expect that the Select Committee will, in dealing with this Bill, make this point clear. I do not think that I need say more about it because the Report of the Calcutta University Commission has dealt with this aspect of education in detail, and has pointed out the pressing necessity of making provision for such education, even at the Calcutta University. The teaching of pure science which has gone on has not been wasted, but it is time now that teaching should be provided in the application of science in a larger way than has been the case in the past. The need for engineering education is very pressing, and I agree with the Hon'ble Nawab Ali Chaudhri and other speakers that definite provision should be made for it in the Dacca University. It may be said that for these subjects the Calcutta University may be expected to make satisfactory provision, but, my Lord, the country is so large, the number of students who seek education in these various subjects will be so great that not two, but five Universities, will not suffice to meet the needs of the youth of the country in Bengal itself, and for this reason I strongly hope that the Select Committee will see their way to recommend that, as soon as events will permit, the University will be free to constitute, without any let on hindrance, without even a reference to the Chancellor, without even a reference to the Government of India, Faculties in these subjects which are of pressing practical importance. Much complaint has been made in the past against the spread of education in this country. Some people have imagined that there has been too much high education spread in this country. That shows only a regrettable ignorance of the realities of the situation. What seems to be much in evidence is a particular kind of education which does not always find a young man a useful career, and if these modern subjects of practical importance are introduced, I do not think there will be any more room left for complaints on this score. First then I hope that on the academic side, so far as enabling the University to impart instruction in modern subjects is concerned, there will be sufficient provision incorporated in the Bill before it emerges out of Select Committee. Of equal importance with this liberalising of the academic side is the liberalising of the administrative side. The Bill, as it has been drafted, does not propose to take sufficient note of the changes that are impending. Before the Reforms were in view, this Bill might have done very well in the old order of things. But this Bill will not be in keeping with the new order of things when Education is going to be a Transferred Subject, and there ought not to be so many and so rigid restraints imposed upon the University authorities as the Bill provides for. Here if anywhere there ought to be the greatest amount of freedom given to the educational authorities to do what they think best. Here if anywhere there ought to be the feeling created in the minds of those who are responsible for the administration of the University that they are trusted and that they are to do what is right, and that they are responsible to do what is needed in the interests of the country. The Government have long borne the responsibility of guiding high education and generally all education through what they consider to be sound and beneficial channels, but experience has shown that there is need for improvement, that there is need for a diversion, that there is need for a departure, and just at this time it would be a happy thing if the constitution were revised in the light of the changes that are impending. In that view I will expect that, while the University should have the honour of having the Viceroy as Visitor, the powers given to the Viceroy should be even more restricted than they are. That does not mean any want of respect for the Head of the Government; it only means that we should respect him without troubling him about the details of the administration of the University. So far as the Visitor is concerned, he has been given a great deal too much power for interference. I do not think that in the new order of things it will be desirable that the Chancellor should have the right to hear appeals against the order of any officer or authority of the University affecting any class of persons in the University. This will very seriously interfere with the efficient administration of the University. The university Court, the Academic Council should be trusted to deal justly with the claims of those whose co-operation it invites or accepts, and I think, my Lord, that this provision requires re-consideration.

[11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

"The next item to which I shall also invite attention is the appointment of the Vice-Chancellor. I can well understand that the first Vice-Chancellor should be nominated by the Chancellor, but I do hope that the Select Committee will recommend, and the Government of India will accept the provision, that subsequent Vice-Chancellors should be elected by the Senate of the University. The Government have given us in the Patna University a much more liberal constitution than this Bill provides for, and if anything we ought to go forward and not backward from what we have established in Act XVI of 1915. There the Court elects the Vice-Chancellor, and the Court consists not merely of men who are concerned with the administration of the University, but also with the academic side. Here it may be provided that the Court and the Senate or the Court alone will elect the Vice-Chancellor. The Court will certainly contain on it the best representatives of learning and wealth and education in the Province, and there will be officials as well as non-officials, and the Court should be trusted to select the best men available to guide the affairs of the University. I will not dwell with more detail on this side of the matter, but I do hope the constitution of the University will be liberalised so that the fullest measure of freedom will be left to the academic bodies and those who have to administer the affairs of the University. I think, my Lord, at this era the restraints which have been imposed are a little out of date and ought to be abolished.

"Then there is also the question connected with it of the control which is sought to be exercised over the discretion of the University in the matter of selecting professors. Now, as the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri has pointed out, that is a very important part of the duties of the Court and here the University ought to have the fullest measure of freedom and the fullest measure of responsibility thrown upon it. Working on the principles in force in the Hindu University I have found that this is one of the most difficult and responsible tasks that fall on the University, the task of finding professors and teachers to be appointed to the University. The method that is prescribed here, I venture to say, is not suited to the altered times in which we are living. We find it more and more difficult to get men appointed in England. We have tried, as my esteemed friend the Hon'ble Mr. de la Fosse can tell the Council, to get men from England. We have sought the assistance of our best friends, official and non-official, to find suitable men to take up work for the Hindu University, and we have not always been successful, and if we find that a committee is to be appointed in England to select men for the University, there is a great danger that the right type of men will not be selected. There is also a danger that a committee there will not realise fully the conditions which obtain at Dacca, and therefore they will not be able to place themselves in the positions of the members of the academic Council and select the right men. There is also this danger, that the gentlemen who may be appointed in England by this committee may not pull on with the same sympathy and harmony with the academic Council, because there would be the idea that they held their appointments from a body outside the University, and this will, I fear, not have a satisfactory effect.

"Then there is another point which no Committee appointed in England can really understand and appreciate. The men that are available, the Indian scholars that are available, are not always inferior even to men whom we can get from England. Sometimes the possession of an English University degree indicates, no doubt, a certain amount of excellence which a particular gentleman has achieved, but not always, my Lord, and we have here a number of scholars who have done good work, who have established their reputation as teachers, and if we import a man from outside, whether he is an Indian or a European, it is a matter always of great delicacy. This consideration which is needed can best be exercised by the Academic Council who know what men they have on the staff, who know the claims and the qualifications of the men already working at the Universities for a certain number of years. They can therefore weigh the claims of the new men who have to be selected with the claims of those already on the staff, and endeavour to avoid heart-burning and complaint. Some heart-burning and complaint may be inevitable; it will not always be possible to avoid it altogether, but the Academic body has to do all that it can to avoid them. Therefore, I submit, that this provision that one-third of the professors should be appointed by a Committee in England is not in keeping with the altered times and circumstances, and it ought to be eliminated and the responsibility of selecting the professorial staff should be left entirely to the Academic Council of the University.

"Then I come to the question of communal representation. Now I submit that this too requires alteration. I have always felt that the desire of my Muhammadan friends of Eastern Bengal that there should be a University in Dacca was a perfectly legitimate and reasonable one. I have always fully sympathised with that desire. I wish the Dacca University had been constituted 25 years ago, and I still feel that this University ought to be made into a first class University in every sense; but I do feel that the provision for communal representation, as it has been put in in the Bill, requires re-consideration.

"Now, my Lord, the Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha, the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri, the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma and several other speakers have dwelt upon this aspect of the question. Let me first tell my Muhammadan friends that they should not imagine that this is a question in which Muhammadans alone are interested. Every one of us is interested in the cause of higher education in Eastern Bengal as in every other part of India. Besides our Muhammadan friends there is a very large population which is non-Muhammadan, and they have views and sentiments, and their interests have also to be considered. Now I fully recognise that in the past our Muhammadan friends have not had that amount of representation in the Councils of the Calcutta University and in the administration in Eastern Bengal which they desire. Whether the fault lay entirely with them or with others it is not for me to go into; possibly the truth lies midway; possibly it is due to some of our Muhammadan friends not taking to English education early enough; possibly it is due to other influences working against them. I desire that that state of things should alter. I desire that our Muhammadan friends should go in for education and should have as good a chance as any one else to acquire positions of power and responsibility, and I want that they should have a full measure of representation in the Senate and the Court of the University. The only question is, how is this to be secured, whether the provision that has been made under the Act is the right provision or whether it requires modification. Now in the case of a University like the Hindu University the case is simple. It is mainly constituted by Hindus, and therefore we have no difficulty like that. It is denominational more in name than in anything else, because we admit British officers without any consideration of their religious creeds; we have Hindu, Muhammadan and Sikh students; we would welcome students from every creed and class. There is nothing denominational about it except its name and the fact that we do provide facilities for imparting religious instruction to Hindu students. In the case of Hindu students religious instruction is compulsory; it is not so in the case of non-Hindu students. But the constitution of the Hindu University stands therefore on a separate footing. When the constitution for the Aligarh University was being discussed in the draft Bill that was prepared, we had a predominantly Muhammadan constitution provided for the Aligarh University and nobody will have any cause for quarrel with the constitution of a University which has been started with the professed object of representing a particular community more than any other community. In one sense if the constitution of it predominantly represents the particular denomination one can understand that, but this is a University which is a State University and the patronage of the State ought, like sunshine and rain, to be available to the high as well as the low. It ought not to be confined to any particular branch or particular community, and I am sure that this can be provided for here. The representation that has been provided at present in the Statutes for the Court is that the number of graduates to be elected as members of the Court by the registered graduates from among their own body shall be 30, of whom 15 shall be Muhammadan graduates elected by the registered Muhammadan graduates. 'Also the number of persons to be appointed by the Chancellor under clause (xii) of sub-section (1) of section 17 shall be 40; provided that the Chancellor shall in making such appointments secure that, as far as possible, 50 per cent. of the non-European members of the Court shall be Muhammadans.'

"What is sought to be attained here by means of this provision ought to be achieved ordinarily in the natural course of things. If there is a large number of Muhammadan graduates, if there is a large number of Muhammadan scholars, their votes should secure a fairly large representation of Muhammadans in the Court and the Academic Council of the University. A majority of the population of Eastern Bengal is Muhammadan. One should expect that naturally there should be a large element of Muhammadans in the Court and in the Academic Council. I can well understand the objection which several friends take to the inclusion of such a provision in an academic institution. Now there are two interests which have to be reconciled in an academic institution like the Dacca University. There is first the interest that has to cater to the wants of all communities irrespective of caste and creed, irrespective of any denominational considerations. That is its first duty, particularly as it is a State University. That requires that we should get the best teachers, the best men, whom the public, I mean those who have got the franchise, think it fit to elect as members of the Court and of the Academic Council; they should come in naturally. But my Muhammadan friends would feel that they had not the assurance that Muhammadan interests will always be safeguarded and that they will not be sacrificed; and it is that need we have to consider. Now what are the interests which require safeguarding? The great thing that Muhammadans, Hindus, Christians and Parsees might concern themselves about in these institutions is the religious instruction of the youths of their particular communities. I think, my Lord, instead of making any statutory provision for having a certain number of Muhammadans elected to the Court and the Academic Council, the better course would be that there should be no such provision for the election of members to the Court and the Academic Council, but that there should be denominational committees of Muhammadans, of Hindus, of Christians, to look after the religious instruction of the youths of their communities in the Hostels which will be built there. This is a view which is not a novel view. Of course some of those present will remember that this is the view which the Education Commission, presided over by Sir William Hunter, expressed as far back as 1883-84. They said :—

'The evidence we have taken shows that in some Provinces there is a deeply-seated desire that culture and religion should not be divorced and that this desire is shared by some representatives of native thought in every Province. In Government institutions this desire cannot be gratified. The declared neutrality of the State forbids its connecting institutions directly maintained by it with any form of faith, and the other alternative of giving equal facilities in such institutions for the inculcation of all forms of faith involves practical difficulties which we believe to be insuperable.

'In Chapter VI we have shown that we are not insensible to the high value of the moral, discipline and example which Government institutions are able to afford, but we have also shown that we regard something beyond this as desirable for the formation of character and the awakening of thought.'

"Now, they felt the need of it and they recommended that Government should encourage the establishment of denominational institutions. We are dealing here not with a denominational institution, but a State institution, and for many years past the several Provincial Governments have recognised the wisdom of allowing the opening of denominational Universities to impart religious instruction in their colleges to the youth of their community. If a provision is made that there should be a Muhammadan Advisory Board to look after the religious education of the students of their community, I do not think anybody will have any objection. In fact, I think, my Lord, that such a provision should be made because I do not believe that it is desirable that there should be no provision for imparting religious instruction to the youth who go to the Universities, and that can be best entrusted to trusted members of different communities. If that is done, I do not see why there should be any necessity for having a provision for communal representation in the Act or the Statutes as they stand at present. There is one thing more that I would say in this connection. In an educational system above all things what we desire is harmony among teachers and students, a feeling of commonness, a common sentiment pervading teachers and students, the regard of the students for the teacher being based entirely upon the latter's ability and character and not upon his religion alone. Religion is of course one element in the formation of character; but every teacher whose co-operation is sought in a State institution ought to command the respect of his pupils by reason of his talent and character, and there should not be any bar created to his obtaining such respect by communal considerations and arrangements being imported into a University where they can be avoided. Some of us, some of my Muhammadan friends may feel deeply on the point; but, I think, I have made it clear that I am not opposed to a sufficient number of Muhammadan gentlemen being placed on the Court and the Academic Council. I expect that as a natural result, considering the state of affairs in Eastern Bengal. I expect that if my Muhammadan friends have not 50 per cent. but only 10, if there is only one who feels keenly for any injustice that may be done by the Academic body or the Court, he would be able to get a verdict in favour of that injustice being removed, and I believe that these bodies will be reasonable above all things, and, therefore, I feel that this desire that there should be no provision for communal representation, as it is provided in the proposed Bill, deserves re-consideration by Government. If, my Lord, there is one thing which all of us need, it is to make the best provision for imparting instruction to our youth. It does not matter who it is who is selected as a teacher if he is the most efficient man in the subject which he has to teach; that is what is required at present; we want to gather men of the highest character, men who will by reason of their culture create an atmosphere, a university atmosphere, and that atmosphere demands above all things, as Sir Dinshaw Wacha pointed out, that there should be universality of feeling and sentiment. Where it is essential to introduce communal arrangements as in the case of religious instruction, let us do so, let us do so without any apology; because I believe that religious instruction ought to be an integral part of the education of every youth; but where it is not necessary to do so, let us have the greatest universality of sentiment and feeling, regard for talent and character, regard for scholarship unaffected by any communal considerations or arrangements. The great danger to which the Bill exposes the Dacca University is that the provision for communal representation which it proposes will create compartments in the University, will not enable all the workers who should unite to work for the good of the motherland, who should unite to work for promoting education of the highest character among the youth of the country, it will not allow that work to be done with such harmony and good-will and zeal as they would otherwise do; and that is the danger that will be a real misfortune for the country as a whole. In the past, many of us, I am sorry to think, have quarrelled because we wanted to get professional careers for our young men, and we found that we were unable to do so; but I expect, I fully expect, that in the new order of things, if the Universities work properly, if the University modernises and different careers are provided for the youth of the country, there shall not be a Muhammadan or Hindu youth who after receiving a proper education will be in want of a proper career. I expect that if the education imparted is the right kind of education, this difficulty of finding careers for our young men will be easily solved. Therefore, I expect that in the future we shall not be so much divided with a desire to secure careers to the youths of our different communities; and as for anything else, what counts, what will count and what ought to count in an academic body like the Dacca University is scholarship and character. Communal considerations ought not to be allowed to stand in the way of scholarship and character being worshipped, being given their proper place and recognition and being enabled to make it a great centre of light and life, such as I hope the Dacca University will be. I therefore earnestly appeal to the members of the Select Committee which is going to be appointed to look at these questions in a broad light with a particular outlook on the future. It does not reflect any blame upon the framers of the Bill. The Bill has been framed in accordance with what seemed to be most desirable in the circumstances. But times have changed and are changing, and we want now at this juncture when the Government is going to institute this State unitary teaching and residential University, we too want that this University should be a model University in every sense of the term, and that it should make provision for imparting instruction of a practical kind to the youth who will go there, that it should in fact be a training ground for life, and if that is done I hope that all other smaller considerations which have found expression to-day in some quarters will be forgotten, and that we shall all unite in congratulating the Government and ourselves upon the establishment of a new school of light and life in the country."

The Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha:—"My Lord, when 3-8 P.M. in September last my friend, the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi, introduced the Dacca University Bill at Simla, I gave the project a cordial welcome, as I felt and still feel that it was desirable to have a University at Dacca for the benefit of the population of East Bengal. At the same time I pointed out that the provisions of the Bill, so far as I could appreciate them at a rather short notice by giving them a cursory glance, seemed to me to contain matters of a very contentious character, if not more or less objectionable. I remember that I particularly pointed out that the University seemed to me to be a body containing an overwhelming number of officials, and it also contained provision for communal representation which was a matter which required further consideration. Since then, I have had occasion to look into the Bill carefully, and I find that it contains, quite apart from those features, other aspects also which are open, in my humble opinion, to rather serious objection. While, therefore, strongly in favour of the establishment of a University at Dacca, I take this opportunity—on the motion before the Council that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee—to point out briefly those points which strike me as worthy of consideration by the Select Committee. But before I deal with these matters, I wish to refer to a statement of Mr. Sarma, who, I believe, raised the point, that the reference to the Select Committee is to one in which there is no non-official Indian representative of any province other than Bengal. All the five Indian members on the Select Committee to which the Bill has been referred come from the Province of Bengal. The view taken by Mr. Shafi evidently is that because the Dacca University is going to be located in Bengal, this is a matter for Bengal members and Bengal members alone. Now I join issue with those who hold this opinion, for although the Dacca University is to be located in Bengal, still it is a measure of great importance, on which will affect in various ways other Universities to be established in future in other parts of the country. It, therefore, seems to me desirable to secure the advantage of having representatives on the Select Committee from other Provinces also, especially men who are distinguished educationists. There is my esteemed friend the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri, who is known to be a great educationist; then there is the Hon'ble Pandit Malaviya, who is the Vice-Chancellor of the Hindu University of Benares. They would both certainly add to the efficiency of the Committee. I, therefore, hope that the Hon'ble the Education Member will accept the suggestion that the Committee be added to by having on it representatives of other Provinces, especially persons who are educationists.

"Now, my Lord, coming to the Bill, what surprises me is that there are to be but three Faculties in it—Arts, Science and Law. There is to be no Faculty of Agriculture, or Technology or Engineering. Then in the constitution of its Court I find that a very large number of officials are to be ex-officio members. I find, for instance, there the Commissioner, presumably of the Dacca Division, then the Collector, the Sessions Judge, the Director of Agriculture, the Civil Surgeon of Dacca, the Superintending Engineer, the Chairman of the Dacca Municipality, the Inspector of Schools, the Inspectress of Girls' Schools and many other officials who are to be ex-officio members of the Court. I confess it surprises me what justification there can be to put in all these gentlemen and a gentlewoman as ex-officio members of the Court. I hope the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi will explain the desirability of having this large number of ex-officio members, when he comes to reply on behalf of Government. There is so far as I can see complete officialism of the Court, which is inconsistent with the autonomous character of the scheme that was claimed for it by Mr. Shafi in September last. The Patna University of which I was a Fellow, contains provision for the election of 65 members out of 90, only 25 being Government nominees. I do not see why a similar provision should not be introduced into the Dacca University Bill. Then, my Lord, I believe the provisions embodied in sections 17 and 18 of the Statutes are open to serious criticism. Reference has been made to this already, but the matter is of such great importance, that I must bespeak the indulgence of the Council in referring to it again. I find that so far as the Professorships are concerned, one-third of the appointments are completely taken out of the hands of the University and are vested in a Board to be constituted in England, of the five members of which only two are to be the nominees of the University and the other three are to be the nominees of the Secretary of State! This is a most extraordinary proposition and a very serious feature of the Bill. I should like to know if the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi can refer us to any similar provision in the constitution of any University in India or elsewhere, where one-third of the Professors are to be appointed by a Board in the United Kingdom, three of whom are the nominees of the Secretary of State and only two are appointed by the University! We have the further objectionable feature that if the recommendation of this Board is not accepted by the Executive Council of the University, then the whole thing is taken out of the hands of that body and vested in the hands of the Chancellor, who may appoint the Professors himself or refer the matter to the Secretary of State! As regards the remaining two-thirds of the Professors, provision is made that they will be appointed by a Committee consisting of the Vice-Chancellor, three members of the University and four nominees of the Governor of Bengal The body will thus consist of eight persons, four of whom only are to be members of the University and the other four outsiders. Here again, I cannot appreciate the principle underlying a body of this character, half consisting of members of the University staff and the other half outsiders, to choose two-thirds of the teaching staff of the University! These are very serious objections which I hope the Select Committee will consider very carefully.

"Then, my Lord, there is the very controversial question of communal representation which obtrudes itself very prominently throughout this Bill, and, in my humble opinion, in a very undesirable way at any rate to an extent to which I have not been used to see in educational institutions. Not only is it in regard to Muhammadans, but, as I pointed out at Simla in September last, it affects also the Hindus, though to a smaller extent; for I find as regards the constitution of this committee the following laid down:—'Provided that should a committee so constituted not include both a Hindu and a Muhammadan member, the Chancellor shall nominate an additional Hindu or Muhammadan member or both, as the case may be.' Now that is carrying communal representation further than I have been accustomed to find in educational institutions. I quite appreciate the difficulties of our Moslem fellow-countrymen in the matter of communal representation. I have been intimately in touch with this aspect of the problem for many years. As President of the Bihar Provincial Conference, so far back as 1909, when the Morley-Minto Reforms were under consideration, I induced the educated classes in Bihar to accept the principle of communal representation as a matter of expediency, so far as representation on the Councils was concerned; but to introduce it into educational institutions seems to me to be carrying it beyond legitimate limits. When I asked for information on the point at Simla, last September, I received, if I may say so without offence, no satisfactory answer. The Hon'ble Member for Education but referred me to the Report of the Calcutta University Commission! I have great respect for the University Commission but when we are asked to give our assent in this Council to a Bill of the character now before us, we are bound to examine the question with the greatest care and we are not to be fettered in our decision by the opinions of even such an august body as the University Commission. I hope this Bill will emerge from the Select Committee in such a form that, while giving adequate representation to Muhammadans in Eastern Bengal, it will be shorn of its obtruding objectionable features of communal representation. I am sorry that my Hon'ble friend Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer is not here. I wish he was. I deprecate the spirit which he introduced when he read out something in a stentorian voice and gave us a warning that if we did not listen to it there would be trouble ahead. I protest against language of that sort. I am strongly in favour of the adequate representation of Muhammadans in the Dacca University, but it is no use talking in the way in which my friend did. It is wrong to say that communal representation is a matter of vested rights of Muhammadans in even Universities, and I maintain that such language is not desirable in discussing educational problems here. I hope the Select Committee will give the Muhammadans the fullest representation consistent with educational interests, but will so remove the objectionable features of the Bill as to make it acceptable to all sections of the people, irrespective of their being Muhammadans or Hindus in Eastern Bengal."

The Hon'ble Sir Zulfikar Ali Khan :—" My Lord, I rise to give my whole-hearted support to the principles of the Bill based as they are on the recommendations of the Calcutta University Commission. I had no idea of speaking to-day in Council, but as I saw that some of the members attacked the arrangement made for communal representation, I thought it was time for me to speak on this subject. 3-20 P.M.

" My Hon'ble friend Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea, it seems to me, sounded the alarm. He said that in these days of harmony and good-will it was inappropriate, nay inexpedient to make such arrangements as things were so composing themselves as to remove all necessity of communal representation at once. I am sure, my Lord, he is not unaware of the fact that in Bengal out of 100 members of the Senate, there are only 7 Muhammadans, and this in a Province where the Muhammadans are in a majority; we are suffering from the same evil in the Punjab, and in spite of our repeated representations to Government we have not been able to get our due share. I cannot understand how those Hon'ble Members with a sense of responsibility to the Government and to the country can say under these circumstances that communal representation is not wanted.

" The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha in his speech created quite a classical atmosphere in this Council by saying that this temple of learning was such as not to need the introduction of any sectarian principle. I quite admire his sentiment, but we must study the actual situation. The pantheon of learning which he contemplates may have the Gods of all communities, but that of the Muhammadans . . ."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri :—" How many Gods are there? There is only one God."

The Hon'ble Sir Zulfikar Ali Khan :—" We believe in one God. I believe, while contemplating this state of affairs, he expects us to admire the building from outside and not to enter the pantheon and worship there. He perhaps expects us to look at this fine building, but with the inner management, he says, we may have nothing to do, he can very well manage it himself in co-operation with others, but the Muhammadans may rest assured that their own affairs will be managed quite as well without . . .

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha :—" I am afraid my friend is entirely under a misapprehension. I never said anything of the kind."

[Sir Zulfikar Ali Khan; Mr. G. S. Khaparde.] [11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

The Hon'ble Sir Zulfikar Ali Khan:—"That was the conclusion I drew from his speech, and if I have been mistaken I shall not dilate on it.

"There is one thing, my Lord, which these people who attack communal representation must keep in view, and it is this, that while they wish to create friendliness and harmony, they are by their proposals creating exactly the opposite effect. It is this communal representation which will remove all chances of friction, and if this is not done, then there will be perpetual heart-burning and want of friendliness. I cannot understand how this point of view is lost sight of.

"The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri and the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda in their speeches quite wisely admitted that this was an inevitable need, in fact they saw that it should be recognised. I think this is the kind of sentiment which would have the harmonising effect rather than the one which is sounded by others. I hope that in such communal matters my Hon'ble colleagues will not deliberately minimise the disabilities which the Muhammadans have in the matter of communal representation.

"My Lord, my Hon'ble friend Pandit Malaviya also took part in the general attack on this question of communal representation. He said that this University was a kind of God's light which should shed its rays on every one. I quite agree with him, but then would not the Muhammadans have a place under the sun? Would they not have a ray cast on their side; would they be left in darkness? I quite see that he shakes his head and wishes perhaps that there was no such meaning in his words, but I wish he had not taken objection to communal representation. With these words, my Lord, I whole-heartedly support the motion before the Council."

3-28 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde:—"My Lord, this Bill has given rise to a discussion which has taken me by surprise The Bill by itself has got 47 sections with Schedules. It is fairly complete, in fact it is something more than that. I myself thought it did not require a very large or extensive Code. Personally, I look upon the University as an association of learned people sitting together for devising means for educating people and for giving instruction in the best way possible. For that purpose we do not require a very elaborate Code to tell the learned people how to teach. I believe those people know how to teach and how to learn, and all the regulations that we make are merely for the purpose of laying down certain lines on which to teach. However, unfortunately this subject has given rise to so much discussion about communal representation. As I myself thought, when learned people sit together to consider how best to impart instruction, there is no communal question in that at all. Everybody is occupied primarily with the consideration of the question as to how best to instruct the young people so that they may become learned men themselves. If that is the idea, I do not see that communal representation has anything to do with this subject."

"With due respect to all my Hon'ble colleagues who have spoken before me, I myself think that the question of communal representation is irrelevant to the present question. The present question is, how we shall best teach our young people, how best we shall qualify them for their duties in life and make good citizens out of them. If that is so I think all communities have got the same interests, and if more seats are given to one community than another, I, for one, do not feel disposed to quarrel about it or make any disturbance about it. The best people there are, irrespective of what their caste or creed or colour is, should devise means to teach the young people, and that is all there is to it. And for that purpose we do not require so many elaborate rules, and I say again with great deference to my learned and Hon'ble colleagues that this question of communal representation is really irrelevant. I further wish to submit one more consideration and that is that, as far as possible, this body of learned men who may be called the Senate or the whole University put together, should be independent, and no one should be above them or dictate to them from outside. They will sit together and they will devise means as to how to deal with their young people. Why should we or anybody presume to dictate to them and tell them they should do things in this way or that way and choose their teachers from one particular place or another? All that I believe to be a little outside the question myself. Why should not all these learned people sitting together say, 'We know our population, we know our children and how to select our teachers, and will select the best men for them?' Similarly, about the other regulations that there are. They appear to be too many, and I hope the Select Committee, when it sits to consider these matters, will see their way to cut out as many of them as possible.

"In regard to the Chancellor's powers and the Visitor's powers they might to my mind resemble something of the kind that used to happen in our school days, when we asked some one to come and distribute the prizes. We shall ask some one, the Chancellor, I suppose, to come and give away the degrees, and there the matter will end. If I were on the Select Committee I would vote for taking out a number of these regulations. I find the world is coming back to our old idea of teaching. The practice of one teacher teaching a large class appears to be getting out of date. Just before coming to this hall I met a gentleman who told me that Professor Huxley had introduced a system of education very much like the system we followed in India before, and that was that each student had got an individuality of his own; that each student could be taught in a particular way and the teacher should know how to adapt his method in teaching him; and there need be no rules laid down about that matter. In fact Professor Huxley, I was told, used to deliver one lecture a day, and in the afternoon he talked it over with the students and allowed them to assimilate the whole lecture and follow it when working in the laboratory, and while the children were playing and enjoying themselves they were unconsciously assimilating all the learning given to them in the morning. That was the old way of teaching in India, and I expect we shall come very near to it, and when we do all these questions of communal representation and regulations will become a good deal out of date. The system which has been devised makes a closer approach to our Indian method than anything else, and I expect every school will have a teacher to itself who will look after it, and the whole thing will end there.

"These are considerations which I wish to submit, and I hope our Select Committee will consider these matters and see their way to simplify things and remove all these complicated regulations. It reminds me of the debates we used to have in our college days when some of us were protectionists and some free traders and held forth from each political point of view, and took up a good deal of time and produced many arguments. but this war has set them all at rest, and in what used to be the home of free trade we now find protectionist ideas prevailing" . . .

The President:—"Order, order, the Hon'ble Member really must not go into the distinctions between protection and free trade. We have had many discursive arguments brought forward. He must confine himself to the Dacca University Bill which is being referred to a Select Committee."

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde:—"Your Excellency, what I submit is that people act according to circumstances, and though communal representation is now being objected to, circumstances may arise in which it will be thought necessary, and those gentlemen who now argue against it may adopt it. Similarly, those who speak for communal representation will one day themselves say 'We do not want communal representation, we prefer to be along with the rest.' So my point is that we need not lay stress on communal representation and on these rules and regulations, but simplify them and adapt them as circumstances change. I agree with my Hon'ble friend Pandit Malaviya that the world is changing and ideas of education are also changing, and therefore we should make our rules more elastic, so that things can be included as circumstances arise. These are the submissions I wish to make for the information of the Select Committee."

[Khan Sahib Shah Nawaz Bhutto; Mr. Shafi.] [11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

3-37 P.M. The Hon'ble Khan Sahib Shah Nawaz Bhutto:—"My Lord, I had no mind to-day to speak on this motion, but circumstances have forced me to give my own experience of my Province to this Council to judge whether the Mohammadans, who are generally known to be very liberal and broad-minded, could be accused of narrowmindedness in this case. In my Province over 80 per cent. of the population are Mohammadans and all of them are agriculturists, and they mostly bear the cost of education there, but it will be found in Government High Schools that not more than 5 per cent. of the boys are Mohammadans. The teachers and educational authorities are almost all Hindu gentlemen, and we Mohammadans are forced to start special Madrassah for the education of our children What is the cause of this I leave to my Hindu friends to consider themselves. With these few words and agreeing with the suggestions of the Hon'ble Nawab Ali Chaudhri, I support the motion."

3-38 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Shafi:—"My Lord, the points raised in the various speeches to which we have had the pleasure of listening to-day can be divided into two categories. In the first category come two points of principle, that is to say, the question of communal representation and of the power of affiliation raised by the Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea and the Hon'ble Nawab Ali Chaudhri. In the second category fall certain proposals and suggestions made by various Hon'ble Members, such as the creation of additional Faculties, reduction of the official element, method of selection of professors and so on, which according to the views of the Hon'ble Members who have put forward these proposals and suggestions are calculated to improve the Bill.

"Now as regards matters falling under the second category I have to say only this. I have not the slightest doubt that these various points raised by Hon'ble Members will receive careful consideration at the hands of the Select Committee. It would be naturally premature for me at this stage, speaking on behalf of the Government, to commit myself to any of these proposals, but Hon'ble Members may rest assured that the Government will give very careful consideration to the proposals which have actually been put forward.

"Coming now to the two questions of principle and taking up the question of communal representation, first of all, I confess I have been somewhat surprised to-day to find this question raised in connection with the Dacca University Bill. I should have thought that in these days of Hindu-Moslem unity, when so much is being said from the public platforms and in the public press about Hindu-Moslem unity, that my Hindu friends would have been charitable enough not to grudge to the poor Moslem community of East Bengal, backward as they are in education, a little special representation on the managing bodies of the Dacca University. I am surprised also because, my Lord, this objection has come from the lips of five or six Hon'ble Members of this Council, who, I find, or rather the majority of whom, I find, were signatories to what has been characterised as 'the historical memorandum of the immortal 19.' Moreover, I find that the majority of these members were parties to the Moslem League National Congress compact which recognised the principle of communal representation in the constitution of bodies of a higher importance than the Senate of a University. I further find that most of these Hon'ble Members were consenting parties to the creation of a communal University, the Benares Hindu University, and one of the Hon'ble Members who has waxed so eloquent against communal representation is the Vice Chancellor of that University. But says my Hon'ble friend, his University is not a communal University; the doors of that University are open to students belonging to all classes. But may I invite my Hon'ble friend's attention and the attention of this Council to section 9, clause (2) of the Benares University Act This is how that clause runs:—

'Save in the case of the first court no person not being a Hindu shall become or be appointed a member of the court.'

"My Lord, if Universities are sacred temples which ought to be open to all classes and creeds in this country, why does this provision in the Benares Hindu

[11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Mr. Shafi; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

University Act, exclude from the management of this temple members of every other class of His Majesty's subjects except my Hindu brethren. My Lord, it seems to me that it does not lie in the mouth of people who are advocates of the creation of communall Universities to come forward and say no special representation on behalf of this backward community can legitimately be incorporated in a legislative enactment.

"Then, my Lord, we find further that the objection . . .

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"May I explain, my Lord? I pointed out that the Benares Hindu University stood in a different position from a State University. In the draft Aligarh University Bill there was a provision like that and we incorporated it into the Benares Hindu University Bill. But it is a denominational University which has made that provision. Here, however, we are dealing with a State University which looks to the State for funds. The Hindu University has received its funds from Hindu donors. This University, I understand, is to be supported by the State and I have said there ought to be general representation."

The Hon'ble Mr. Shafi:—"Is that an explanation or another speech?

"Now, my Lord, the reply to the remarks made by my Hon'ble friend just now is a very simple one, and it is two-fold. Firstly, my learned friend says because such a provision was found by him and his co-workers in the draft of the Moslem University, therefore they simply took that provision from the Moslem University draft Bill. Well, if my friend was so sincerely and honestly convinced of the pernicious nature of communal representation in University matters, then, if the Moslem community were so foolish as to adopt this pernicious rule, it did not follow that wiser men like the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and his co-workers should have adopted this mistake of the backward Moslem community. In the second place, my learned friend forgets that his University is a Government-aided University; that the Government of India subscribe towards the maintenance of that University the sum of one lakh of rupees every year. He forgets that every now and then he is coming up to the Government of India asking for large grants from the public exchequer . . .

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya here interjected some remarks which were inaudible.

The Hon'ble Mr. Shafi.—"I would, my Lord, invite your Lordship's attention to the undesirability of these constant interruptions. If my learned friend has a point of order to raise or a personal explanation to offer I will sit down and make room for him, but I will not have him interrupt me in this fashion at every other sentence that I utter.

"My Lord, I was going to point out that the attitude adopted by these five or six Hon'ble Members is entirely opposed to the unanimous recommendation of the Calcutta University Commission. And in that connection it must be remembered that the Calcutta University Commission was, in the language which has been used by your Excellency, educationally perhaps the strongest Commission ever appointed in this country. The majority of the members of this Commission were non-official European educationists who certainly cannot be accused of having had any communal predelictions in favour of either the one community or the other, and the Indian members of this Commission were two representatives of the two main communities of India, one the foremost Hindu educationist of Bengal, Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee, and the other Dr. Zia-ud-din, Principal of the Mahomedan Anglo-Oriental College at Aligarh. Now I appeal from the Hon'ble Mr. Surendranath Banerjea to the Hon'ble Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee, who has signed this unanimous recommendation of the Calcutta University Commission in favour of communal representation in favour of special representation of Muhammedans in East Bengal. No doubt my Hon'ble friend is a great political leader, I daresay he has had something to do with a certain college in Calcutta of which he was proprietor or part proprietor, but I for one would ask Hon'ble Members in this Council to accept the verdict, in connection with this question of communal representation, of the Hon'ble Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee rather than of my Hon'ble and venerable friend.

"Then, my Lord, the opinion which has been expressed by these half a dozen Hon'ble Members is opposed to the opinion of the Calcutta University itself. Hon'ble Members will remember that the Senate of the Calcutta University has recognized the necessity of making special provision for the representation of Muhammadan interests in East Bengal on the various bodies of the Dacca University, but they have tacked on to this opinion of theirs a proviso that this representation should continue to exist for the next ten years and on the expiry of that period this question should be re-considered.

"Then, my Lord, may I point out that the opinion of these half a dozen Hon'ble Members is also opposed to the opinion of my Hon'ble friend whose experience in education is certainly equal to that of any one of them, I mean the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri. who has recognized that in the case of the Dacca University Bill this is an inevitable necessity, and to the opinion of the Hon'ble Mr Chanda whose province, it must be remembered, was not very long ago a part of the province of East Bengal, and, therefore, he is in a position to know the sentiments and the feelings of the people of that part of the country much better than any of the Hon'ble Members who have spoken against communal representation. He too recognises that it is not only necessary but also advisable that there should be special Muhammadan representation, and above all, my Lord, let me inform my Hon'ble friends that when I was in Dacca the representative Hindu deputation which came to interview me, frankly and very generously recognised before me that there was need for special representation of their backward Muhammadan brethren on the various governing bodies of the University. It seems to me, my Lord, that nothing further need be said on this question. The Government of India have made it a guiding principle of their action in connection with the framing of this Bill that the recommendations of the Calcutta University Commission, so far as the main principles laid down by them are concerned, are to be followed and as this is one of the main principles laid down by the Calcutta University Commission, the Government of India are not prepared to concede to the minority who have put forward their views against communal representation

"The second question of principle which has been raised by the Hon'ble Syed Nawab Ali Chaudhri is the question which relates to the creation of a power of affiliation of mufassal colleges in the proposed Dacca University. Now, my Lord, that again is a question which has been finally settled by the Calcutta University Commission. They have laid down that this University is to be a unitary teaching and residential University, without power of affiliating mufassal colleges, and the Government of India have accepted that principle and are not prepared to depart from it. Inconveniences there may be in the absence of such a power in the case of the Dacca University; but my Hon'ble friend must remember that inconveniences are inevitable in a transitional stage, and we are in a transitional stage in so far as the future expansion of higher education in Bengal is concerned. But a time will come when the ultimate goal laid down by the Calcutta University Commission will have been reached and a number of Universities, residential, unitary and teaching Universities, will have been created in different educational centres in Bengal with the result that the inconveniences which my Hon'ble friend is thinking of will ipso facto die away, and there will therefore be no necessity for any power of affiliation being vested in any University in Bengal.

"My Lord, with these few words I commend the motion placed before Council for acceptance."

The motion was put and agreed to.

[11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.]

RESOLUTION RE LOCATION OF GOVERNMENT OF INDIA HEADQUARTERS.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"My Lord, I beg to move the following Resolution :— 3-55 P.M.

'That this Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that the Headquarters of the Government of India be permanently located in one place and that a suitable centre may, if necessary, be selected for the purpose.'

"My Lord, we are approaching the dawn of a new era and Indian problems require to be looked at from new and fresh standpoints. I should not have troubled this Council and your Lordship with a re-consideration of the question that was settled in 1911 when the Capital was removed from Calcutta to Delhi for seven months in the year and Simla for the remaining five months, but for the fact that the circumstances under which the transfer was made no longer exist and the new problems, the new ideals and aspirations and circumstances which have arisen since the Reform Bill has been placed on the Statute-book give a new complexion and renders a re-examination of the position absolutely necessary.

"My Lord, if the Government were to continue to be autocratic and the Legislative Councils were to be merely advisory bodies the question would not be of very great interest or prominence; there would be no question of disfranchising any part of India; there would be no question of every part of India and every people, however remotely they may be situated from the centre, having to guard watchfully their interests in the councils of the Realm, when the whole position would be virtually in the hands of an official central Government, which ex-hypothesi would be autocratic. That was the position that was adopted in 1911 in the Despatch of that year. The Government of India say 'The maintenance of British rule in India depends upon the ultimate supremacy of the Governor General in Council, and the Indian Councils Act of 1909 bears testimony to the impossibility of matters of vital concern to be decided by a majority of non-official votes of the Imperial Legislative Council, and Parliamentary forms of government were not considered as being within the range of practical politics'. I do not say that the constitution of the Government of India has been materially or vitally changed since then, but then we have it recognised now that it is competent to the people of India to decide their own domestic matters, and it is only a question of time as to when they shall have this power transferred to them for deciding their domestic concerns in the way most compatible with their interests. That is the reason, my Lord, why I have ventured to bring up this Resolution. The new Councils will assume very great importance, greater and greater importance as the days pass by, and the question would be naturally as to what would be most convenient for the members who have to gather at the centre from all parts of India for transacting the common business; and the question as to whether the officials would be inconvenienced though of great importance (I am not going to minimise it in the least—the question of efficiency is there to be considered) will gradually be of lessening interest and importance, and that is the reason why this question has to be considered afresh and the urgency of the matter is all the greater, because we shall have to provide enlarged Council buildings in the very near future; and whether there are to be two Council buildings and the expenditure is to be practically incurred in raising the structure of two Capitals or one Capital is from the point of view of the lean tax-payer in India of essential importance, and I do not think, therefore, the question can be shelved very long. Well, my Lord, the Councils will number about 200, both the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly taken together, and the experience of other countries indicates clearly that the numbers would be considerably increased as soon as these institutions become realities, exercise real power; and people would naturally like to be represented in larger numbers, that is as democracy spreads the numbers may increase to 500 or 600 or even a thousand.

[Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.] [11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

"Then another point I would insist on is this, that there is a misapprehension in some quarters that the quality of the work and the quantity of the work which will have to be despatched by the Government of India would in the near future not be so very great as in the past, and consequently it would not be a matter of vital importance where they stay and how long they stay in a place. It seems to me that the Council work will increase enormously, so that we should look forward to longer and more continuous and more frequent sittings and to emergency sittings. Very great influence in this matter will be exercised by the Councils which will be presided over by elected Presidents. As to when and how often and how long they are to meet will depend largely upon the quantity of business which they would have to dispose of. We have still a large number of Acts, the Procedure Codes, Contract Acts, Specific Relief Acts, and other substantive laws falling within the central group, also labour problems, commercial problems all to be faced by the Government of India, and I do not see any possibility of the work diminishing in the slightest degree hereafter. We should, I say, look forward to longer and to more continuous sittings, and it will be absolutely impossible for members to absent themselves frequently or for long periods from headquarters when the Council sits continuously. You must give members an opportunity occasionally to return to their homes and then come back to Council. If we judge the matter from that point of view what do we find? There are cities, towns and localities far more accessible, far more central and important than either Simla or Delhi. My proposition, your Lordship will observe, does not rule out Simla or Delhi, but it asks that the Government of India should be located in one place which should, as far as possible, be central. In the course of the few remarks that I shall have to make, I will endeavour to examine the position, to see whether we cannot fix a site or place which will be more central and accessible and which would stand the test of future requirements. We find that so far as Simla is concerned, it cannot be a winter Capital; if Simla is to be one Capital, we must have another Capital, whether it be Delhi or any other place. If we take up the question of Simla, then we find we are wedded to two Capitals. The present arrangement assumes that we shall have to stay there for five or six months; hitherto there has been but one Session of about a month held there In the circumstances, I have depicted, there would be a vital change and the Council would or may have to sit very often during those five or six months. Under these circumstances, would your Lordship think it expedient that the Capital should be relegated to a remote corner of the Himalayas not accessible to the population living south of the Vindhyas? So far as Simla is concerned, if a man has to come from Tinnevelly he has to travel six or seven days continuously, the distance being 2,200 miles; from Madras it is 1,800, and the journey is performed in five days. In the case of Delhi the journey is twelve hours shorter. There is absolutely no chance for any man from the Madras Presidency who has any other engagements being able to go back during the middle of a Session. Now, let us look at the matter from the point of view of the other Provinces. In the case of Burma, Assam, Eastern Bengal, the southern portion of Bombay, and the Central Provinces, the position is nearly the same. You will find that it is only convenient to the Punjab, the western portion of the United Provinces and possibly Sindh. Two principles emerge from a consideration of the problem. Are we to have a Capital wholly or for some time in a place where members as well as the Government can seek advice from business-men, commercial men, eminent lawyers, where public opinion exists, regard being had to the intricate nature of the problems which would confront the Government of India and the Council, relating to commerce, industry and currency? Or are we to shut ourselves up in some remote fastnesses of the Himalayas having regard to the one consideration that we should be able to turn out more work in a colder climate? Is the physical convenience to be the sole data, the sole criterion, or are we to consider other factors as well? If you say there are certain advantages in being able to take a detached view, a wider outlook like the Rishis of old, from a place in the Himalayas, then certainly I cannot say that there is absolutely nothing in it. The question would be which would be the more convenient? I have tried to work out the merits of several places having regard to the above factors. Judged from the point of view of convenience the Central Provinces is very favourably situated. I am told that in the Central Provinces the elevated tableland of Pachmarhi is fairly cool and healthy. I will not say nearly or half as comfortable as Simla, but it is fairly habitable for Europeans. If you cannot find a place in the Central Provinces then you must look elsewhere, having regard to the general convenience of the 244 millions forming the population of British India. Calcutta would serve the convenience of 175 to 200 millions, and though it would be inconvenient to the Punjab and the West Coast, it would at any rate be far more convenient than either Simla or Delhi to a larger number of people and their representatives, and much less inconvenient than either Simla or Delhi is to the south. In the case of Burma, Assam, Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, the Central Provinces, the East Coast of Madras and the east of the United Provinces, a Capital either at Calcutta or at Ranchi would be absolutely convenient. With regard to Ranchi that is a place where you can live practically all the year through with perhaps a short holiday. As regards that even the House of Commons takes a holiday of two months, and I do not see why the Legislative Assemblies should not take a holiday Perhaps it may not be possible always for members to proceed to their homes often but the means of transport have been improved and Ranchi would afford a convenient centre. I cannot understand how the Government of India in 1911 were able to say that Delhi was geographically central and well-suited and Calcutta was a hopeless place. I am not here advocating the selection of Calcutta; it is a matter of absolute indifference to me in so far as the Madras Presidency is concerned; possibly some of us may like to have a calmer atmosphere But, my Lord, the considerations which weighed with the Government of India in 1911 would not be paramount hereafter, because each Province would jealously watch its interests, and no minority community would be able to assert itself in the way in which it was able to assert itself in the past by securing official patronage and assistance.

"Then, my Lord, from the point of view that the Capital should be situated in a place from which a detached view can be taken, I would respectfully submit that Ranchi or a place in the Central Provinces would be an ideal centre, for this reason that you would be in touch with, though not in the midst of, a majority community of Hindi-speaking people numbering 110 millions; and you will not be inaccessible to the community next in importance, I mean the Bengalees; and everybody would have fair play and equal advantage. Therefore I submit, my Lord, from the point of detachment, from the point of view of not identifying yourself with any particular community, from the point of view also of the safety of the Capital in not placing itself too much in the hands of any particular community, race or creed, you would be locating the Capital in a position of great advantage.

"Then, my Lord, there is another point of view from which I look at this question, and that is, that of the Native States. From their standpoint you will find that the present arrangements are mainly advantageous to the people of British Baluchistan, Punjab and a part of Rajputana and Kashmir. I am not going to minimise their political importance, the heroism, valour or their usefulness to the general interest But you will find that they occupy only about 3-10th of the area and a small proportion of the population of the Native States, whereas a place in the Central Provinces, Bombay, or Nasik or Poona, would be more readily accessible and would be far more convenient to Native States in Central India, Rajputana and Southern India, including Hyderabad, than Simla or Delhi.

"Then, my Lord, the question would arise as to whether the military traditions and ancient historic associations should not have some play in our imagination in fixing the Capital. I quite admit, my Lord, that they are a factor and have paramount importance under certain conditions. Whether you are living in the midst of warlike people ready to strike at a moment's notice, whether you are in a place with the army near you, are matters of paramount consideration, in troublous times and under autocratic rule, and that was partly the reason why the early Mohammadan invaders fixed upon Delhi when they came to India. Now the British Government is to be broad based upon the will of the people. It is to be no longer anxiously dependent upon the good-will of any particular religion or section of the community. It will look for support to all communities, and therefore the strategic importance of particular places loses all the significance of the fact. If we can secure historic associations, well and good; but if other considerations are more paramount, then, I submit, they should be allowed to have their sway.

"There is one question, my Lord, and that is a very important question as to whether it would be possible for this Government to re-consider this question with so many troubles already in their hands and the King having already selected Delhi. But I feel, my Lord, that His Majesty himself would be the first to suggest and agree to a new course of action when he is told that the Reforms cannot be a success unless easy access is given to the various communities which will have to be benefited thereby, and His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales on behalf of the King will inaugurate, if necessary, a new policy, and I do not see why the advisers of His Majesty should hesitate if really they are convinced that such a step is essential to make the Reforms a success I submit, my Lord, therefore, that this difficulty which is based upon sentiment and upon the Royal pledge can be obviated having regard to the fact that the circumstances which called into being that pledge and that decision have passed away. I, therefore, submit that whether we look at it from the point of view of the Government of India giving a lead to the other Provinces, or the inadvisability of living in inaccessible places absolutely out of touch with public opinion, or of the convenience to the Native States, Simla seems to me to be hopelessly out of the question, and Delhi is nearly so But if Ranchi is out of the question, if you cannot find a place in the Central Provinces, if Bombay, Nasik or Poona are out of the question, if your Lordship after inquiry cannot find any convenient central place, and Dehra Dun or Mussoorie are in no way better than Simla, then Delhi should be made the sole Capital so that new institutions and traditions may grow up, and public opinion may be fostered.

"The Government of India said in 1911 that the places that were selected in the past—and they alluded possibly to Nasik, Dehra Dun, etc.,—were either devoid of historic associations or were inaccessible. I have given my reasons both for and against the contention that a suitable centre other than Delhi cannot be found. But historic associations were necessary in 1911 for the autocratic rule contemplated this, but they will no longer be needed in the future. At any rate they lose their significance at the present moment.

"Then comes the question of expenditure, my Lord. I submit you have spent about 3½ crores upon Delhi. But in a matter of such vital importance the point really is not of such very great significance, because if you have to build two Capitals, you have to incur a very large expenditure indeed. Assuming, that you have wasted some money upon one of two Capitals already, in choosing a new and sole Capital, your expenditure would not be greater than when you have to build two Capitals. Therefore that argument is not altogether unanswerable.

"Then, my Lord, you are going to write off about 37 crores on account of the depreciation of Securities in the Paper Currency reserve and 3½ would not mean much, if the loss has to be incurred by reason of unforeseen changes; and it may be, my Lord, the country,—I do not say upon our vote, but upon the vote of the people as it may be given on this special question,—when the new Councils sit, would endorse the change, and it is not such a very large sum as the country cannot spare for the efficient and proper working of the Reforms.

[11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma; The President]

"Then again, my Lord, in the Times and other British and Indian newspapers we have statements made bitterly complaining that owing to the military authorities ruling from Simla campaigns have broken down and mishaps have occurred. I am not going to say that all these criticisms are well founded, but there is this to be said that perhaps Simla has far too alluring a climate to allow necessary action being taken promptly in an emergency. At any rate our experience has not been happy, and I do not think that our North-West Frontier and other troubles cannot be met if the Government of India headquarters is situated outside the Punjab. Nor do I think that recent events show that it is absolutely necessary that the Government of India should be identified with the military races of the Punjab. I think the Government of India would have escaped blame to a larger extent if they had been outside these danger zones, and I therefore submit that the considerations which weighed with the Government of India when they left Calcutta are the very considerations which, I think, would justify me in saying, if there is any value in these considerations, that the Government of India might very well choose a new seat. My Lord, His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has a very large army and staff, and he could use these buildings which have cost 3½ crores for them and—I do not know if His Excellency will thank me for the suggestion—at any rate for ten months in the year they could live there The Council may think that another suggestion I shall make is fanciful, but I can assure your Lordship that we cannot have a federated India except on a new basis, and the 110 millions of Hindi-speaking people will find three or four capitals necessary—Delhi would be one of them; the money may thus not be wasted altogether. I submit that the buildings which have already been completed can be utilised by the clerks of the various departments I alluded to, and I therefore submit that this money need not be treated as wasted. I have already argued that, even if it should be treated as to some extent wasted, it is a necessary waste—

The President:—"The Hon'ble Member has three minutes more."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"Then, my Lord, I would just invite your Lordship's attention and the attention of the Council to the fact that, reading the past history of India, we find that the Capital was situated owing to various reasons, not always in one place but in different Provinces at different times, and too much value need not be attached to the circumstances that Delhi was the Capital. You had Pataliputra for several centuries. I suppose the old traditions of Magadha are surviving there and would be available if Ranchi be selected. You built up a Government in Calcutta and Calcutta people would welcome you back. Allahabad is central and, I think, my Hon'ble friend the Pandit would gives us a welcome readily there. Though Delhi was, owing to its central position in upper Hindustan the Capital of the Mughuls; Poona was the Capital of the Mahrattas who held preponderating power when the British defeated them in 1818 Therefore the fact that Delhi was a Capital for some time is not of such very great importance. And may I also allude to one fact referred to in the 1911 Despatch? The advisers of the Crown seem to think that if the Capital were removed to Delhi, Indian sentiment was so much in favour of Delhi as to associate the permanence of British rule with the Capital being at Delhi. That seemed to be a paramount consideration which weighed with them. I think there was a mistake. I do not say there is a prejudice against Delhi, but somehow it was considered by the people to be the grave of Empires, and I do not think any one would be offending Indian sentiment by suggesting that Delhi need not necessarily be the Capital; and I therefore submit that this consideration of Delhi having been the Capital of the ancient Hindu and Muhammadan Kings has been pushed too far, and I think your Lordship would have an equally good place, convenient to all and liked by all in any of the localities I have suggested, and your Lordship may appoint a committee to investigate the question. The next Councils will take it up and in the meantime much expenditure will have been incurred, and we may be involved in the painful necessity of sacrificing not 3½ crores, but 10 crores of rupees. But if your Lordship thinks that Delhi cannot be touched on any account, then I hope your Lordship will stay here always, with the exception of one or two months in the year, if need be, so that there may be traditions and institutions growing up here, and healthy public opinion may be fostered and commercial and manufacturing institutions encouraged, so that Delhi may be a Capital in the course of a few years to which we can all look with pride, whereas at the present moment its buildings are deserted for five or six or seven months in the year. It will be a deserted village, even under the present proposals, and I do not see any reason why so much money should be wasted on a Capital which would be practically deserted for seven months in the year. I therefore submit that every consideration is in favour of a central locality being selected which would be accessible to all."

4-27 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda:—" My Lord, I beg to move the following amendment to this Resolution, namely,' that for the words 'permanently located in one place and that a suitable centre may, if necessary, be selected for the purpose,' the words 'located in Calcutta subject to such modifications, if any, of the old practice according to which the Government of India are in Calcutta during certain months of the year and otherwise as may be considered necessary or desirable by the Government' be substituted.

"My Lord, as I have only half the time allowed to the mover of a Resolution I shall not make a long speech, but shall simply call attention to this matter with which we are all of us more or less familiar. My Lord, I am fortunate in that half my work has been done for me by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma. In his admirable speech he has destroyed the case of any supposed necessity of the location of the Government of India either in Simla or Delhi, and his speech on the whole is really in favour of my proposition that the Government of India should go back to Calcutta. Of course he has taken up a number of other questions as well, and to these I shall come presently. Now, my Lord, we know that Calcutta ceased to be the Capital and Delhi was made the Capital by Lord Hardinge in 1912. His main idea was that the Government of India should reside for seven months in the year at Delhi and five months at Simla. I do not think our past experience for the last eight years would justify any one in claiming that that experiment has been much of a success. My Hon'ble friend has himself shown that it has not been so. The question arises, what is to be done? Now there are three grounds mentioned in the Despatch of Lord Hardinge transferring the Capital. The first was that it was an anomaly that the Government of India should be in the same city with a Provincial Government, that is the Government of Bengal for three or four months in the year. In the second place, it was said that there was special importance attached to the Council of India under the Minto-Morley scheme which made it imperative that it should be removed to a more central and easily accessible place, and, thirdly, political considerations arising out of the ill-fated Partition of Bengal.

"Now, so far as the last-mentioned ground goes, I think it has no application now. I cannot conceive what difficulties or complications will arise if the Government of India were to move back to Calcutta to-day, and I do not think I need further consider this ground.

"Of the other two, taking the first point, namely, that the Government of India should not be in the same place with the Provincial Government, the Council may recollect that in September last I moved a Resolution at Simla that Simla should cease to be the summer headquarters of the Punjab Government, and in support of my proposition I quoted a Despatch of Lord Curzon's Government to the effect that if it was bad for the Government of India—I am quoting his very words—'if it was bad that the Government of India should be in Calcutta with the Government of Bengal for three or four months in the year, it was infinitely worse that it should be with the Government of the Punjab for eight months in the year.' The Hon'ble the Home Member opposed me, but I doubt very much, in view of what he said, that that is the view at the present time of the Government of India. This is what the Hon'ble the Home Member said, my Lord—I am quoting his words:—'Briefly stated, the reasons were that there were certain political advantages in having the headquarters of the Local Government and that of the Imperial Government in the same place; that the disadvantages arising out of such an arrangement were much over-estimated.' Now, my Lord, if my Hon'ble friend adheres to that view now, there is an end of this argument based upon the association of the Government of India and the Government of Bengal in the same place. If, on the other hand, he changes his opinion in view of his experience of the last five months, well then I shall claim to be entitled to have his support if I move again that Simla should cease to be the summer headquarters of both these Governments. But in any case, my Lord, if the Government of India thinks that it is a condition precedent to its removal back to Calcutta that the Government of Bengal should not remain there, I do not think the difficulty would be insurmountable. Of course I do not pretend that I have got a cut and dry scheme at my hand, or that I should ask the Government of India to decide offhand. All I do, my Lord, is to call your attention to this point and to ask you to investigate the matter again, to examine the question along with the proposition of my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma or by itself and see whether something ought not to be done. Of course Delhi is out of the question, as my friend has shown.

"Then, coming to the second point, namely, that by reason of the Minto-Morley scheme it was necessary that the Council should sit at a place which is central and easily accessible, I say that this is my case, though I do not say that it should be central from a geographical point of view alone, but what is wanted is, that it must be convenient; but, I think, I might even claim that Calcutta is practically geographically central if you take Burma into consideration. However, I do not rest my case on that point As my friend Mr. Sarma has shown of the 100 members whom you are going to have in the Legislative Assembly, fully 63 will find Calcutta more convenient than Delhi—I do not go into details as my friend has given them. Not only that, but at least 19½ of the 34 members of the Council of State will find Calcutta more convenient. Well that is an important point, my Lord, that not only the number of members will be five times the present number, but you will have to provide for longer Sessions of this Council, and you will have to see that the conditions of membership should be made as little irksome as possible so that the scheme might work out satisfactorily.

"My Lord, these are my answers with regard to these questions. My submission with regard to the second point is that, on the whole, Calcutta is more convenient than Delhi, and so far as climate goes, my Lord, I do not think that Calcutta in the month of March is more unfavourable than Delhi has been during the last week; at any rate in the present time there has been a great change in the climate of Calcutta, with the electric fan.

"Then, my Lord, there is another further point, the question of cost which must be considered. It may be said that we have spent such a large amount of money on New Delhi, all this will have been thrown away if we have to abandon Delhi. But I do not ask you to abandon New Delhi as Akbar did in the case of Fatehpur Sikri We do require a ceremonial Capital. We have had three Durbars in the past, one in the time of Lord Lytton, one in the time of Lord Curzon, and a third one, the last Coronation Durbar. My Lord, all these three Durbars were held in this Imperial City although Calcutta was the Capital of India at the time. I do not think any one will say that we shall have no more Durbars in the future. Let this New Delhi be the habitation of the future Durbars. There may be other ceremonies. Your Excellency will have to meet the Indian Princes Let this remain for that purpose. Besides, with improved communications, with the latest scientific modes of locomotion, with direct railway communication between India and Europe in prospect, may we not hope that our beloved

[Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda.] [11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

Sovereign and the members of the Royal Family will find it possible to visit India more frequently than they do now. In that case, New Delhi would remain for the residence of His Majesty the King-Emperor and the members of the Royal Family whenever they come to India. I say do not abandon it. In the second place, if you think you connot have Delhi except it be the Capital of India, and therefore if you abandon Delhi as the Capital of India all the money would have been wasted, I say it will not be waste; it will be real economy. We have already spent a large amount of money on it; I am indebted to the courtesy of my Hon'ble friend Mr. Cook for the figures, and it now appears that up to the present we have spent more then 4½ crores. What is the net result, my Lord? A few roads, a few staff quarters and the Viceregal Court plinth Can any one tell how many crores will have to be sunk if this place is to be completed? Of course I do not make any charge against the Department over which the Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill presides if I say the estimates of the Department are not reliable No one can predict what money will be required, what more needs to be done. I say, my Lord, that you will require far less money for making Calcutta fit for your residence than you will require in completing work on Delhi. I think it will be more economical, it will be better not to throw good money after bad and to stop work in Delhi. These are my submissions, my Lord, and I think you ought to decide in favour of Calcutta.

"I say, my Lord, you may select any place you please As Mr. Sarma has said if Delhi and Simla are out of place, well, select another place, but whatever place you select, it is obviously reasonable, obviously desirable that in your selection you should be guided not merely by considerations of climate and situation, but by other matters also. You must see that there is a healthy public opinion in the place, the pressure of which can be brought to bear upon the consideration of important matters; you must see that there is a strong well-conducted press, that there are influential public bodies, commercial and political, the members of which can be approached at any moment for advice, where commercial, banking and currency questions crop up, that there are eminent lawyers who would help us at any time we may go to them. My Lord, this is always desirable; it has now become imperative after the passing of the Reform Act. The Reform Act does not confer any element of responsibility on the Central Government, and it is very necessary, therefore, my Lord, that it should remain in living touch in close contact with healthy public opinion; otherwise pitfalls are inevitable—we know that to our cost, I need not quote instances. You must remain in close contact with healthy public opinion. This is impossible in Delhi, impracticable in Simla. If you look at the matter from a dispassionate point of view, you will find that all things considered there are only two places in India, either of which can be selected on this ground as the Capital of India, Bombay and Calcutta Taking everything into consideration I submit, my Lord, Calcutta has a superior claim. It is a City which owes its creation entirely to British rule. There was no town in Calcutta before the British came, it was full of jungles. You have made it what it is. It is bound up in the public imagination with the rise and growth of British power in India and in the East; and it was the Capital of India from the earliest commencement of the British connection in this country for about 150 years. It has public opinion, public life; it is a most important strategic point in the East; it is the highway to far eastern commerce and trans-Pacific communications. It has public buildings which are simply incomparable which are yet at the disposal of the Government of India. There is a residence for your Excellency, and furthermore, there is at the present moment nearly finished a building which can be of great use to us, the Victoria Memorial. I am not an expert, but I speak on the authority of the Statesman and Englishman of Calcutta that experts certify that you cannot have a more admirable Council Chamber than the Durbar Hall of the Victoria Memorial building. It has galleries, divisional lobbies, committee rooms, library; and you cannot imagine a more splendid mansion for this purpose . . .

[11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [The President; Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda; Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha.]

The President:—"The Hon'ble Member's time is up."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda:—"I am summing up.

The President:—"Please move your amendment.'

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda:—"With these words, my Lord, I commend this amendment to the Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha:—"My Lord, I have listened very carefully to the speeches of Mr. Sarma and Mr. Chanda, but I am sorry to say that I have remained unconvinced that there is any occasion for the moving of this Resolution or of the amendment. Mr. Sarma's Resolution, my Lord, runs to the effect that the headquarters of the Government of India be permanently located in one place and that a suitable centre may, if necessary, be selected for the purpose. He did not explain, or at any rate I did not quite understand, what he meant by the use of the word 'permanent'. I think the headquarters of the Government of India are quite permanently installed in Delhi and Simla, and if he meant something else he should have explained it. What he probably meant to convey was that the seat of the Government of India should remain all the year round in a particular place. That may be, my Lord, a very ideal suggestion; and personally if I knew of a place where I could locate your Excellency's Government all the year round, I should vote for the Resolution gladly. But Mr. Sarma does not ask your Excellency's Government to refer the matter to a committee of experts to find out, after due inquiry, if there be such a place in the country. He urges upon your Excellency's Government the immediate removal of the headquarters of the Government from Delhi to some place where the Government can stay all the year round. It is, therefore, that I feel confronted with a great difficulty, as I do not know of any particular place in the plains of the country, where the Government can be located all the twelve months. If it comes to locating the Government at some hill-station, Simla or Ootacamund, I do not think Mr. Sarma himself would very much like to stay there in December or January, and I do not think he recommends that. 1-48 P.M.

"I think, therefore, this is really a question which does not strike one as being within the range of practical politics. We cannot be chopping and changing the seat of our Government every few years, like the Sultan Muhammedbin Tughlak who removed the Capital from Delhi to Daulatabad in the south and back to Delhi again. I do not think we associate that sort of thing with the British Government. I do not think this problem, therefore, enters for discussion on a sound basis. It is only about eight years since His Majesty the King-Emperor made in this very City this declaration: 'We are pleased to announce to our people that . . . we have decided upon the transfer of the seat of the Government of India from Calcutta to the ancient Capital Delhi', and the words which follow are important, 'and as a consequence of that transfer the creation, at as early a date as possible, of a Governor for the Presidency of Bengal and of a new Lieutenant-Governorship in Council for the Province of Bihar and Orissa.' Now, if as His Majesty declared and as Lord Crewe had pointed out in the Despatch accepting the Government of India's proposals that all these three propositions, namely, the transfer of the Capital, the creation of a Governorship for Bengal and a Lieutenant-Governorship in Council for Bihar and Orissa,' were 'interdependent proposals,' I do not think that this Council would be well-advised in splitting up these three things and taking up and disposing of each of them one by one. I do not think, my Lord, therefore, a case has been made out by Mr. Sarma for accepting his proposition.

[Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha.] [11TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

"As for Mr. Chanda's proposal that Calcutta be restored to her former position as the Capital, I tried to follow his arguments as carefully as I could, but I do not think he said one single word in its favour except, perhaps, that your Lordship has been pleased to stay there for six weeks or so during the past two or three years. But I do not think the Government would like to stay there all the year round or can do so. I do not think Mr. Chanda said a word about this all the year round aspect; he simply pronounced a glowing panegyric on Calcutta, and appealed to, or tried to appeal to, the instincts of my European colleagues here by referring to something which Job Charnock did some years back; but I do not think he really said anything to satisfy us that Calcutta was a place where the Government could stay all the year round. Mr. Sarma referred casually to Ranchi in Bihar and Orissa as a place where the Government could stay throughout the year. Personally, as a Beharee, I shall be very happy to take your Lordship there and the whole of your Government, but before we can dispose of these matters satisfactorily, we must have materials to act upon. We have got no expert opinion that the Government of India can stay at any one place permanently for throughout the year. We must have some information, on the point, and as the Resolution does not ask for such information, but merely asks that the Government should instal themselves permanently at some undefined place, I must oppose this Resolution, as well as the amendment."

The Council adjourned till Wednesday, the 18th February 1920, at 11 o'clock.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Rainfall summary for the seven days ending at 8 hrs. on Thursday, the 19th February 1920, based on the Indian Daily Weather Reports of the period.

1. Two disturbances from the west passed into India during the week. The first entered Baluchistan on the 12th and, advancing eastwards through the central parts of the country, disappeared over the Bay on the 16th; rainfall due to it occurred mainly in Upper Burma and along the coast of the Bay from Waltair to Akyab. The second disturbance was causing cloud in Kashmir and along the northwest frontier from the 16th, but had given only a few falls of rain in Baluchistan and the North-West Frontier Province by the morning of the 19th. Towards the end of the week a few falls of rain occurred in Mysore.

2. Burma.—In Upper Burma rain fell locally on the 16th and there were a few falls on one other day. In Lower Burma Akyab was the only station that received rain during the week.

Northeast India, including Orissa.—Local rain fell in Orissa on the 15th, and in deltaic and southeast Bengal on the 14th and 15th. In Assam rainfall was limited to a few falls, while in Chota Nagpur and Bihar the week was rainless.

The United Provinces, Central India and the Central Provinces.—There was no rain.

Northwest India.—Weather was dry except for moderate falls of rain at Kalat and Parachinar.

The Peninsula.—On the north Madras coast rainfall was local on the 16th and occurred at a few stations on one other day. There were a few falls in Mysore on the 17th. Over the rest of the division weather was dry.

3. The chief amounts of rainfall reported were as follows :—

February 12th.	Darjiling 0·21″.
„ 15th.	Akyab 0·26″, Shillong 0·22″, Cox's Bazar 0·54″, Narayanganj 0·61″, Barisal 0·30″, Jessore 0·29″, Balasore 0·70″ and False Point 0·63″.

4. The week's rainfall was 20 per cent or more in excess in Mysore and the Madras Coast North; and was 20 per cent or more in defect in the Bay Islands, Lower Burma, Assam, Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, the United Provinces, the Punjab, Kashmir, the North-West Frontier Province, Baluchistan, Sind, Rajputana, Central India East, Berar, the Central Provinces, Hyderabad, Malabar and Madras Southeast. It was normal in Upper Burma. No rain usually falls at this time of year in Gujarat, Central India West, the Konkan, the Bombay Deccan and the Madras Deccan.

The rainfall from the 28th November to date is 20 per cent or more in defect in Assam, Orissa, Chota Nagpur, the United Provinces, Baluchistan, Rajputana West, Central India East and the Central Provinces East; and is 20 per cent or more in excess in the Bay Islands, Upper Burma, Bengal, the Punjab Southwest, the North-West Frontier Province, Gujarat, Central India West, Berar, the Konkan, the Bombay Deccan, Hyderabad, Mysore and the Madras Presidency. It differs from the normal by less than 20 per cent in the remaining divisions.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 14th February 1920.

Burma.—The week was practically rainless. Threshing and winnowing of winter rice are nearing completion in Upper Burma. Cultivation of island crops and spring rice is progressing normally. Harvesting of millet, gram, peas and beans is proceeding. Standing crops are generally satisfactory. Cattle are generally healthy. In the Amherst district the number of persons on relief works remained unchanged at 2,300 and that receiving gratuitous relief at 13. The price of unhusked rice at Rangoon remained unchanged at Rs. 180 which is the same as control price and much above normal. The market for white rice is weak at Rs. 440 for specials for want of tonnage.

Assam.—The weather during the week was generally cloudy and favourable to standing crops. Slight rain fell in most districts. Harvesting of pulses has been nearly finished and that of mustard is in progress. Pressing of sugarcane, pruning of tea, transplantation of spring rice, ploughing for autumn rice and jute and preparation of land for jhumming continue. The outturn of sugarcane, mustard and pulses and prospects of other crops are generally fair. Cattle disease is reported from six districts. The price of common rice continues to rise.

Bengal.—Excepting light showers in north Bengal moderate rainfall was general and greatly helped ploughing operations for jute and other autumn crops and was favourable to standing spring crops. Harvesting of spring crops and pressing of sugarcane continue. The average price of common rice has fallen by 0·34 per cent.

Bihar and Orissa.—The rainfall was general and moderate over Orissa and generally light and scattered in ChotaNagpur. There was no rain in Bihar. Pressing of sugarcane still continues in some districts. Harvesting of oilseeds and preparation of lands have commenced. Standing crops are doing well. The price of common rice has risen in three districts, fallen in six and remained stationary in the remaining districts as compared with that of the preceding week. The average price of local common rice at headquarters was 6·36 seers a rupee against 6·34 seers in the preceding week and that of maize was 7·64 seers against 7·41 seers in the preceding week. Cattle disease is reported from six districts. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa and Chota Nagpur is good.

United Provinces.—The rainfall during the week was insignificant. Slight damage to crops by frost is reported from certain districts. Preparation of land for and sowing of sugarcane and extra crops, irrigation of spring crops and poppy and pressing of sugarcane continue. Standing crops are doing well. Prospects are favourable. The condition of agricultural stock is satisfactory. Fodder, water and market supplies are sufficient. prices are almost stationary with a tendency to fall in some districts.

Punjab.—Light rain fell in parts of a few districts and was useful. The condition of standing wheat and other spring crops is average to good. Pressing of sugarcane continues in some districts with yield normal to above normal. Toria is being harvested in parts of the west. The yield is generally normal. Sowings of extra spring crops which still continue in some districts are normal. Cattle are healthy. Fodder is generally sufficient as well as water for drinking and irrigation purposes. Prices are generally stationary and above scarcity rates. Price of wheat :—Rawalpindi 5¾, Ambala, Lahore and Ferozepore 6¾, and Lyallpur 7¾ seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—During the week light showers fell in one district. Harvesting of sugarcane is in progress. The outturn is average. The condition of standing crops is average but some spring crops have been damaged by cold winds in one district. Wheat in Peshawar is selling at 7 and in Dera Ismail Khan at 5 seers per rupee.

Jammu.—Slight rain fell during the week. Prices are stationary. Fodder is sufficient.

Kashmir.—The weather is clear but bitterly cold. Spring crops in Muzafferabad are in good condition but elsewhere they are under snow. Prices are fluctuating. Cattle disease prevails in Gurez.

Rajputana.—The weather is cold. Slight showers are reported from some places. Spring crops are being weeded and irrigated. The condition of standing crops and their probable outturn are fair to good but damage is reported from intense frost generally and from hail storms locally. Cattle are generally good. Fodder and water are adequate. Prices are stationary.

Central India.—The rainfall during the week was partial in Gwalior. Harvesting of autumn crops continues in Malwa and the Southern States. Sowing and pressing of sugarcane continue in Gwalior. Lands are being prepared for autumn crops in the Southern States. Standing crops and their probable outturn are fair to good. Damage is reported in Bundelkhand for want of rain, in the Southern States by frost and in certain parganas of Indore by extreme cold. Agricultural stock is generally in good condition. Prices are high. Opium is being irrigated and weeded in Indore and Dhar and has been damaged in Sitamau and Piploda.

Central Provinces.—The weather has been clear and cool with occasional clouds. Nights and mornings are cool but days are getting warm. Picking of cotton has been almost completed. Pulses have been damaged slightly in parts of several districts by frost, rust and insects. Otherwise spring crops are faring well and prospects are unusually good. Reaping of spring crops is proceeding in places. Cattle disease prevails in parts of fourteen districts. Fodder and water are adequate. Gram fell in Hoshangabad and juar rose in Yeotmal by one seer per rupee. Other variations are unimportant but exhibit a downward tendency.

Feudatory States:—Spring crops are being gathered.

Bombay.—The rainfall during the week was slight and beneficial in parts of Sind, the Panch Mahals and Kathiawar. Standing crops have been slightly injured by frost in Sind and by insects in parts of Karachi and are flourishing elsewhere. Cotton picking continues in parts of Sind, Gujarat and Rewa Kantha. Lands are being prepared for the next season's crops in Karachi, Hyderabad, Kanara, East Khandesh and Kathiawar. The supply of fodder and water is adequate. Agricultural stock is generally sufficient. Cattle are generally good. Prices of food-grains are high but generally steady.

Hyderabad.—No rain fell during the week. Standing spring crops are generally fair but have been damaged by insects in parts of the Gulbarga, Raichur, Mahbubnagar, Nalgonda and Warangal districts. Harvesting is in general progress. The late rice crop is in fair to good condition and is being weeded. Stocks of fodder are sufficient. The water supply is good except in Parbhani and Hadgaon. Cattle disease is prevalent in the Raichur, Nalgonda, Warangal, Karimnagar and Adilabad districts. Prices of grains continue to be high. Juar is selling at 3¾ seers per rupee in the Raichur district.

The weekly report on famine for week ending 29th January is as follows:—Famine situation is likely to increase in the affected parts. The number of persons on relief is increasing in a few camps. Prices of grains continue to be high. Juar is selling at 6½ and rice at 3¼ seers per rupee. Number on relief in thousands:—works 6, gratuitous 6, total 12.

The weekly report on famine for week ending 5th February is as follows:—Distress continues though the number of persons on relief shows slight decrease. Prices of grains show an upward tendency. Juar is selling at 6½ and rice at 3¼ seers per rupee. Number on relief in thousands:—works 6, gratuitous 3, total 9.

Mysore.—The week was rainless. Standing crops are in good condition. Cattle are generally healthy and fodder is available. Prices of food-grains are high and fluctuating. Prospects of the season are good. Harvesting of paddy, ragi and sugarcane is proceeding with outturn fair to good.

Coorg.—The weather is dry. Threshing of rice and picking of coffee continue. Cattle are generally healthy. Water and fodder for cattle are available. The public health is fair. Prices of food-grains are high. Considerable exports to Malabar of paddy continue.

Madras.—The rainfall during the week was light in parts of the Circars. Standing crops are fair generally. The outturn of the harvested paddy and dry crops is generally fair. Fresh sowings of paddy and dry crops are progressing. The condition of cattle is good generally. Water is generally sufficient. Pasture and fodder are sufficient generally. Prices are generally steady. Prospects are fair generally.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

ESTABLISHMENTS.

Delhi, the 20th February 1920.

SERVICES RENDERED TO A WAR OR EMPLOYMENT AND LABOUR BOARD TO COUNT AS WAR SERVICE FOR PREFERENTIAL TREATMENT IN OBTAINING GOVERNMENT EMPLOYMENT.

RESOLUTION.

The Government of India have recently had under consideration the question whether service rendered in a War Board (including a Publicity Board) or in an Employment and Labour Board can be regarded as service for the purposes of paragraph 2 (c) of the Home Department Resolution no. 1069 (Establishments), dated the 8th August 1919, and are pleased to direct that service of the sort in question shall be so regarded.

Order.—Ordered that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to all local Governments and Administrations, the several Departments of the Government of India (including the Financial Adviser, Military Finance), and the offices subordinate to this Department, for information and guidance.

Ordered also that it be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India for general information.

APPLICATION FOR AMENDMENT UNDER SECTION 17.

Notice is hereby given that all persons interested in opposing the following applications to amend at any time within three months of the date of this Gazette of India give notice at the Patent Office in the prescribed form No. 5 of such opposition.

No. 4937 of 1919. Eliezer Vinograd, of 1911 Prospect Avenue, Bronx, New York City, U. S. A., and Maximilian N. Groten, of 235 West 108th Street, New York City, U. S. A., seek leave to amend the specification of their patent numbered as above. The proposed amendments as shown in the printed specification are as follows :—

In the name of the second applicant read "Groten" for "Grotent" as surname wherever it occurs.
Page 1, line 27. Substitute "having a thread" for "and is pierced" after "hook 20" and "and a nut 19*a* with pivots" for "by the cross pin" after "end."
,, line 28. Substitute "excentric" for "cam" before "22" and omit the last word "cross."
,, line 2. Substitute "excentric" for "cam."
,, line 9. Insert "at one end a finger 30*a* for keeping the coupler in a rigid straight line and on the other end" after "having."
,, line 10. Substitute "elevated" for "desired."
,, line 14. ,, "head" for "bar."
,, line 18. ,, "excentric" for "cam."
,, line 44. ,, "excentric" for "cams" and "washer" for "cross bar."
,, line 49. ,, "excentric" for "cams."
,, line 51. ,, "excentric" for "cams."
,, line 52. ,, "excentric" for "cam."
Page 3, lines 12-14 ,, "so the coupler could be kept rigid in a straight line by means of two supports 69*a* and lock nuts 69*b* which are carried on both ends of the screw" for "and which is ...... rod 55."
,, claim 2, line 2 read "elevating" for "elvating."
Insert certain reference numerals and lines in the figures 1, 2, 3, 5, 6 and 12 of the drawings.

CESSATION OF EXCLUSIVE PRIVILEGES.

The public are warned that entries under this heading must not be accepted as final, as under the provisions of Rules 9 and 11 of "The Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1915," the Controller may extend the time prescribed by the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, and by the Inventions and Designs Act, 1888, for paying the necessary renewal fees.

The Patent Office will supply on request definite information, so far as possible, as to the position of any particular Patent or Exclusive Privilege.

NOTICES.

THE PATENT OFFICE, 1, COUNCIL HOUSE STREET, CALCUTTA.

Public room, open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

1. All communications relating to applications for patents and for registration of designs under the Indian Patents and Designs Act (II of 1911), or in continuation of applications under the Inventions and Designs Act (V of 1888) must be made in English and addressed to the Controller of Patents and Designs, 1, Council House Street, Calcutta. Documents sent by post should be carefully packed and a full address given in all communications.

2. Directions for the guidance of inventors and others are given in the Patent Office Handbook (price one rupee) which contains the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, the Indian Patents and Designs Rules, 1912, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary Rules) Act, 1915, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1915, together with current regulations and instructions. These should be consulted before an application is made to the Controller.

3. Advice. The Patent Office cannot undertake (1) to give opinions on the interpretation of Patent Law, or on the advisability of protecting inventions and designs or on their infringement; (2) to make searches in respect of information available in the public room; (3) to recommend any particular agent; or (4) to assist in the disposal of inventions. Models are not required unless specially asked for. Drawings must be on tracing cloth and the Rules and Instructions for the preparation of drawings as given in the Handbook should be strictly followed. A provisional patent cannot be secured under the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911.

4. Applicants are warned that the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, is in force in British India only, and patents granted under it do not extend to the United Kingdom or any of the British possessions. The International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property does not include India. For information regarding patents in countries other than India application should be made to the patent offices in the countries concerned.

5. Fees are payable in cash and must be received in the Patent Office within the time allowed by the Acts. When cheques are offered in payment of fees, it must be clearly understood that the office cannot hold itself responsible for any delay that may occur in the collection of cash on the cheques; any cheque not payable in Calcutta is subject to commission for which due allowance should be made. In cases where it is not possible to have the fees handed in at the Patent Office, it is preferable to send them by money-order or postal order payable at Calcutta to the Controller of Patents and Designs, and to advise him that they have been so sent. Stamps will not be received in payment of fees.

6. Trade and property marks and names are not registered and medicines are not patented under the Indian Patents and Designs Act. There is no provision of Law in British India for their registration. Neither does this Act deal with pictures, photographs, etc., for which copyright is obtainable under the Indian Copyright Act, 1914.

7. Printed Specifications of applications, which have been accepted, are published within about three weeks after acceptance has been notified in the Gazette of India. These specifications can be purchased at the Patent Office at a uniform price of 8 annas per copy; and may be seen free of charge, together with other publications of the Patent Office, at the following places:—

VILLAGE BENCHES AND VILLAGE COURTS. Union, Union.

Village benches. Union.

65. Whenever a village authority has been established for any village, the Local Government may, by notification, appoint any two or more of the members of the said authority to be a village bench, during their term of office as members of the village authority for the trial, in the whole or any part of the village, of the offences specified in schedule IV, if committed within the limits of its jurisdiction. Union Board. Union. Board Union. Union Board. Union.

66. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, the village bench shall have jurisdiction concurrent with that of the Criminal Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the village is situated, for the trial of all offences specified in Schedule IV, part A, and the village bench may try any offence specified in Schedule IV, part B, if the case is transferred to the bench by a district magistrate, subdivisional magistrate or any other magistrate empowered to receive petitions under section 190 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898: Union. Union. Union.

(a) a magistrate before whom a complaint of an offence cognizable by a village bench is brought may transfer the complaint to the village bench; Union. Union.

(b) the district magistrate or subdivisional magistrate may transfer any case from one village bench to another or to any other court subordinate to him. Union.

67. A case before a village bench may be instituted by petition, made orally or in writing to a member of the village bench. If the petition is made orally, the member shall record the name of the petitioner, the name of the person against whom the petition is brought, the nature of the offence and such other particulars, if any, as may be prescribed by rules under section 101, and shall direct the petitioner to appear before the bench. Union. Union.

68. (1) If upon the face of the petition, or on examining the petitioner, the village bench is of opinion that the petition is frivolous, vexatious or untrue, it shall dismiss the case by order in writing. Union.

(2) If at any time it appears to the bench—

(a) that it has no jurisdiction to try the case, or

(b) that the offence is one for which the sentence which the bench is competent to pass would be inadequate, or

(c) that the case is one which should not be tried by the bench, it shall direct the petitioner to the proper court.

69. If in any case before a village bench the petitioner fails to appear on the day fixed, or if in the opinion of the bench he shows negligence in prosecuting his case, the bench may dismiss the case for default, and such order of dismissal shall operate as an acquittal. Union.

70. (1) If the petition be not dismissed the village bench shall, subject to the provisions of section 98, by summons or otherwise, require the accused to appear and answer the petition. Union.

(2) If the accused fails to appear or cannot be found, the bench shall report the fact to the nearest magistrate, who may issue a warrant for the arrest of the accused, and when arrested may forward him for trial to the bench, or release him on bail to appear before it.

(3) The village bench shall, if possible, try the case on the day on which the accused appears or is brought before it; but if that is not possible, the village bench shall release him on his executing a bond for a sum not exceeding twenty-five rupees to appear before the bench on any subsequent day or days to which the trial may be adjourned. Union. Union.

71. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, there shall be no appeal by a convicted person in any case tried by a village bench: Union.

Provided that the district magistrate or subdivisional magistrate, if satisfied that a failure of justice has occurred, may, of his own motion, or in the application of the parties concerned, cancel or modify any order of conviction or of compensation made by a village bench or direct the retrial of any case by a court of competent jurisdiction subordinate to him. Union.

72. (1) A village bench shall record its decision in writing, and may sentence any offender convicted by it to pay a fine not exceeding twenty-five rupees, or in default to imprisonment for a period not exceeding seven days. Union.

(2) If a village bench is satisfied that a complaint made before it or transferred to it for trial is vexatious or frivolous, the bench may order the complainant to pay to the accused such compensation, not exceeding twenty-five rupees in all, as it thinks fit, or in default may sentence the complainant to simple imprisonment for a period not exceeding seven days. Union.

(3) When a person has been sentenced to imprisonment under sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) in default of such payment, if such fine or compensation be not paid or realized within ten days of the passing of the sentence or order, or within such further time, if any, as the bench may allow, the bench may cause him to be arrested and may commit him to the nearest jail to serve his sentence;

Provided that, notwithstanding anything contained in the Indian Penal Code,—

Union. (a) the fine imposed or compensation awarded by a village bench shall not be realized from any person who has served his term of imprisonment under this section;

(b) the person serving his term of imprisonment shall be forthwith realesed, if the fine or compensation is paid before the expiry of the term of imprisonment:

Provided also that no woman shall be sentenced to imprisonment in default of payment of fine or compensation.

Union. Union. (4) All fines realized by the village bench shall be credited to the village fund.

Union. Village courts.

Union. Board Union. Union. Union Board. Union. 73. Whenever a village authority has been established for a village, the Local Government may, by notification, appoint any two or more of the members of the village authority, to be a village court during their term of office as members of the village authority, for the trial, in the whole or any part of the village, of all or any of the classes of civil suits specified in section 74.

Union. Union. 74. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act, 1887, the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887, and the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, and subject to the provisions of sections 75 and 76, the village court and the ordinary civil court, within the local limits of whole jurisidiction the village is situated, shall have concurrent jurisidiction to try the following classes of suits, namely:—

(a) suits for money due on contracts;

(b) suits for the recovery of movable property or the value of such property; and

(c) suits for compensation for wrongfully taking or injuring movable property, when the value of the suit does not exceed two hundred rupees:

Union. provided that, on the application of any defendant made in accordance with the provision of section 81, the court of small causes or court of the munsif, within the local limits of whose jurisidiction the village is situated,—

(i) may withdraw the suit when its value does not exceed twenty-five rupees, and

(ii) shall withdraw the suit when its value exceeds twenty-five rupees,

Union. from a village court for trial by itself.

75. No suit shall lie in any village court—

(1) on a balance of partnership account,

(2) for a share or part of a share under an intestacy, or for a legacy or part of a legacy under a will,

(3) by or against Government or public officers in their official capacity,

(4) by or against minors or persons of unsound mind,

(5) for the assessment, enhancement, reduction, abatement, apportionment or recovery of rent of immovable property, or

(6) by a mortgagee of immovable property for the enforcement of the mortgage by foreclosure or sale of the property or otherwise, or by a mortgagor of immovable property for the redemption of the mortgage.

Union. 76. No suit shall lie in any village court, unless at least one of the defendants resides within the limits of its jurisdiction at the time of the institution of the suit, and the cause of action has arisen wholly or in part within those limits.

Union. 77. (1) A suit before a village court may be instituted by petition made orally or in writing. If the petition is made orally, the court shall record such particulars as may be prescribed by rules under section 101.

Union. 78. (1) If at any time the village court is of opinion that the suit is barred by limitation, the court shall dismiss the suit by order in writing.

(2) If at any time it appears to the court that it has no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, the court shall direct the petitioner to the proper court.

Union. 79. If in any suit before a village court the plaintiff fails to appear on the day fixed, or if in the opinion of the court, he shows negligence in prosecuting his suit, the court may dismiss the suit for default:

Union. Provided that a village court may restore a suit dismissed for default, if within thirty days from the date of such dismissal the plaintiff satisfies the court that he was prevented by sufficient cause from appearing.

Union. 80. If on receiving the petition the village court is satisfied that the trial of the suit may be proceeded with, it shall, by summons or otherwise, require the defendant to appear and answer the suit either orally or in writing.

81. If, before the commencement of the hearing of the suit, the defendant notifies to the village court that he has applied or that he intends to apply under the proviso to section 74 for the transfer of the suit to the court of small causes or the court of the munsif, the village court shall postpone the trial in such a manner as will afford a reasonable time for the application being made and an order being obtained thereon. Union. Union.

82. If the defendant fails to appear, and the village court is satisfied that he has received notice of the date fixed for the hearing, the court may decide the suit ex parte : Union.

Provided that any defendant against whom a suit has been decided ex parte, may, within thirty days from the date of executing any process for enforcement of the decision, apply, orally or in writing, to the village court to set aside the order; and the court, if satisfied that the defendant did not receive due notice of the date of hearing, or was prevented from appearing by any sufficient cause, shall set aside the decision and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit. Union.

83. No decision or order of a village court shall be set aside under section 79 or section 82 unless notice in writing has been served by the village court on the opposite party. Union. Union.

84. (1) Subject to the provisions of clauses (3) and (4) of section 75 the village court shall add as parties to a suit any persons whose presence as parties it considers necessary for a proper decision thereof, and shall enter the names of such parties in the register of suits, and the suit shall be tried as between the parties whose names are entered in the said register : Union.

Provided that when any party is added, notice shall be given to him and he shall be given an opportunity of appearing before the trial of the suit is proceeded with.

(2) In all cases where a new party appears under the proviso to sub-section (1) during the trial of a suit, he may require that the trial shall begin de novo.

85. No village court shall proceed with the trial of any suit in which the matter directly and substantially in dispute is pending for decision in the same court or in any other court in a previously instituted suit between the same parties, or between parties under whom they or any of them claim, or has been heard and finally decided in a suit between the same parties, or between parties under whom they or any of them claim. Union.

86. When the parties or their agents have been heard and the evidence on both sides considered, the village court shall, by written order, pass such decree as may seem just, equitable and according to good conscience, stating in the decree the amounts payable as fees under section 90, and the amount, if any, paid to witnesses under section 96, sub-section (3), and the persons by whom such amounts are payable. Union.

87. A village court in ordering the payment of a sum of money or the delivery of any moveable property may direct that the money be paid, or the moveable property be delivered, by instalments. Union.

88. The decision of a village court in every suit shall be final as between the parties to the suit : Union.

Provided that the district judge may, on the application of any party to the suit made within thirty days of the decree of the village court, cancel or modify the order of the village court or direct a retrial of the suit by the same or any other village court or by any other court subordinate to him if he is satisfied that there has been a failure of justice. Union. Union. Union.

89. If the plaintiff or defendant in any suit dies before the suit has been decided, the suit may, subject to the provisions of clause (4) of section 75, be proceeded with at the instance of, or against, the legal representatives of the deceased plaintiff or defendant, as the case may be.

90. (1) In all suits instituted in and decided by a village court a fee of one anna in the rupee shall be payable on the amount of the claim up to twenty-five rupees, and an additional fee of half-an-anna for every rupee of the claim above twenty-five rupees. Union.

(2) If the claim is decreed in full, the fee shall be realized from the judgment-debtor together with the amount decreed.

(3) If the amount is decreed in part, the fee shall be realized pro rata from the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor.

(5) All such fees realized by the village court shall be credited to the village fund and shall not be paid to either party. Union. Union.

91. (1) If the village court granting a decree is unable to effect satisfaction thereof, it shall grant the decree-holder a certificate to that effect stating the amount due to him and the amount due on account of fees under section 90. Union.

(2) Any decree-holder wishing to execute a decree of a village court may apply to the court of the munsif within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the village is situated and shall present with his application a certified copy of the order of the village court; but no application for execution shall be entertained by the munsif— Union. Union. Union.

(a) unless the village court has certified that it is unable to effect satisfaction of the decree, and Union.

(b) unless the application is made after the expiry of three months from the date of the decree.

Union. (3) In executing a decree of a village court a munsif shall have the same powers and follow the same procedure as if he were executing a decree passed by himself, but any amount realized on account of fees under section 90 shall be credited to the Local Government.

92. When the amount decreed under section 86 and the amount due on account of fees under section 90 are not realized in full, such sum as is realized shall be rateably distributed—

Union. Union. (a) if realized by the village court, between the decree-holder and the village fund, and

Union. Union. General provisions relating to village benches and village courts.

93. (1) The provisions of—

(a) the Court-fees Act, 1870,

(b) the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, excepting Chapter XXXIII, and

(c) the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908,

Union. Union. shall not apply to any trial, suit or proceeding before a village bench or a village court.

Union. Union. (2) The procedure to be followed by a village bench or a village court in any trial, suit or proceeding and in the enforcement of its decisions and orders, and in the method of forming a quorum shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, be in accordance with rules prescribed under section 101.

Union. Union. Union Board. President. 94. (1) The village bench and the village court shall be presided over by the Chairman of the village authority, if he is a member of the bench or court.

President. Union Board. Union. (2) If the Chairman of the village authority is absent from a sitting of the village bench or court, or if he is not a member of the bench or court, the bench or court, as the case may be, shall elect its own president.

(3) In case of difference of opinion among the members of the bench or court the decision or order of the bench or court shall follow the opinion of the majority of the members present and voting.

(4) In case of an equality of votes, the person presiding over the bench or court shall have a second or casting vote.

Union. Union. 95. No member of a village bench or village court shall try any case or suit or other proceeding to or in which he is a party, or personally interested.

Union. Union. Explanation.—A member of a village bench or village court shall not be deemed a party

Union. Board. or personally interested within the meaning of this section in any case by reason only that he is a member of a village authority.

Union. Union. 96. (1) Subject to the provisions of section 98, a village bench or a village court may, by summons or otherwise, send for any person to appear and give evidence or to produce or cause the production of any document:

Provided that no person who is exempt from personal appearance in court under section 133, sub-section (1), of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, shall be required to appear

Union. in person before a village court.

Union. Union. (2) A village bench or a village court shall refuse to summon a witness or to enforce a summons already issued against a witness, where, in the opinion of the bench or court, the attendance of the witness cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable.

Union. Union Union. (3) A village bench or village court shall not require any person living outside the village to give evidence, unless such a sum of money be paid to him as appears to the bench or court to be sufficient to defray his travelling and other expenses in passing to and from the bench or court and for one day's attendance.

Union. Union. Union. (4) If any person whom a village bench or a village court summons by written order to appear or give evidence or to produce any document before it fails, to obey such summons a village bench may take cognizance of such offence and may sentence any person convicted thereof to a fine not exceeding twenty-five rupees.

Union. 97. (1) The parties to cases triable by a village bench shall appear personally before such bench:

Union. Provided that the village bench, if it sees reason so to do, may dispense with the personal attendance of an accused and permit him to appear by agent.

Union. (2) The parties to suits triable by a village court may appear by agent.

"Agent" in sub-sections (1) and (2) means a full-time servant or a partner or a relative of the party, whom the village bench or village court may admit as a fit person to represent a Union. Union. party, and who is authorized to appear and plead for such party.

Union. Union. (3) Notwithstanding anything contained in the Legal Practitioners' Act, 1879, legal practitioners shall not be permitted to practise before a village bench or village court.

Union. Union. Union. 98. No woman shall, against her will, be compelled to appear in person before a village bench as an accused, or before a village bench or village court as a witness.

99. All fees and fines imposed and all sums due on bonds and all sums decreed and compensation awarded under this Act by a village bench or village court may be realized under the orders of the village bench or village court, as the case may be, by distress and sale of the movable property of the offender. Union. Union. Union. Union. in the same manner as an arrear of rate imposed under section 37.

100. Every village bench and village court shall maintain such registers and records and submit such returns as may be prescribed by rules under section 101. Union. Union.

Miscellaneous.

101. (1) The Local Government may, after previous publication, make rules to carry out the purposes of this Act.

(2) In particular, and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, the Local Government may make rules—

* * * * *

(f) prescribing the registers and records to be maintained and the returns to be submitted by village authorities, village benches and village court; Union Boards. Union. Union.

* * * * *

(q) regulating the procedure to be followed by a village bench or a village court in the institution, trial and disposal of criminal cases and civil suits, and prescribing the method of forming a quorum; Union. Union.

(r) regulating the issue, service or execution of summonses and other processes by village benches or village courts, and the issue and service of notices by village authorities; Union. Union. Union Boards.

(s) determining the procedure for the execution of decrees, orders and sentences of village courts and village benches; Union. Union.

(t) regulating the transfer by village benches or village courts of summonses and other processes to ordinary courts for their service or execution by such courts; and Union. Union.

(u) prescribing the fees to be levied by village benches and village courts for copies of documents, and determining the procedure to be followed in furnishing such copies. Union. Union.

(3) The rules made under sub-section 2 shall be published in such manner as the Local Government may direct.

Union.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATION.

Delhi, the 26th February 1920.

No. 26.—The following Statutes are published for general information :—

ALIENS RESTRICTION ACT, 1914.

[4 & 5 GEO. 5, CH. 12.]

AN ACT TO ENABLE HIS MAJESTY IN TIME OF WAR OR IMMINENT NATIONAL DANGER OR GREAT EMERGENCY BY ORDER IN COUNCIL TO IMPOSE RESTRICTIONS ON ALIENS AND MAKE SUCH PROVISIONS AS APPEAR NECESSARY OR EXPEDIENT FOR CARRYING SUCH RESTRICTIONS INTO EFFECT.

[5th August 1914.]

BE it enacted by the King's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :—

Powers with respect to aliens in case of national emergency.

1.—(1) His Majesty may at any time when a state of war exists between His Majesty and any foreign power, or when it appears that an occasion of imminent national danger or great emergency has arisen, by Order in Council impose restrictions on aliens, and provision may be made by the Order—

(a) for prohibiting aliens from landing in the United Kingdom, either generally or at certain places, and for imposing restrictions or conditions on aliens landing or arriving at any port in the United Kingdom; and

(b) for prohibiting aliens from embarking in the United Kingdom, either generally or at certain places, and for imposing restrictions and conditions on aliens embarking or about to embark in the United Kingdom; and

(c) for the deportation of aliens from the United Kingdom; and

(d) for requiring aliens to reside and remain within certain places or districts; and

(e) for prohibiting aliens from residing or remaining in any areas specified in the Order; and

(f) for requiring aliens residing in the United Kingdom to comply with such provisions as to registration, change of abode, travelling, or otherwise as may be made by the Order; and

(g) for the appointment of officers to carry the Order into effect, and for conferring on such officers and on the Secretary of State such powers as may be necessary or expedient for the purposes of the Order; and

(h) for imposing penalties on persons who aid or abet any contravention of the Order, and for imposing such obligations and restrictions on masters of ships or any other persons specified in the Order as appear necessary or expedient for giving full effect to the Order; and

(i) for conferring upon such persons as may be specified in the Order such powers with respect to arrest, detention, search of premises or persons, and otherwise, as may be specified in the Order, and for any other ancillary matters for which it appears expedient to provide with a view to giving full effect to the Order; and

(k) for any other matters which appear necessary or expedient with a view to the safety of the realm.

(2) If any person acts in contravention of, or fails to comply with, any provisions of any such Order, he shall be liable on conviction under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts to a fine not exceeding one hundred pounds or to imprisonment with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding six months, and the court before which he is convicted may, either in addition to, or in lieu of, any such punishment, require that person to enter into recognizances with or without sureties to comply with the provisions of the Order in Council or such provisions thereof as the court may direct.

If any person fails to comply with an order of the court requiring him to enter into recognizances the court, or any court of summary jurisdiction sitting for the same place, may order him to be imprisoned with or without hard labour for any term not exceeding six months.

(3) Any provision of any Order in Council made under this section with respect to aliens may relate either to aliens in general or to any class or description of aliens.

(4) If any question arises on any proceedings under any such Order, or with reference to anything done or proposed to be done under any such Order, whether any person is an alien or not, or is an alien of a particular class or not, the onus of proving that that person is not an alien, or, as the case may be, is not an alien of that class, shall lie upon that person.

(5) His Majesty may by Order in Council revoke, alter, or add to any Order in Council made under this section as occasion requires.

(6) Any powers given under this section, or under any Order in Council made under this section, shall be in addition to, and not in derogation of, any other powers with respect to the expulsion of aliens, or the prohibition of aliens from entering the United Kingdom or any other powers of His Majesty.

Short title and application.

2.—(1) This Act may be cited as the Aliens Restriction Act, 1914.

(2) In the application of this Act to Scotland the expressions "the court" and "any court of summary jurisdiction" mean the sheriff; and the expressions "enter into recognizances with or without sureties" and "enter into recognizances" mean "find caution."

ALIENS RESTRICTION (AMENDMENT) ACT, 1919.

[9 & 10 GEO. 5. CH. 92.]

ARRANGEMENT OF SECTIONS.

AN ACT TO CONTINUE AND EXTEND THE PROVISIONS OF THE ALIENS RESTRICTION ACT, 1914.

[23rd December 1919.]

BE it enacted by the King's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :—

Continuance and Extension of Emergency Powers.

Continuance of emergency powers.

1.—(1) The powers which under sub-section (1) of section one of the Aliens Restriction Act, 1914 (which Act, as amended by this Act, is hereinafter in this Act referred to as the principal Act), are exercisable with repect to aliens at any time when a state of war exists between His Majesty and any foreign power, or when it appears that an occasion of imminent national danger or great emergency has arisen, shall, for a period of one year after the passing of this Act, be exercisable, not only in those circumstances, but at any time; and accordingly that sub-section shall, for such period as aforesaid, have effect as though the words "at any time when a state of war exists between His Majesty and any foreign power, or when it appears that an occasion of imminent national danger or great emergency has arisen" were omitted. 4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 12.

(2) Any order made under the principal Act during the currency of this section shall be laid before each House of Parliament forthwith, and, if an Address is presented to His Majesty by either House of Parliament within the next subsequent twenty-one days on which that House has sat after any such order is laid before it praying that the order may be annulled, His Majesty in Council may annual the order, and it shall thenceforth be void, but without prejudice to the validity of anything previously done thereunder :

Provided that this provision shall not apply in the case of an order the operation of which is limited to a time when a state of war exists between His Majesty and any foreign power, or when it appears that an occasion of imminent national danger or great emergency has arisen.

Extension of powers.

2.—(1) Sub-section (1) of section one of the principal Act shall be amended by the addition at the end thereof of the following paragraph :—

(l) for determining what nationality is to be ascribed to aliens in doubtful circumstances, and for disregarding, in the case of any person against whom a deportation or expulsion order has been made, any subsequent change of nationality.

(2) For the purpose of enforcing the provisions of any Treaty of Peace concluded or to be concluded between His Majesty and any Power with which His Majesty was at war in the year nineteen hundred and eighteen, His Majesty may by Order in Council under the principal Act make regulations requiring information to be given as to the property, liabilities, and interests of former enemy aliens, and for preventing (without notice or authority) the transfer of or other dealings with the property of such aliens.

Further Restrictions of Aliens.

Incitement to sedition, &c.

3.—(1) If any alien attempts or does any act calculated or likely to cause sedition or disaffection amongst any of His Majesty's Forces or the forces of His Majesty's allies, or amongst the civilian population, he shall be liable on conviction on indictment to penal servitude for a term not exceeding ten years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months.

(2) If any alien promotes or attempts to promote industrial unrest in any industry in which he has not been bona fide engaged for at least two years immediately preceding in the United Kingdom, he shall be liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months.

Pilotage certificates

4. No alien shall hold a pilotage certificate for any pilotage district in the United Kingdom; except that the provisions of section twenty-four of the Pilotage Act, 1913, shall continue to apply to the renewal and issue of certificates entitling a master or mate of French nationality to navigate his ship into the ports of Newhaven or Grimsby. 2 & 3 Geo. 5 c. 31.

Employment of aliens in ships of the mercantile marine.

5.—(1) No alien shall act as master, chief officer, or chief engineer of a British merchant ship registered in the United Kingdom, or as skipper or second hand of a fishing boat registered in the United Kingdom, except in the case of a ship or boat employed habitually in voyages between ports outside the United Kingdom :

Provided that this prohibition shall not apply to any alien who has acted as a master, chief officer, or chief engineer of a British ship, or as skipper or second hand of a British fishing boat, at any time during the war, and is certified by the Admiralty to have performed good and faithful service in that capacity.

(2) No alien shall be employed in any capacity on board a British ship registered in the United Kingdom at a rate of pay less than the standard rate of pay for the time being current on British ships for his rating:

Provided that, where the Board of Trade are satisfied that aliens of any particular race (other than former enemy aliens) are habitually employed afloat in any capacity, or in any climate, for which they are specially fitted, nothing in this section shall prejudice the right of aliens of such race to be employed upon British ships at rates of pay which are not below those for the time being fixed as standard rates for British subjects of that race.

(3) No alien shall be employed in any capacity on board a British ship registered in the United Kingdom unless he has produced to the officer before whom he is engaged satisfactory proof of his nationality.

(4) Any person who engages an alien for employment on a British ship in contravention of the provisions of this section shall be guilty of an offence under this Act.

Appointment of aliens to the Civil Service.

6. After the passing of this Act no alien shall be appointed to any office or place in the Civil Service of the State.

Restriction of change of name by aliens.

7.—(1) An alien shall not for any purpose assume or use or purport to assume or use or continue after the commencement of this Act the assumption or use of any name other than that by which he was ordinarily known on the fourth day of August nineteen hundred and fourteen.

(2) Where any alien carries on or purports or continues to carry on, or is a member of a partnership or firm which carries on, or which purports or continues to carry on any trade or business in any name other than that under which the trade or business was carried on on the fourth of August nineteen hundred and fourteen, he shall, for the purpose of this section, be deemed to be using or purporting or continuing to use a name other than that by which he was ordinarily known on the said date.

(3) A Secretary of State may, if it appears desirable on special grounds in any particular case, grant an exemption from the provisions of this section, but shall not do so unless he is satisfied that the name proposed to be assumed, used, or continued is in the circumstances of the case a suitable name.

(4) Nothing in this section shall—

(a) affect the assumption or use or continued assumption or use of any name in pursuance of a Royal licence; or

(b) affect the continuance of the use by any person of a name which he has assumed before the commencement of this Act if he has been granted an exemption under the Defence of the Realm regulations or the Aliens Restriction Order in force on the first day of January nineteen hundred and nineteen; or

(c) prevent the assumption or use by a married woman of her husband's name.

(5) A fee of ten guineas shall be paid by any alien on obtaining an exemption under this section; but the Secretary of State may remit the whole or any part of such fee in special cases.

(6) A list of the persons to whom the Secretary of State has granted an exemption under this section shall be published in the Gazette as soon as may be after the granting of the exemption.

(7) Any person to whom any such exemption is granted shall, unless the Secretary of State shall expressly dispense with such publication, within one calendar month thereafter publish at his own expense, in some paper circulating in the district in which he resides, an advertisement stating the fact that the exemption has been granted.

Provisions as to aliens on juries.

8. No alien shall sit upon a jury in any judicial or other proceedings if challenged by any party to such proceedings.

Special Provisions as to former Enemy Aliens.

Deportation of former enemy aliens.

9.—(1) Every former enemy alien who is now in the United Kingdom and to whom this section applies shall be deported forthwith unless the Secretary of State on the recommendation of the advisory committee, to be constituted under this section, shall grant him a licence to remain.

(2) The Secretary of State may, if he is satisfied on the recommendation of the said advisory committee that there is no reason to the contrary, grant such licence, subject to such terms and conditions (if any) as he shall think fit.

(3) This section shall apply to any former enemy alien now in the United Kingdom (not being a former enemy alien exempted from internment or repatriation on the recommendation of any advisory committee appointed after the first day of January nineteen hundred and eighteen and before the passing of this Act) as to whom there shall be delivered to the Secretary of State, within two months after the passing of this Act, a statement in writing signed by any credible person to the effect that the continued residence in the United Kingdom of that alien is, for reasons relating to the alien, undesirable in the public interest and giving particulars of the allegations upon which such reasons are based.

(4) The Secretary of State shall refer all such statements to the advisory committee to be constituted under this section, and the committee shall thereupon require each alien affected to make to the committee within one month, in a form prescribed by the committee, an application to be allowed to remain in the United Kingdom, stating the general grounds on which the application is based, and the answer of the alien to the allegations made in relation to him, and the committee shall examine into such allegations and in the result may—

(a) recommend that the alien be immediately deported; or

(b) if satisfied that the allegations are groundless or insufficient, and that the alien affected holds an exemption recommended by any advisory committee appointed in the year nineteen hundred and fifteen, recommend that such exemption be not disturbed; or

(c) in any case in which it seems to them right and proper so to do, recommend that the alien be granted a licence to remain, subject to such terms and conditions (if any) as may appear to them to be fitting in the circumstances.

(5) In granting a licence under this section, the Secretary of State may include in the licence the wife of the applicant and any child or children of his, and such inclusion shall, notwithstanding anything in this section, have the same effect as the grant of a licence.

(6) A list of the persons to whom such licence is granted shall, as soon as may be, after the granting of the licence, be published in the Gazette.

(7) Any licence so granted may be at any time revoked by the Secretary of State.

(8) If such licence is not granted, or if, having been granted, it is revoked, the Secretary of State shall make an order (in this Act referred to as a deportation order) requiring the alien to leave the United Kingdom and thereafter to remain out of the United Kingdom so long as the order remains in force. The Secretary of State may, by a deportation order, require the alien to return to the country of which he is a subject or citizen.

(9) The provisions of this section shall be in addition to and not in derogation of any other provisions of the principal Act or this Act or any Order in Council made thereunder.

(10) The Secretary of State shall appoint an advisory committee for the purpose of this section, consisting of a chairman and such other persons including members of both Houses of Parliament, as the Secretary of State may think fit.

(11) This section shall not apply to any subject of the Ottoman Empire who holds a certificate issued by a police authority, or by or under the direction of the Secretary of State, granting exemption from any provisions of Part II of the Aliens Restriction Order in force on the first day of January nineteen hundred and ninteen, applicable to alien enemies.

Admission of former enemy aliens.

10.—(1) No former enemy alien shall, for a period of three years after the passing of this Act, be permitted to land in the United Kingdom either from the sea or from the air, or, if he should land without permission, to remain in the United Kingdom, without the permission of the Secretary of State, to be granted only on special grounds, and such permission shall, save as hereinafter provided, be limited in duration to a period of three months, and may, upon special grounds, be renewed from time to time for a like period.

(2) A list of the persons to whom permissions are so granted during each month shall be published in the London Gazette as soon as practicable after the end of each such month.

(3) The requirement of this section that permission to remain in the United Kingdom shall be limited to a period of three months shall not apply to a former enemy alien who was resident in the United Kingdom at the date of the passing of this Act, and after a temporary absence abroad returns to the United Kingdom.

(4) Where any former enemy alien, formerly resident in the United Kingdom, and having a British-born wife or a British-born child under the age of sixteen, still resident in the United Kingdom, applies, within three months from the passing of this Act, to the Secretary of State for permission to land in the United Kingdom, the Secretary of State shall refer the application to the advisory committee constituted under the last foregoing section of this Act, and, if that committee recommends that he be permitted to land he shall be so permitted, and the requirement of this section that permission to remain in the United Kingdom shall be limited to a period of three months shall not apply.

Temporary restriction on acquisition by former enemy aliens of certain kinds of property.

11.—(1) During a period of three years from the passing of this Act, it shall not be lawful for a former enemy alien, either in his own name or in the name of a trustee or trustees, to acquire property of any of the following descriptions; that is to say:—

(a) Any land, or any interest in any land, in the United Kingdom; or

(b) Any interest in a key industry, or any share or interest in a share in a company registered in the United Kingdom which carries on any such industry; or

(c) Any share or interest in a share in a company owning a British ship registered in the United Kingdom.

(2) If any such property as aforesaid is acquired in contravention of this section, the Board of Trade may, on an application made to them for the purpose, by order, vest the property in the Public Trustee.

Any such order may contain provisions applying for the purposes of the order, with such modifications as the Board think necessary, any of the provisions of section 4 of the Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1916, or any enactment referred to in that section. 5 & 6 Geo. 5, c. 105.

(3) For the purpose of this section—

The expression "key industry" means any industry included in a list declared by the Board of Trade to be a list of key industries for the purposes of this section;

The expression "share" includes any stock forming part of the capital of a company and securities of any description issued by a company;

The expression "interest in land" does not include a tenancy for a period not exceeding three years at a rackrent.

(4) Any list of key industries prepared by the Board of Trade under this section shall be published as soon as it is made in the London Gazette, and may be varied or amended by the Board from time to time.

Employment of former enemy aliens in British ships.

12. No former enemy alien shall be employed or shall act as master, officer or member of the crew of a British ship registered in the United Kingdom.

General.

Offences and penalties.

13.—(1) If any person acts in contravention of, or fails to comply with, the provisions of this Act or any order or rules made or conditions imposed thereunder, he shall be guilty of an offence against this Act.

(2) If any person aids or abets any person in any contravention of this Act or knowingly harbours any person whom he knows or has reasonable ground for believing to have acted in contravention of this Act, he shall be guilty of an offence against this Act.

(3) Where a person lands in the United Kingdom in contravention of this Act, the master of the ship or the pilot or commander of the aircraft from which he lands shall, unless he proves to the contrary, be deemed to have aided and abetted the offence

(4) A person who is guilty of an offence against this Act shall be liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding one hundred pounds or to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding six months, or, on a second or subsequent conviction, twelve months, or, in either case, to both such fine and imprisonment.

Saving for diplomatic persons, etc.

14.—(1) Nothing in this Act contained shall be construed as imposing any restriction or disability on any duly accredited head of a foreign diplomatic mission or any member of his official staff or household

(2) The Secretary of State may exempt from any of the special provisions of this Act as to former enemy aliens any consul or vice-consul to whom His Majesty is pleased to grant an exequatur and the wife and child of any such consul or vice-consul.

Definitions.

15. The expression "former enemy alien" means an alien who is a subject or citizen of the German Empire or any component state thereof, or of Austria, Hungary, Bulgaria, or Turkey, or who, having at any time been such subject or citizen, has not changed his allegiance as a result of the recognition of new states or territorial re-arrangements, or been naturalised in any other foreign state or in any British Possession in accordance with the laws thereof and when actually resident therein, and does not retain according to the law of his state of origin the nationality of that state :

Provided that the special provisions of this Act as to former enemy aliens, except the provisions of sub-section (2) of section two of this Act, shall not apply to any woman who was at the time of her marriage a British subject.

Short title and repeal.

16.—(1) This Act may be cited as the Aliens Restriction (Amendment) Act, 1919, and the principal Act and this Act may be cited together as the Aliens Restriction Acts, 1914 and 1919.

(2) The Aliens Act, 1905, is hereby repealed as from such date or dates as may be specified by Order in Council made under the principal Act, and any such order may fix different dates for the repeal of different provisions of the said Act, but an order under the principal Act may incorporate (with or without modifications) any of the provisions of the said Act : 5 Edw. 7, c. 13.

Provided that any order or appointment made or action taken under the said Act shall, notwithstanding any such repeal as aforesaid, continue in force as though it had been made or taken under an Order in Council under the principal Act, subject, however, to any provisions of any such order.

War Office,
15th January, 1920.

His Majesty the KING has been graciously pleased to approve of the following awards to the undermentioned officers, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the Field :—

* * * * *

AWARDED THE DISTINGUISHED SERVICE ORDER.

Cap. (A./Maj.) James Donald Fraser, 32nd Lrs., I.A. (Mesopotamia).

For marked gallantry and good leadership when in command of a small force heavily attacked for twenty-four hours, on 30th-31st May, 1919, at Qarah Anjir. He inspired all ranks to greater efforts, and maintained a stout defence until the arrival of reinforcements.

* * * * *

AWARDED THE MILITARY CROSS.

T./Asst. Surg. James Michael Connor, Indian Medical Department. (India).

For marked gallantry and devotion to duty at Barley Hill Piquet on July 18th, 1919. He went out from Fort Maude, and, after being wounded himself, attended the wounded under fire until they were evacuated. He was again wounded while leaving, but continued at duty at Fort Maude until the 20th.

Lt. (A./Capt.) Eric Norman Goddard, O.B.E., 107th, attd. 128th, Pioneers, I.A. (Mesopotamia).

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during the attack on Suwari Camp, on the 14th August, 1919, when he displayed the most untiring zeal and contempt of danger. Throughout the day he controlled his command most ably, and it was almost entirely due to his foresight that the hostile attack failed.

Lt. Cecil Walter Lewery Harvey, 2/1st Gurkha Rifles. (India).

At Dakka, on 3rd July, 1919, after three unsuccessful attempts had been made to assault Twin Peaks, he led two weak platoons against the near peak successfully, and then on the other, inflicting many casualties on the enemy, who retreated. He showed gallant and able leadership.

* * * * *

Lt. Augustus Oates, D.S.O., 2/67th Punjabis, I.A. (India).

He was in command at Fort Maude on 18th July, when Barley Hill was attacked, and showed cool and able leadership in directing the efforts to assist that picquet. The heavy losses inflicted on the enemy were largely due to his excellent dispositions.

Ressaidar Rewat Singh, 32nd Lrs., I.A. (Mesopotamia).

For marked gallantry and good work on the 30th May, 1919. At Qara Anjir his squadron was heavily attacked. He took a Hotchkiss gun to a flank, and used it with such effect that it delayed the enemy for a considerable time. Though wounded in the thigh, he continued in action, withdrawing his gun to various positions and thereby enabling his squadron to retire.

Jemadar Lal Shah Gul, 126th Baluchistan Infy., I.A. (Mesopotamia).

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at Sheranis on 17th September, 1919, when with two sections he attacked and captured a point within close range of the enemy sangars at Khantur. Although heavily fired on, he maintained his position unsupported for two hours until ordered to withdraw. Whilst holding the position he showed great gallantry in moving wounded men, and controlled his command most skilfully throughout.

Capt. Harry Victor Yule, 25th Cavalry (F. F.), attd. Zhob Militia, I.A. (India).

Between the 6th and 8th June, 1919, he marched a party of 200 Gurkhas through enemy country, some 54 miles in 43 hours, to reinforce Fort Sandeman, and forced his way through after suffering considerable casualties. He showed bold and able leadership, and materially aided the situation at the fort.

* * * * *

His Majesty the KING has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the Military Medal to the undermentioned Warrant Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers and Men for bravery in the field with the British Forces in India :—

BALUCHISTAN FORCE.

* * * * *

Acts of the Indian Legislative Council assented to by the Governor General.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Act of the Indian Legislative Council received the assent of the Governor General on the 25th February, 1920, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. IV OF 1920.

[AS PASSED IN COUNCIL.]

An Act to provide for certain matters in connection with the taking of the Census.

WHEREAS it has been determined to take a census of British India during the year 1921, and it is expedient to provide for certain matters in connection with the taking of such census ; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title and extent.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Census Act, 1920.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, inclusive of British Baluchistan, the Sonthal Parganas and the Pargana of Spiti.

Appointment of census-officers.

2. (1) The Local Government may appoint any person to take, or aid in, or supervise the taking of, the census within any specified local area.

(2) Persons so appointed shall be called census-officers.

(3) The Local Government may delegate to such authority, as it thinks fit, the power of appointing census-officers which is conferred by this section.

Proof of appointment of census-officers and their status as public servants.

3. (1) A declaration in writing, signed by any officer authorised by the Local Government in this behalf, that any person has been duly appointed a census-officer for any local area shall be conclusive proof of such appointment.

(2) All census-officers shall be deemed to be public servants within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 18[illegible]

Discharge of duties of census-officers in certain cases.

4. (1) (a) Every officer in command of any body of men belonging to His Majesty's naval, military or air forces or to His Majesty's Indian Marine Service or of any vessel of war,

(b) every person (except a pilot or harbour-master) having charge or control of a vessel,

(c) every person in charge of a lunatic asylum, hospital, workhouse, prison, reformatory or lock-up or of any public, charitable, religious or educational institution,

(d) every keeper, secretary or manager of any sarai, hôtel, boarding-house, lodging-house, emigration depôt or club, and

(e) every occupant of immoveable property who has at the time of the taking of the census not less than twenty persons living on or in such property, and every manager or officer of a railway or other commercial or industrial establishment who has at such time not less than ten persons employed under him, shall, if so required by the District Magistrate or by such officer as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf, perform such of the duties of a census-officer in relation to the persons who at the time of the taking of the census are under his command or charge, or are inmates of his house or present on or in such immoveable property or are employed under him as such Magistrate or officer may, by written order, direct

(2) All the provisions of this Act relating to census-officers shall apply, so far as they can be made applicable, to all persons while performing such duties under this section, and any person refusing or neglecting to perform any duty which he is directed under this section to perform shall be deemed to have committed an offence under section 187 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

Power of District Magistrate to call upon certain persons to give assistance.

5. (1) The District Magistrate, or such officer as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf for any local area, may, by written order, which shall have effect throughout the limits of his district or of such local area, as the case may be, call upon—

(a) all owners and occupiers of land, tenure-holders, farmers, assignees of land-revenue and lessees of fisheries under the Burma Fisheries Act, 1905, or the Upper Burma Land and Revenue Regulation, 1889, or their agents, [Bur. Act III of 1905. III of 1889.]

(b) all village-officers and servants in estates as defined in the Madras Proprietary Estates' Village Service Act, 1894, and [Mad. Act II of 1894.]

(c) all members of panchayats appointed under the Village Chaukidari Act, 1870, or the Sylhet and Cachar Rural Police Regulation, 1883, or members of union boards established under the Bengal Village Self-Government Act, 1919, all ghatwals, Unit-tahsildars and members of a panchayat appointed under the Chota Nagpur Rural Police Act, 1914, all members of Village Authorities constituted under the Assam Local Self-Government Act, 1915, and all village-headmen in the Kumaun Division of the United Provinces, [Ben. Act VI of 1870. I of 1883. Ben. Act V of 1919. B. and O. Act I of 1914.]

to give such assistance as he needs towards the taking of a census of the persons who are at the time of the taking of the census on the lands of such owners, occupiers, holders, farmers and assignees, or within the limits of such fisheries or in the villages or other areas for which such village-officers and servants, panchayats, union boards, Village Authorities, ghatwals, Unit-tahsildars or village headmen are appointed, as the case may be.

(2) Such order shall specify the nature of the assistance required, and such owners, occupiers, holders, farmers, assignees and lessees, or their agents, and such village-officers and servants, the members of such panchayats, union boards and Village Authorities, and such ghatwals, Unit-tahsildars and village-headmen shall be bound to obey it.

Asking of questions by census-officers.

6 Every census-officer may ask all such questions of all persons within the limits of the local area for which he is appointed as, by instructions issued in this behalf by the Local Government and published in the official Gazette, he may be directed to ask.

Obligation to answer questions.

7. Every person of whom any question is asked under the last foregoing section shall be legally bound to answer such question to the best of his knowledge or belief :

Provided that no person shall be bound to state the name of any female member of his household, and no woman shall be bound to state the name of her husband or deceased husband, or of any other person whose name she is forbidden by custom to mention.

Occupier to allow access, and permit affixing of numbers.

8. Every person occupying any house, enclosure vessel or other place shall allow census-officers such access thereto as they may require for the purposes of the census, and as, having regard to the customs of the country, may be reasonable, and shall allow them to paint on or affix to the place such letters, marks or numbers as may be necessary for the purposes of the census.

Occupier or manager to fill up schedule.

9. (1) Subject to such orders as the Local Government may issue in this behalf, any census-officer may leave, or cause to be left,

(a) at any dwelling-house within the local area for which he is appointed, or

(b) with any manager or officer of any commercial or industrial establishment who has at the time of the taking of the census not less than ten persons employed under him, a schedule for the purpose of its being filled up by the occupier of such house or of any specified part thereof, or by such manager or officer with such particulars as the Local Government may direct regarding the inmates of such house or part, or the persons employed under such manager or officer at the time of the taking of the census, as the case may be.

(2) When any such schedule has been so left, the occupier of the house or part to which it relates or the manager or officer with whom it is left shall fill it up, or cause it to be filled up, to the best of his knowledge or belief, so far as regards the inmates of such house or part, or the persons employed under him at the time aforesaid, as the case may be, and shall sign his name thereto, and when so required, shall deliver the schedule so filled up and signed to the census-officer or to such person as the census-officer may direct.

10. In any of the following cases, namely—

Penalties.

(a) if a census-officer or a person lawfully required to give assistance towards the taking of a census refuses or neglects to use reasonable diligence in performing any duty imposed upon him or in obeying any order issued to him in accordance with this Act or with any rule duly made thereunder,

(b) if a census-officer intentionally puts any offensive or improper question or knowingly makes any false return, or, without the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council or the Local Government, discloses any information which he has received by means of or for the purposes of a census return,

(c) if any person refuses to answer to the best of his knowledge or belief any question asked of him by a census-officer which he is legally bound by section 7 so to answer,

(d) if any person occupying any house, enclosure, vessel or other place refuses to allow a census-officer such reasonable access thereto as he is required by section 8 to allow,

(e) if any person removes, obliterates, alters or injures before the 31st day of March, 1921, any letters, marks or numbers which have been painted or affixed for the purposes of the census,

(f) if any occupier of a dwelling-house or part thereof or any person with whom a schedule is left under section 9 knowingly and without sufficient cause fails to comply with the provisions of section 9 or makes any false return under that section, he shall be punishable with fine which may extend to fifty rupees.

11. (1) The Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, declare before what classes of Magistrates prosecutions under this Act may be instituted.

Jurisdiction in prosecutions.

(2) Unless and until a notification is published under sub-section (1) all prosecutions under this Act shall, in the towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, be instituted before a Presidency Magistrate, and elsewhere, before the District Magistrate.

(3) No prosecution under this Act shall be instituted except with the previous sanction of the Local Government or of some officer authorised by the Local Government in this behalf.

12. No person shall have a right to inspect any book, register or record made by a census-officer in the discharge of his duty as such officer or any schedule delivered under section 9, and, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, no entry in any such book, register, record or schedule shall be admissible as evidence in any civil proceeding or any proceeding under Chapter XII or Chapter XXXVI of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

Records of census not open to inspection or admissible in evidence in certain proceedings.

I of 1872.

V of 1898.

13. Notwithstanding anything in any enactment or rule with respect to the mode in which a census is to be taken in any municipality, the municipal authority may, at the time appointed for the taking of the census of British India during the year 1921, cause the census of the municipality to be taken wholly or in part by any method authorised by this Act.

Temporary suspension of local enactments and rules as to mode of taking census in municipalities.

14. Notwithstanding anything in any enactment or rule, in regard to municipal, local, union or village funds, the Local Government may direct that the whole or any part of any expenses incurred for anything done in accordance with this Act may be charged to any municipal, local, union or village fund constituted for, and on behalf of, the area within which such expenses were incurred.

Power in regard to expenses.

15. (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules for carrying out the purposes of this Act.

Power to make rules.

(2) In particular, and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, the Governor General in Council may make rules providing—

(a) for the appointment of census-officers and of persons to perform any of the duties of census-officers or to give assistance towards the taking of a census, and for the general instructions to be issued to such officers and persons;

(b) for the enumeration of persons employed on railways and their families and of other classes of the population for whom it may be necessary or expedient to make special provision; and

(c) for the enumeration of persons travelling on the night when a census is taken.

(3) The Governor General in Council may, by general or special order, direct that all or any of the powers conferred upon him by this section may also be exercised by any Local Government with respect to the territories administered by it.

A. P. MUDDIMAN,

Secretary to the Government of India.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Act of the Indian Legislative Council received the assent of the Governor General on the 25th February, 1920, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. V OF 1920.

[AS PASSED IN COUNCIL.]

An Act to consolidate and amend the Law relating to Insolvency in British India, as administered by Courts having jurisdiction outside the Presidency-towns and the Town of Rangoon.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to insolvency in British India, as administered by Courts having jurisdiction outside the Presidency-towns and the Town of Rangoon; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title and extent.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920.

Definitions.

2. (1) In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(a) "creditor" includes a decree-holder, "debt" includes a judgment-debt, and "debtor" includes a judgment-debtor;

(b) "District Court" means the principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction in any area outside the local limits for the time being of the Presidency-towns and of the Town of Rangoon;

(c) "prescribed" means prescribed by rules made under this Act;

(d) "property" includes any property over which or the profits of which any person has a disposing power which he may exercise for his own benefit;

(e) "secured creditor" means a person holding a mortgage, charge or lien on the property of the debtor or any part thereof as a security for a debt due to him from the debtor; and

(f) "transfer of property" includes a transfer of any interest in property and the creation of any charge upon property.

V of 1908. (2) Words and expressions used in this Act and defined in the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, and not hereinbefore defined shall have the same meanings as those respectively attributed to them by the said Code.

PART I.

CONSTITUTION AND POWERS OF COURT.

Insolvency jurisdiction.

3. (1) The District Courts shall be the Courts having jurisdiction under this Act :

Provided that the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, invest any Court subordinate to a District Court with jurisdiction in any class of cases, and any Court so invested shall within the local limits of its jurisdiction have concurrent jurisdiction with the District Court under this Act.

(2) For the purposes of this Act, a Court of Small Causes shall be deemed to be subordinate to the District Court.

Power of Court to decide all questions arising in insolvency.

4. (1) Subject to the provisions of this Act the Court shall have full power to decide all questions whether of title or priority, or of any nature whatsoever, and whether involving matters of law or of fact, which may arise in any case of insolvency coming within the cognisance of the Court, or which the Court may deem it expedient or necessary to decide for the purpose of doing complete justice or making a complete distribution of property in any such case.

(2) Subject to the provisions of this Act and notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force, every such decision shall be final and binding for all purposes as between, on the one hand, the debtor and the debtor's estate and, on the other hand, all claimants against him or it and all persons claiming through or under them or any of them.

(3) Where the Court does not deem it expedient or necessary to decide any question of the nature referred to in sub-section (1), but has reason to believe that the debtor has a saleable interest in any property, the Court may without further inquiry sell such interest in such manner and subject to such conditions as it may think fit

General powers of Courts.

5. (1) Subject to the provisions of this Act, the Court, in regard to proceedings under this Act, shall have the same powers and shall follow the same procedure as it has and follows in the exercise of original civil jurisdiction.

(2) Subject as aforesaid, High Courts and District Courts, in regard to proceedings under this Act in Courts subordinate to them, shall have the same powers and shall follow the same procedure as they respectively have and follow in regard to civil suits.

PART II.

PROCEEDINGS FROM ACT OF INSOLVENCY TO DISCHARGE.

Acts of insolvency.

Acts of insolvency.

6. A debtor commits an act of insolvency in each of the following cases, namely:—

(a) if, in British India or elsewhere, he makes a transfer of all or substantially all his property to a third person for the benefit of his creditors generally;

(b) if, in British India or elsewhere, he makes a transfer of his property or of any part thereof with intent to defeat or delay his creditors;

(c) if, in British India or elsewhere, he makes any transfer of his property, or of any part thereof, which would, under this or any other enactment for the time being in force, be void as a fraudulent preference if he were adjudged an insolvent;

(d) if, with intent to defeat or delay his creditors,—

(i) he departs or remains out of British India,

(ii) he departs from his dwelling-house or usual place of business or otherwise absents himself,

(iii) he secludes himself so as to deprive his creditors of the means of communicating with him;

(e) if any of his property has been sold in execution of the decree of any Court for the payment of money;

(f) if he petitions to be adjudged an insolvent under the provisions of this Act;

(g) if he gives notice to any of his creditors that he has suspended, or that he is about to suspend, payment of his debts; or

(h) if he is imprisoned in execution of the decree of any Court for the payment of money.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section the act of an agent may be the act of the principal.

Petition.

Petition and adjudication.

7. Subject to the conditions specified in this Act, if a debtor commits an act of insolvency, an insolvency petition may be presented either by a creditor or by the debtor, and the Court may on such petition make an order (hereinafter called an order of adjudication) adjudging him an insolvent.

Explanation.—The presentation of a petition by the debtor shall be deemed an act of insolvency within the meaning of this section, and on such petition the Court may make an order of adjudication.

Exemption of corporation, etc., from insolvency proceedings.

8. No insolvency petition shall be presented against any corporation or against any association or company registered under any enactment for the time being in force.

Conditions on which creditor may petition.

9. (1) A creditor shall not be entitled to present an insolvency petition against a debtor unless—

(a) the debt owing by the debtor to the creditor, or, if two or more creditors join in the petition, the aggregate amount of debts owing to such creditors amounts to five hundred rupees, and

(b) the debt is a liquidated sum payable either immediately or at some cert in future time, and

(c) the act of insolvency on which the petition is grounded has occurred within three months before the presentation of the petition.

(2) If the petitioning creditor is a secured creditor, he shall in his petition either state that he is willing to relinquish his security for the benefit of the creditors in the event of the debtor being adjudged insolvent, or give an estimate of the value of the security. In the latter case, he may be admitted as a petitioning creditor to the extent of the balance of the debt due to him after deducting the value so estimated in the same way as if he were an unsecured creditor.

Conditions on which debtor may petition.

10. (1) A debtor shall not be entitled to present an insolvency petition, unless he is unable to pay his debts and—

(a) his debts amount to five hundred rupees; or

(b) he is under arrest or imprisonment in execution of the decree of any Court for the payment of money; or

(c) an order of attachment in execution of such a decree has been made, and is subsisting, against his property.

(2) A debtor in respect of whom an order of adjudication made under this Act has been annulled, owing to his failure to apply, or to prosecute an application for his discharge, shall not be entitled to present an insolvency petition without the leave of the Court by which the order of adjudication was annulled. Such Court shall not grant leave unless it is satisfied either that the debtor was prevented by any reasonable cause from presenting or prosecuting his application, as the case may be, or that the petition is founded on facts substantially different from those contained in the petition on which the order of adjudication was made.

Court to which petition shall be presented.

11. Every insolvency petition shall be presented to a Court having jurisdiction under this Act in any local area in which the debtor ordinarily resides or carries on business, or personally works for gain, or if he has been arrested or imprisoned, where he is in custody:

Provided that no objection as to the place of presentment shall be allowed by any Court in the exercise of appellate or revisional jurisdiction unless such objection was taken in the Court by which the petition was heard at the earliest possible opportunity, and unless there has been a consequent failure of justice.

Verification of petition.

12. Every insolvency petition shall be in writing and shall be signed and verified in the manner prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, for signing and verifying plaints. V of 1908.

13. (1) Every insolvency petition presented by a debtor shall contain the following particulars, namely:—

Contents of petition.

(a) a statement that the debtor is unable to pay his debts;

(b) the place where he ordinarily resides or carries on business or personally works for gain, or, if he has been arrested or imprisoned, the place where he is in custody;

(c) the Court (if any) by whose order he has been arrested or imprisoned, or by which an order has been made for the attachment of his property, together with particulars of the decree in respect of which any such order has been made;

(d) the amount and particulars of all pecuniary claims against him, together with the names and residences of his creditors so far as they are known to, or can by the exercise of reasonable care and diligence be ascertained by, him;

(e) the amount and particulars of all his property, together with—

(i) a specification of the value of all such property not consisting of money;

(ii) the place or places at which any such property is to be found; and

(iii) a declaration of his willingness to place at the disposal of the Court all such property save in so far as it includes such particulars (not being his books of account) as are exempted by the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, or by any other enactment for the time being in force from liability to attachment and sale in execution of a decree;

V of 1908.

(f) a statement whether the debtor has on any previous occasion filed a petition to be adjudged an insolvent, and (where such a petition has been filed)—

(i) if such petition has been dismissed, the reasons for such dismissal, or

(ii) if the debtor has been adjudged an insolvent, concise particulars of the insolvency, including a statement whether any previous adjudication has been annulled and, if so, the grounds therefor.

(2) Every insolvency petition presented by a creditor or creditors shall set forth the particulars regarding the debtor specified in clause (b) of sub-section (1), and shall also specify—

(a) the act of insolvency committed by such debtor, together with the date of its commission; and

14. No petition, whether presented by a debtor or by a creditor, shall be withdrawn without the leave of the Court.

Withdrawal of petitions.

15. Where two or more insolvency petitions are presented against the same debtor, or where separate petitions are presented against joint debtors, the Court may consolidate the proceedings or any of them, on such terms as the Court thinks fit.

Consolidation of petitions.

16. Where the petitioner does not proceed with due diligence on his petition the Court may substitute as petitioner any other creditor to whom the debtor may be indebted in the amount required by this Act in the case of a petitioning creditor.

Power to change carriage of proceedings.

17. If a debtor by or against whom an insolvency petition has been presented dies, the proceedings in the matter shall, unless the Court otherwise orders, be continued so far as may be necessary for the realisation and distribution of the property of the debtor.

Continuance of proceedings on death of debtor.

18. The procedure laid down in the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, with respect to the admission of plaints, shall, so far as it is applicable, be followed in the case of insolvency petitions.

V of 1908

Procedure for admission of petition.

19. (1) Where an insolvency petition is admitted, the Court shall make an order fixing a date for hearing the petition.

Procedure on admission of petition.

(2) Notice of the order under sub-section (1) shall be given to creditors in such manner as may be prescribed.

(3) Where the debtor is not the petitioner, notice of the order under sub-section (1) shall be served on him in the manner provided for the service of summons.

20. The Court when making an order admitting the petition may, and where the debtor is the petitioner ordinarily shall, appoint an interim receiver of the property of the debtor or of any part thereof, and may direct him to take immediate possession thereof or of any part thereof, and the interim receiver shall thereupon have such of the powers conferrable on a receiver appointed under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, as the Court may direct. If an interim receiver is not so appointed, the Court may make such appointment at any subsequent time before adjudication, and the provisions of this sub-section shall apply accordingly.

Appointment of interim receiver.

V of 1908.

21. At the time of making an order admitting the petition or at any subsequent time before adjudication, the Court may, either of its own motion or on the application of any creditor, make one or more of the following orders, namely:—

Interim proceedings against debtor.

(1) order the debtor to give reasonable security for his appearance until final orders are made upon the petition, and direct that, in default of giving such security, he shall be detained in the civil prison;

(2) order the attachment by actual seizure of the whole or any part of the property in the possession or under the control of the debtor, other than such particulars (not being his books of account) as are exempted by the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, or by any other enactment for the time being in force from liability to attachment and sale in execution of a decree;

V of 1908.

(3) order a warrant to issue with or without bail for the arrest of the debtor, and direct either that he be detained in the civil prison until the disposal of the petition, or that he be released on such terms as to security as may be reasonable and necessary:

Provided that an order under clause (2) or clause (3) shall not be made unless the Court is satisfied that the debtor, with intent to defeat or delay his creditors or to avoid any process of the Court,—

(i) has absconded or has departed from the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, or is about to abscond or to depart from such limits, or is remaining outside them, or

(ii) has failed to disclose or has concealed, destroyed, transferred or removed from such limits, or is about to conceal, destroy, transfer or remove from such limits, any documents likely to be of use to his creditors in the course of the hearing, or any part of his property other than such particulars as aforesaid.

Duties of debtors.

22. The debtor shall on the making of an order admitting the petition produce all books of account, and shall at any time thereafter give such inventories of his property, and such lists of his creditors and debtors and of the debts due to and from them, respectively, submit to such examination in respect of his property or his creditors, attend at such times before the Court or receiver, execute such instruments, and generally do all such acts and things in relation to his property as may be required by the Court or receiver, or as may be prescribed.

Release of debtor.

23. (1) At the time of making an order admitting the petition or at any subsequent time before adjudication, the Court may, if the debtor is under arrest or imprisonment in execution of the decree of any Court for the payment of money, order his release on such terms as to security as may be reasonable and necessary.

(2) The Court may at any time order any person who has been released under this section to be re-arrested and re-committed to the custody from which he was released.

(3) At the time of making any order under this section, the Court shall record in writing its reasons therefor.

Procedure at hearing.

24. (1) On the day fixed for the hearing of the petition, or on any subsequent day to which the hearing may be adjourned, the Court shall require proof of the following matters, namely:—

(a) that the creditor or the debtor, as the case may be, is entitled to present the petition:

Provided that, where the debtor is the petitioner, he shall, for the purpose of proving his inability to pay his debts, be required to furnish only such proof as to satisfy the Court that there are primâ facie grounds for believing the same and the Court, if and when so satisfied, shall not be bound to hear any further evidence thereon;

(b) that the debtor, if he does not appear on a petition presented by a creditor, has been served with notice of the order admitting the petition; and

(c) that the debtor has committed the act of insolvency alleged against him.

(2) The Court shall also examine the debtor, if he is present, as to his conduct, dealings and property in the presence of such creditors as appear at the hearing, and the creditors shall have the right to question the debtor thereon.

(3) The Court shall, if sufficient cause is shown, grant time to the debtor or to any creditor to produce any evidence which appears to it to be necessary for the proper disposal of the petition.

(4) A memorandum of the substance of the examination of the debtor and of any other oral evidence given shall be made by the Judge, and shall form part of the record of the case.

Dismissal of petition.

25. (1) In the case of a petition presented by a creditor, where the Court is not satisfied with the proof of his right to present the petition or of the service on the debtor of notice of the order admitting the petition, or of the alleged act of insolvency, or is satisfied by the debtor that he is able to pay his debts, or that for any other sufficient cause no order ought to be made, the Court shall dismiss the petition.

(2) In the case of a petition presented by a debtor, the Court shall dismiss the petition if it is not satisfied of his right to present the petition.

Award of compensation.

26. (1) Where a petition presented by a creditor is dismissed under sub-section (1) of section 25, and the Court is satisfied that the petition was frivolous or vexatious, the Court may, on the application of the debtor, award against such creditor such amount, not exceeding one thousand rupees, as it deems a reasonable compensation to the debtor for the expense or injury occasioned to him by the petition and the proceedings thereon, and such amount may be realised as if it were a fine.

(2) An award under this section shall bar any suit for compensation in respect of such petition and the proceedings thereon.

Order of Adjudication.

Order of adjudication.

27. (1) If the Court does not dismiss the petition, it shall make an order of adjudication, and shall specify in such order the period within which the debtor shall apply for his discharge.

(2) The Court may, if sufficient cause is shown, extend the period within which the debtor shall apply for his discharge, and in that case shall publish notice of the order in such manner as it thinks fit.

Effect of an order of adjudication.

28. (1) On the making of an order of adjudication, the insolvent shall aid to the utmost of his power in the realisation of his property and the distribution of the proceeds among his creditors.

(2) On the making of an order of adjudication the whole of the property of the insolvent shall vest in the Court or in a receiver as hereinafter provided, and shall become divisible among the creditors, and thereafter, except as provided by this Act, no creditor to whom the insolvent is indebted in respect of any debt provable under this Act shall during the pendency of the insolvency proceedings have any remedy against the property of the insolvent in respect of the debt, or commence any suit or other legal proceeding, except with the leave of the Court and on such terms as the Court may impose.

(3) For the purposes of sub-section (2), all goods being, at the date of the presentation of the petition on which the order is made, in the possession, order or disposition of the insolvent in his trade or business, by the consent and permission of the true owner, under such circumstances that he is the reputed owner thereof, shall be deemed to be the property of the insolvent.

(4) All property which is acquired by or devolves on the insolvent after the date of an order of adjudication and before his discharge shall forthwith vest in the Court or receiver, and the provisions of sub-section (2) shall apply in respect thereof.

(5) The property of the insolvent for the purposes of this section shall not include any property (not being books of account) which is exempted by the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, or by any other enactment for the time being in force from liability to attachment and sale in execution of a decree.

V of 1908.

(6) Nothing in this section shall affect the power of any secured creditor to realise or otherwise deal with his security, in the same manner as he would have been entitled to realise or deal with it if this section had not been passed.

(7) An order of adjudication shall relate back to, and take effect from, the date of the presentation of the petition on which it is made.

Stay of pending proceeding

29. Any Court in which a suit or other proceeding is pending against a debtor shall, on proof that an order of adjudication has been made against him under this Act, either stay the proceeding or allow it to continue on such terms as such Court may impose.

Publication of order of adjudication.

30. Notice of an order of adjudication stating the name, address and description of the insolvent, the date of the adjudication, the period within which the debtor shall apply for his discharge, and the Court by which the adjudication is made, shall be published in the local official Gazette and in such other manner as may be prescribed.

Proceedings consequent on order of adjudication.

Protection order.

31. (1) Any insolvent in respect of whom an order of adjudication has been made may apply to the Court for protection, and the Court may on such application make an order for the protection of the insolvent from arrest or detention.

(2) A protection order may apply either to all the debts of the debtor, or to any of them as the Court may think proper, and may commence and take effect at and for such time as the Court may direct, and may be revoked or renewed as the Court may think fit.

(3) A protection order shall protect the insolvent from being arrested or detained in prison for any debt to which such order applies, and any insolvent arrested or detained contrary to the terms of such an order shall be entitled to his release:

Provided that no such order shall operate to prejudice the rights of any creditor in the event of such order being revoked or the adjudication annulled.

(4) Any creditor shall be entitled to appear and oppose the grant of a protection order.

Power to arrest after adjudication.

32. At any time after an order of adjudication has been made, the Court may, if it has reason to believe on the application of any creditor or the receiver, that the debtor has absconded or departed from the local limits of its jurisdiction with intent to avoid any obligation which has been, or might be, imposed on him by or under this Act, order a warrant to issue for his arrest, and on his appearing or being brought before it, may, if satisfied that he was absconding or had departed with such intent, order his release on such terms as to security as may be reasonable or necessary, or if such security is not furnished, direct that he shall be detained in the civil prison for a period which may extend to three months.

Schedule of creditors.

33. (1) When an order of adjudication has been made under this Act, all persons alleging themselves to be creditors of the insolvent in respect of debts provable under this Act shall tender proof of their respective debts by producing evidence of the amount and particulars thereof, and the Court shall, by order, determine the persons who have proved themselves to be creditors of the insolvent in respect of such debts, and the amount of such debts, respectively, and shall frame a schedule of such persons and debts:

Provided that if, in the opinion of the Court, the value of any debt is incapable of being fairly estimated, the Court may make an order to that effect, and thereupon the debt shall not be included in the schedule.

(2) A copy of every such schedule shall be posted in the Court-house.

(3) Any creditor of the insolvent may, at any time before the discharge of the insolvent, tender proof of his debt and apply to the Court for an order directing his name to be entered in the schedule as a creditor in respect of any debt provable under this Act, and not entered in the schedule, and the Court, after causing notice to be served on the insolvent and the other creditors who have proved their debts, and hearing their objections (if any) shall comply with or reject the application.

Debts provable under the Act.

34. (1) Debts which have been excluded from the schedule on the ground that their value is incapable of being fairly estimated and demands in the nature of unliquidated damages arising otherwise than by reason of a contract or a breach of trust shall not be provable under this Act.

(2) Save as provided by sub-section (1), all debts and liabilities, present or future, certain or contingent, to which the debtor is subject when he is adjudged an insolvent, or to which he may become subject before his discharge by reason of any obligation incurred before the date of such adjudication, shall be deemed to be debts provable under this Act.

Annulment of adjudication.

35. Where, in the opinion of the Court, a debtor ought not to have been adjudged insolvent, or where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the debts of the insolvent have been paid in full, the Court shall, on the application of the debtor, or of any other person interested, by order in writing, annul the adjudication.

Power to annul adjudication of insolvency.

36. If, in any case in which an order of adjudication has been made, it shall be proved to the Court by which such order was made that insolvency proceedings are pending in another Court against the same debtor, and that the property of the debtor can be more conveniently distributed by such other Court, the Court may annul the adjudication or stay all proceedings thereon.

Power to cancel one of concurrent orders of adjudication.

37. (1) Where an adjudication is annulled, all sales and dispositions of property and payments duly made, and all acts theretofore done, by the Court or receiver, shall be valid; but, subject as aforesaid, the property of the debtor who was adjudged insolvent shall vest in such person as the Court may appoint, or, in default of any such appointment, shall revert to the debtor to the extent of his right or interest therein on such conditions (if any) as the Court may, by order in writing, declare.

Proceedings on annulment.

(2) Notice of every order annulling an adjudication shall be published in the local official Gazette and in such other manner as may be prescribed.

Compositions and schemes of arrangement.

38. (1) Where a debtor, after the making of an order of adjudication, submits a proposal for a composition in satisfaction of his debts, or a proposal for a scheme of arrangement of his affairs, the Court shall fix a date for the consideration of the proposal, and shall issue a notice to all creditors in such manner as may be prescribed.

Compositions and schemes of arrangement.

(2) If, on the consideration of the proposal, a majority in number and three-fourths in value of all the creditors whose debts are proved and who are present in person or by pleader, resolve to accept the proposal, the same shall be deemed to be duly accepted by the creditors.

(3) The debtor may at the meeting amend the terms of his proposal if the amendment is, in the opinion of the Court, calculated to benefit the general body of creditors.

(4) Where the Court is of opinion, after hearing the report of the receiver, if a receiver has been appointed, and after considering any objections which may be made by or on behalf of any creditor, that the terms of the proposal are not reasonable or are not calculated to benefit the general body of creditors, the Court shall refuse to approve the proposal.

(5) If any facts are proved on proof of which the Court would be required either to refuse, suspend or attach conditions to the debtor's discharge, the Court shall refuse to approve the proposal unless it provides reasonable security for payment of not less than six annas in the rupee on all the unsecured debts provable against the debtor's estate.

(6) No composition or scheme shall be approved by the Court which does not provide for the payment in priority to other debts of all debts directed to be so paid in the distribution of the property of an insolvent.

(7) In any other case the Court may either approve or refuse to approve the proposal.

39. If the Court approves the proposal, the terms shall be embodied in an order of the Court, and the Court shall frame a schedule in accordance with the provisions of section 33, the order of adjudication shall be annulled, and the provisions of section 37 shall apply, and the composition or scheme shall be binding on all the creditors entered in the said schedule so far as relates to any debts entered therein.

Order on approval.

40. If default is made in the payment of any instalment due in pursuance of the composition or scheme, or if it appears to the Court that the composition or scheme cannot proceed without injustice or undue delay, or that the approval of the Court was obtained by fraud, the Court may, if it thinks fit, re-adjudge the debtor insolvent and annul the composition or scheme but without prejudice to the validity of any transfer or payment duly made or of anything duly done under or in pursuance of the composition or scheme. When a debtor is re-adjudged insolvent under this sub-section, all debts provable in other respects which have been contracted before the date of such re-adjudication shall be provable in the insolvency.

Power to re-adjudge debtor insolvent.

Discharge.

41. (1) A debtor may, at any time after the order of adjudication, and shall, within the period specified by the Court, apply to the Court for an order of discharge, and the Court shall fix a day, notice whereof shall be given in such manner as may be prescribed, for hearing such application, and any objections which may be made thereto.

Discharge.

(2) Subject to the provisions of this section, the Court may, after considering the objections of any creditor and, where a receiver has been appointed, the report of the receiver —

(a) grant or refuse an absolute order of discharge; or

(b) suspend the operation of the order for a specified time; or

(c) grant an order of discharge subject to any conditions with respect to any earnings or income which may afterwards become due to the insolvent, or with respect to his after-acquired property.

42. (1) The Court shall refuse to grant an absolute order of discharge under section 41 on proof of any of the following facts, namely—

Cases in which Court must refuse an absolute discharge.

(a) that the insolvent's assets are not of a value equal to eight annas in the rupee on the amount of his unsecured liabilities, unless he satisfies the Court that the fact that the assets are not of a value equal to eight annas in the rupee on the amount of his unsecured liabilities has arisen from circumstances for which he cannot justly be held responsible;

(b) that the insolvent has omitted to keep such books of account as are usual and proper in the business carried on by him and as sufficiently disclose his business transactions and financial position within the three years immediately preceding his insolvency;

(c) that the insolvent has continued to trade after knowing himself to be insolvent;

(d) that the insolvent has contracted any debt provable under this Act without having at the time of contracting it any reasonable or probable ground of expectation (the burden of proving which shall lie on him) that he would be able to pay it;

(e) that the insolvent has failed to account satisfactorily for any loss of assets or for any deficiency of assets to meet his liabilities;

(f) that the insolvent has brought on, or contributed to, his insolvency by rash and hazardous speculations, or by unjustifiable extravagance in living, or by gambling, or by culpable neglect of his business affairs;

(g) that the insolvent has, within three months preceding the date of the presentation of the petition, when unable to pay his debts as they became due, given an undue preference to any of his creditors;

(h) that the insolvent has on any previous occasion been adjudged an insolvent or made a composition or arrangement with his creditors;

(i) that the insolvent has concealed or removed his property or any part thereof, or has been guilty of any other fraud or fraudulent breach of trust.

(2) For the purposes of this section, the report of the receiver shall be deemed to be evidence; and the Court may presume the correctness of any statement contained therein.

(3) The powers of suspending, and of attaching conditions to, an insolvent's discharge may be exercised concurrently.

Adjudication to be annulled on failure to apply for discharge.

43. (1) If the debtor does not appear on the day fixed for hearing his application for discharge or on such subsequent day as the Court may direct, or if the debtor does not apply for an order of discharge within the period specified by the Court, the order of adjudication shall be annulled, and the provisions of section 37 shall apply accordingly.

(2) Where a debtor has been released from custody under the provisions of this Act, and the order of adjudication is annulled under sub-section (1), the Court may, if it thinks fit, re-commit the debtor to his former custody, and the officer in charge of the prison to whose custody such debtor is so re-committed shall receive such debtor into his custody according to such re-commitment, and thereupon all processes which were in force against the person of such debtor at the time of such release as aforesaid shall be deemed to be still in force against him as if no order of adjudication had been made.

Effect of order of discharge.

44. (1) An order of discharge shall not release the insolvent from—

(a) any debt due to the Crown;

(b) any debt or liability incurred by means of any fraud or fraudulent breach of trust to which he was a party;

(c) any debt or liability in respect of which he has obtained forbearance by any fraud to which he was a party; or

(d) any liability under an order for maintenance made under section 488 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898. V of 1898.

(2) Save as otherwise provided by sub-section (1), an order of discharge shall release the insolvent from all debts provable under this Act.

(3) An order of discharge shall not release any person who, at the date of the presentation of the petition, was a partner or co-trustee with the insolvent, or was jointly bound or had made any joint contract with him or any person who was surety for him.

PART III.

ADMINISTRATION OF PROPERTY.

Method of proof of debts.

Debt payable at a future time.

45. A creditor may prove for a debt not payable when the debtor is adjudged an insolvent as if it were payable presently, and may receive dividends equally with the other creditors, deducting therefrom only a rebate of interest at the rate of six per centum per annum computed from the declaration of a dividend to the time when the debt would have become payable, according to the terms on which it was contracted.

Mutual dealings and set-off.

46. Where there have been mutual dealings between an insolvent and a creditor proving or claiming to prove a debt under this Act, an account shall be taken of what is due from the one party to the other in respect of such mutual dealings, and the sum due from the one party shall be set off against any sum due from the other party, and the balance of the account, and no more, shall be claimed or paid on either side respectively.

Secured creditors.

47. (1) Where a secured creditor realises his security, he may prove for the balance due to him, after deducting the net amount realised.

(2) Where a secured creditor relinquishes his security for the general benefit of the creditors, he may prove for his whole debt.

(3) Where a secured creditor does not either realise or relinquish his security, he shall, before being entitled to have his debt entered in the schedule, state in his proof the particulars of his security, and the value at which he assesses it, and shall be entitled to receive a dividend only in respect of the balance due to him after deducting the value so assessed.

(4) Where a security is so valued, the Court may at any time before realisation redeem it on payment to the creditor of the assessed value.

(5) Where a creditor, after having valued his security, subsequently realises it, the net amount realised shall be substituted for the amount of any valuation previously made by the creditor, and shall be treated in all respects as an amended valuation made by the creditor.

(6) Where a secured creditor does not comply with the provisions of this section, he shall be excluded from all share in any dividend.

Interest.

48. (1) On any debt or sum certain whereon interest is not reserved or agreed for, and which is overdue when the debtor is adjudged an insolvent, and which is provable under this Act, the creditor may prove for interest at a rate not exceeding six per centum per annum,—

(a) if the debt or sum is payable by virtue of a written instrument at a certain time, from the time when such debt or sum was payable to the date of such adjudication; or,

(b) if the debt or sum is payable otherwise, from the time when a demand in writing has been made giving the debtor notice that interest will be claimed from the date of the demand until the time of payment to the date of such adjudication.

(2) Where a debt which has been proved under this Act includes interest or any pecuniary consideration in lieu of interest, the interest or consideration shall, for the purposes of dividend be calculated at a rate not exceeding six per centum per annum, without prejudice to the right of a creditor to receive out of the debtor's estate any higher rate of interest to which he may be entitled after all the debts proved have been paid in full.

Mode of proof.

49. (1) A debt may be proved under this Act by delivering, or sending by post in a registered letter, to the Court an affidavit verifying the debt.

(2) The affidavit shall contain or refer to a statement of account showing the particulars of the debt, and shall specify the vouchers (if any) by which the same can be substantiated. The Court may at any time call for the production of the vouchers.

Disallowance and reduction of entries in schedule.

50. (1) Where the receiver thinks that a debt has been improperly entered in the schedule the Court may, on the application of the receiver and, after notice to the creditor, and such inquiry (if any) as the Court thinks necessary, expunge such entry or reduce the amount of the debt.

(2) The Court may also, after like inquiry, expunge an entry or reduce the amount of a debt upon the application of a creditor where no receiver has been appointed, or where the receiver declines to interfere in the matter or, in the case of a composition or scheme, upon the application of the debtor.

Effect of insolvency on antecedent transactions.

Restriction of rights of creditor under execution.

51. (1) Where execution of a decree has issued against the property of a debtor, no person shall be entitled to the benefit of the execution against the receiver except in respect of assets realised in the course of the execution by sale or otherwise before the date of the admission of the petition.

(2) Nothing in this section shall affect the rights of a secured creditor in respect of the property against which the decree is executed.

(3) A person who in good faith purchases the property of a debtor under a sale in execution shall in all cases acquire a good title to it against the receiver.

Duties of Court executing decree as to property taken in execution.

52. Where execution of a decree has issued against any property of a debtor which is saleable in execution and before the sale thereof notice is given to the Court executing the decree that an insolvency petition by or against the debtor has been admitted, the Court shall, on application, direct the property, if in the possession of the Court, to be delivered to the receiver, but the costs of the suit in which the decree was made and of the execution shall be a first charge on the property so delivered, and the receiver may sell the property or an adequate part thereof for the purpose of satisfying the charge.

Avoidance of voluntary transfer.

53. Any transfer of property not being a transfer made before and in consideration of marriage or made in favour of a purchaser or incumbrancer in good faith and for valuable consideration shall, if the transferor is adjudged insolvent within two years after the date of the transfer, be voidable as against the receiver and may be annulled by the Court.

Avoidance of preference in certain cases.

54. (1) Every transfer of property, every payment made, every obligation incurred, and every judicial proceeding taken or suffered by any person unable to pay his debts as they become due from his own money in favour of any creditor, with a view of giving that creditor a preference over the other creditors, shall, if such person is adjudged insolvent on a petition presented within three months after the date thereof, be deemed fraudulent and void as against the receiver and shall be annulled by the Court.

(2) This section shall not affect the rights of any person who in good faith and for valuable consideration has acquired a title through or under a creditor of the insolvent.

Protection of bonâ fide transactions.

55. Subject to the foregoing provisions of this Act with respect to the effect of insolvency on an execution, and with respect to the avoidance of certain transfers and preferences, nothing in this Act shall invalidate in the case of an insolvency—

(a) any payment by the insolvent to any of his creditors;

(b) any payment or delivery to the insolvent;

(c) any transfer by the insolvent for valuable consideration; or

(d) any contract or dealing by or with the insolvent for valuable consideration:

Provided that any such transaction takes place before the date of the order of adjudication, and that the person with whom such transaction takes place has not at the time notice of the presentation of any insolvency petition by or against the debtor.

Realisation of Property.

Appointment of receiver.

56. (1) The Court may, at the time of the order of adjudication, or at any time afterwards, appoint a receiver for the property of the insolvent, and such property shall thereupon vest in such receiver.

(2) Subject to such conditions as may be prescribed, the Court may—

(a) require the receiver to give such security as it thinks fit duly to account for what he shall receive in respect of the property; and

(b) by general or special order, fix the amount to be paid as remuneration for the services of the receiver out of the assets of the insolvent.

(3) Where the Court appoints a receiver, it may remove the person in whose possession or custody any such property as aforesaid is from the possession or custody thereof:

Provided that nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise the Court to remove from the possession or custody of property any person whom the insolvent has not a present right so to remove.

(4) Where a receiver appointed under this section—

(a) fails to submit his accounts at such periods and in such form as the Court directs, or

(b) fails to pay the balance due from him thereon as the Court directs, or

(c) occasions loss to the property by his wilful default or gross negligence, the Court may direct his property to be attached and sold, and may apply the proceeds to make good any balance found to be due from him or any loss so occasioned by him.

(5) The provisions of this section shall apply, so far as may be, to interim receivers appointed under section 20.

Power to appoint Official Receivers.

57. (1) The Local Government may appoint such persons as it thinks fit (to be called "Official Receivers") to be receivers under this Act within such local limits as it may prescribe.

(2) Where any Official Receiver has been so appointed for the local limits of the jurisdiction of any Court having jurisdiction under this Act, he shall be the receiver for the purpose of every order appointing a receiver or an interim receiver issued by any such Court, unless the Court for special reasons otherwise directs.

(3) Any sum payable under clause (b) of sub-section (2) of section 56 in respect of the services of an Official Receiver shall be credited to such fund as the Local Government may direct.

(4) Every Official Receiver shall receive such remuneration out of the said fund or otherwise as the Local Government may fix in this behalf, and no remuneration whatever beyond that so fixed shall be received by the Official Receiver as such.

Powers of Court if no receiver appointed.

58. Where no receiver is appointed, the Court shall have all the rights of, and may exercise all the powers conferred on, a receiver under this Act.

Duties and powers of receiver.

59. Subject to the provisions of this Act, the receiver shall, with all convenient speed, realise the property of the debtor and distribute dividends among the creditors entitled thereto, and for that purpose may—

(a) sell all or any part of the property of the insolvent;

(b) give receipts for any money received by him;

and may, by leave of the Court, do all or any of the following things, namely:—

(c) carry on the business of the insolvent so far as may be necessary for the beneficial winding up of the same;

(d) institute, defend or continue any suit or other legal proceeding relating to the property of the insolvent;

(e) employ a pleader or other agent to take any proceedings or do any business which may be sanctioned by the Court;

(f) accept as the consideration for the sale of any property of the insolvent a sum of money payable at a future time subject to such stipulations as to security and otherwise as the Court thinks fit;

(g) mortgage or pledge any part of the property of the insolvent for the purpose of raising money for the payment of his debts;

(h) refer any dispute to arbitration, and compromise all debts, claims and liabilities, on such terms as may be agreed upon; and

(i) divide in its existing form amongst the creditors, according to its estimated value, any property which, from its peculiar nature or other special circumstances, cannot readily or advantageously be sold.

Special provisions in regard to immoveable property.

60. (1) In any local area in which a declaration has been made under section 68 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, and is in force, no sale of immoveable property paying revenue to the Government or held or let for agricultural purposes shall be made by the receiver; but, after the other property of the insolvent has been realised, the Court shall ascertain— V of 1908.

(a) the amount required to satisfy the debts proved under this Act after deducting the monies already received;

(b) the immoveable property of the insolvent remaining unsold; and

(c) the incumbrances (if any) existing thereon;

and shall forward a statement to the Collector containing the particulars aforesaid; and thereupon the Collector shall proceed to raise the amount so required by the exercise of such of the powers conferred on him by paragraphs 2 to 10 of the Third Schedule to the said Code as he thinks fit, and subject to the provisions of those paragraphs so far as they are applicable, and shall hold at the disposal of the Court all sums that may come to his hands by the exercise of such powers.

(2) Nothing in this Act shall be deemed to affect any provisions of any enactment for the time being in force prohibiting or restricting the execution of decrees or orders against immoveable property; and any such provisions shall be deemed to apply to the enforcement of an order of adjudication made under this Act as if it were such a decree or order.

Distribution of Property.

Priority of debts.

61. (1) In the distribution of the property of the insolvent, there shall be paid in priority to all other debts—

(a) all debts due to the Crown or to any local authority; and

(b) all salary or wages, not exceeding twenty rupees in all, of any clerk, servant or labourer in respect of services rendered to the insolvent during four months before the date of the presentation of the petition.

(2) The debts specified in sub-section (1) shall rank equally between themselves, and shall be paid in full, unless the property of the insolvent is insufficient to meet them, in which case they shall abate in equal proportions between themselves.

(3) Subject to the retention of such sums as may be necessary for the expenses of administration or otherwise, the debts specified in sub-section (1) shall be discharged forthwith in so far as the property of the insolvent is sufficient to meet them.

(4) In the case of partners, the partnership property shall be applicable in the first instance in payment of the partnership debts, and the separate property of each partner shall be applicable in the first instance in payment of his separate debts. Where there is a surplus of the separate property of the partners, it shall be dealt with as part of the partnership property; and where there is a surplus of the partnership property, it shall be dealt with as part of the respective separate property in proportion to the rights and interests of each partner in the partnership property.

(5) Subject to the provisions of this Act, all debts entered in the schedule shall be paid rateably according to the amounts of such debts respectively and without any preference.

(6) Where there is any surplus after payment of the foregoing debts, it shall be applied in payment of interest from the date on which the debtor is adjudged an insolvent at the rate of six per centum per annum on all debts entered in the schedule.

Calculation of dividends.

62. (1) In the calculation of dividends, the receiver shall retain in his hands sufficient assets to meet—

(a) debts provable under this Act and appearing, from the insolvent's statements or otherwise, to be due to persons resident in places so distant that in the ordinary course of communication they have not had sufficient time to tender their proofs;

(b) debts provable under this Act, the subject of claims not yet determined;

(c) disputed proofs or claims; and

(d) the expenses necessary for the administration of the estate or otherwise.

(2) Subject to the provisions of sub-section (1), all money in hand shall be distributed as dividends.

Right of creditor who has not proved debt before declaration of a dividend.

63. Any creditor who has not proved his debt before the declaration of any dividend or dividends shall be entitled to be paid, out of any money for the time being in the hands of the receiver, any dividend or dividends which he may have failed to receive before that money is applied to the payment of any future dividend or dividends; but he shall not be entitled to disturb the distribution of any dividend declared before his debt was proved by reason that he has not participated therein.

Final dividend.

64. When the receiver has realised all the property of the insolvent or so much thereof as can, in the opinion of the Court, be realised without needlessly protracting the receivership, he shall declare a final dividend; but before so doing, he shall give notice in manner prescribed to the persons whose claims to be creditors have been notified but not proved, that if they do not prove their claims within the time limited by the notice, he will proceed to make a final dividend without regard to their claims. After the expiration of the time so limited, or, if the Court, on application by any such claimant, grants him further time for establishing his claim, then on the expiration of such further time, the property of the insolvent shall be divided among the creditors entered in the schedule without regard to the claims of any other persons.

No suit for dividend.

65. No suit for a dividend shall lie against the receiver; but where the receiver refuses to pay any dividend, the Court may, on the application of any creditor who is entered in the schedule, order him to pay it, and also to pay out of his own money interest thereon for the time that it is withheld, and the costs of the application.

Management by and allowance to insolvent.

66. (1) The Court may appoint the insolvent himself to superintend the management of the property of the insolvent or of any part thereof, or to carry on the trade (if any) of the insolvent for the benefit of the creditors, and in any other respect to aid in administering the property in such manner and on such terms as the Court may direct.

(2) The Court may, from time to time, make such allowance as it may think just to the insolvent out of his property for the support of himself and his family, or in consideration of his services if he is engaged in winding up his estate; but any such allowance may, at any time, be varied or determined by the Court.

Right of insolvent to surplus.

67. The insolvent shall be entitled to any surplus remaining after payment in full of his creditors, with interest as provided by this Act, and of the expenses of the proceedings taken thereunder.

Appeal to Court against receiver.

68. If the insolvent or any of the creditors or any other person is aggrieved by any act or decision of the receiver, he may apply to the Court, and the Court may confirm, reverse or modify the act or decision complained of, and make such order as it thinks just :

Appeal to Court against receiver.

Provided that no application under this section shall be entertained after the expiration of twenty-one days from the date of the act or decision complained of.

PART IV.

PENALTIES.

69. If a debtor, whether before or after the making of an order of adjudication,—

Offences by debtors.

(a) wilfully fails to perform the duties imposed on him by section 22 or to deliver up possession of any part of his property which is divisible among his creditors under this Act, and which is for the time being in his possession or under his control to the Court or to any person authorised by the Court to take possession of it, or

(b) fraudulently with intent to conceal the state of his affairs or to defeat the objects of this Act,—

(i) has destroyed or otherwise wilfully prevented or purposely withheld the production of any document relating to such of his affairs as are subject to investigation under this Act, or

(ii) has kept or caused to be kept false books, or

(iii) has made false entries in or withheld entries from or wilfully altered or falsified any document relating to such of his affairs as are subject to investigation under this Act, or

(c) fraudulently with intent to diminish the sum to be divided among his creditors or to give an undue preference to any of his creditors,—

(i) has discharged or concealed any debt due to or from him, or

(ii) has made away with, charged, mortgaged or concealed any part of his property of any kind whatsoever, he shall be punishable on conviction by the Court with imprisonment which may extend to one year.

70. (1) Where the Court is satisfied that there is ground for inquiring into any offence referred to in section 69, the Court shall direct that a notice be served on the debtor in the manner prescribed in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for service of a summons, calling on him to show cause why a charge or charges should not be framed against him. V of 1898.

Procedure on charge under section 69.

(2) The notice shall set forth the substance of the offence, and any number of offences may be set forth in the same notice.

(3) At the hearing of such notice and of any charge framed in pursuance thereof, the Court shall, so far as may be, follow the procedure for the trial of warrant cases by Magistrates prescribed by Chapter XXI of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, and nothing in Chapter XXIII of the said Code relating to trials before High Courts and Courts of Session shall be applicable to such trial. V of 1898.

(4) Any number of offences under this section may be charged at the same time:

Provided that no debtor shall be sentenced to imprisonment exceeding an aggregate period of two years for offences under this section committed in the course of the same insolvency proceeding.

(5) The Court may, instead of itself inquiring into an offence under section 69 make a complaint thereof in writing to the nearest Magistrate of the first class having jurisdiction, and such Magistrate shall deal with such complaint in the manner laid down in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 : V of 1898.

Provided that it shall not be necessary to examine the complainant.

71. Where an insolvent has been guilty of any of the offences specified in section 69, he shall not be exempt from being proceeded against therefor by reason that he has obtained his discharge or that a composition or scheme of arrangement has been accepted or approved.

Criminal liability after discharge or composition.

72. (1) An undischarged insolvent obtaining credit to the extent of fifty rupees or upwards from any person without informing such person that he is an undischarged insolvent shall, on conviction by a Magistrate, be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

Undischarged insolvent obtaining credit.

(2) Where the Court has reason to believe that an undischarged insolvent has committed the offence referred to in sub-section (1), the Court, after making any preliminary inquiry that may be necessary, may send the case for trial to the nearest Magistrate of the first class, and may send the accused in custody or take sufficient security for his appearance before such Magistrate ; and may bind over any person to appear and give evidence on such trial.

73. (1) Where a debtor is adjudged or re-adjudged insolvent under this Act, he shall, subject to the provisions of this section, be disqualified from—

Disqualifications of insolvent.

(a) being appointed or acting as a Magistrate ;

(b) being elected to any office of any local authority where the appointment to such office is by election or holding or exercising any such office to which no salary is attached ; and

(c) being elected or sitting or voting as member of any local authority.

(2) The disqualifications which an insolvent is subject to under this section shall be removed, and shall cease if—

(a) the order of adjudication is annulled under section 35, or

(b) he obtains from the Court an order of discharge, whether absolute or conditional, with a certificate that his insolvency was caused by misfortune without any misconduct on his part.

(3) The Court may grant or refuse such certificate as it thinks fit, but any order of refusal shall be subject to appeal.

PART V.

SUMMARY ADMINISTRATION.

Summary administration.

74. When a petition is presented by or against a debtor, if the Court is satisfied by affidavit or otherwise that the property of the debtor is not likely to exceed in value five hundred rupees, the Court may make an order that the debtor's estate be administered in a summary manner, and thereupon the provisions of this Act shall be subject to the following modifications, namely :—

(i) unless the Court otherwise directs, no notice required under this Act, shall be published in the local official Gazette ;

(ii) on the admission of a petition by a debtor, the property of the debtor shall vest in the Court as a reciever ;

(iii) at the hearing of the petition, the Court shall inquire into the debts and assets of the debtor, and determine the same by order in writing, and it shall not be necessary to frame a schedule under the provisions of section 33 ;

(iv) the property of the debtor shall be realised with all reasonable despatch and thereafter, when practicable, distributed in a single dividend ;

(v) the debtor shall apply for his discharge within six months from the date of adjudication ; and

(vi) such other modifications as may be prescribed with the view of saving expense and simplifying procedure :

Provided that the Court may at any time direct that the ordinary procedure provided for in this Act shall be followed in regard to the debtor's estate, and thereafter the Act shall have effect accordingly.

PART VI.

APPEALS.

Appeals.

75. (1) The debtor, any creditor, the receiver or any other person aggrieved by a decision come to or an order made in the exercise of insolvency jurisdiction by a Court subordinate to a District Court may appeal to the District Court, and the order of the District Court upon such appeal shall be final :

Provided that the High Court, for the purpose of satisfying itself that an order made in any appeal decided by the District Court was according to law, may call for the case and pass such order with respect thereto as it thinks fit :

Provided, further, that any such person aggrieved by a decision of the District Court on appeal from a decision of a subordinate Court under section 4 may appeal to the High Court on any of the grounds mentioned in sub-section (1) of section 100 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. V of 1908.

(2) Any such person aggrieved by any such decision or order of a District Court as is specified in Schedule I, come to or made otherwise than in appeal from an order made by a subordinate Court, may appeal to the High Court.

(3) Any such person aggrieved by any other order made by a District Court otherwise than in appeal from an order made by a subordinate Court may appeal to the High Court by leave of the District Court or of the High Court.

(4) The periods of limitation for appeals to the District Court and to the High Court under this section shall be thirty days and ninety days, respectively.

PART VII.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Costs.

76. The costs of any proceeding under this Act, including the costs of maintaining a debtor in the civil prison, shall, subject to any rules made under this Act, be in the discretion of the Court in which the proceeding is had.

Courts to be auxiliary to each other.

77. All Courts having jurisdiction in insolvency and the officers of such Courts respectively shall severally act in aid of and be auxiliary to each other in all matters of insolvency, and an order of a Court seeking aid with a request to another of the said Courts shall be deemed sufficient to enable the latter Court to exercise, in regard to the matters directed by the order, such jurisdiction as either of such Courts could exercise in regard to similar matters within their respective jurisdictions.

Limitation.

78. (1) The provisions of sections 5 and 12 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, shall apply to appeals and applications under this Act, and for the purpose of the said section 12, a decision under section 4 shall be deemed to be a decree. IX of 1908.

(2) Where an order of adjudication has been annulled under this Act, in computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit or application for the execution of a decree (other than a suit or application in respect of which the leave of the Court was obtained under sub-section (2) of section 28) which might have been brought or made but for the making of an order of adjudication under this Act, the period from the date of the order of adjudication to the date of the order of annulment shall be excluded :

Provided that nothing in this section shall apply to a suit or application in respect of a debt provable but not proved under this Act.

79. (1) The High Court may, with the previous sanction, in the case of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, of the Governor General in Council, and, in the case of any other High Court, of the Local Government, make rules for carrying into effect the provisions of this Act.

Power to make rules.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may provide—

(a) for the appointment and remuneration of receivers (other than Official Receivers), the audit of the accounts of all receivers and the costs of such audit,

(b) for meetings of creditors,

(c) for the procedure to be followed where the debtor is a firm, and

(d) for the procedure to be followed in the case of estates to be administered in a summary manner.

(3) All rules made under this section shall be published in the Gazette of India or in the local official Gazette, as the case may be, and shall, on such publication, have effect as if enacted in this Act.

80. (1) The High Court, with the like sanction, may from time to time direct that, in any matters in respect of which jurisdiction is given to the Court by this Act, the Official Receiver shall, subject to the directions of the Court, have all or any of the following powers, namely :—

Delegation of powers to Official Receivers.

(a) to hear insolvency petitions, to examine the debtor and to make orders of adjudication ;

(b) to frame schedules and to admit or reject proofs of creditors ;

(c) to grant orders of discharge ;

(d) to approve compositions or schemes of arrangement ;

(e) to make interim orders in any case of urgency ; and

(f) to hear and determine any unopposed or ex parte application.

(2) Subject to the appeal to the Court provided for by section 68, any order made or act done by the Official Receiver in the exercise of the said powers shall be deemed the order or act of the Court.

81. Any Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may, by notification in the local official Gazette, declare that any of the provisions of this Act specified in Schedule II shall not apply to insolvency proceedings in any Court or Courts having jurisdiction under this Act in any part of the territories administered by such Local Government.

Power of Local Government to bar application of certain provisions to certain Courts.

82. Nothing in this Act shall—

Savings.

(a) affect the Presidency-towns Insolvency Act, 1909, or section 8 of the Lower Burma Courts Act, 1900, or — III of 1909. VI of 1900.

(b) apply to cases to which Chapter IV of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, 1879, is applicable. — XVII of 1879.

83. (1) The enactments mentioned in Schedule III are hereby repealed to the extent specified in the fourth column thereof.

Repeals.

(2) Where in any enactment or instrument in force at the date of the commencement of this Act, reference is made to Chapter XX (of Insolvent Judgment-debtors) of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877, or of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, or to any section of either of those Chapters, such reference shall, so far as may be practicable, be construed as applying to this Act or to the corresponding section thereof. — X of 1877. The following Act of the Indian Legislative Council received the assent of the Governor General on the 25th February, 1920, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. VI OF 1920.

[AS PASSED IN COUNCIL]

An Act to amend the Inland Steam-vessels Act, 1917.

I of 1917. WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Inland Steam-vessels Act, 1917 ; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called the Inland Steam-vessels (Amendment) Act, 1920.

I of 1917.

Insertion of new section 22-A in Act I of 1917.

2. After section 22 of the Inland Steam-vessels Act, 1917 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act), the following section shall be inserted, namely :—

Licences.

" 22-A. (1) The Local Government may also, in its discretion, grant—

(a) to a person who is in possession of a second-class master's certificate granted under section 21 or section 22, and has, by virtue of such certificate, acted as master of an inland steam-vessel having engines of forty or more nominal horse-power for a period of not less than five years, or

VII of 1884.

(b) to a person who is in possession of a first-class engine-driver's certificate granted under section 21 or section 22, or an engine-driver's certificate granted under the Indian Steam-ships Act, 1884, and has, by virtue of such certificate, served as an engine-driver of an inland steam-vessel having engines of not less than seventy nominal horse-power for five years, for not less than two and a half years of which period he has been the engine-driver of such vessel within the meaning of section 26, a licence authorising such person to act as master or engineer, as the case may be, of any inland steam-vessel having engines of one hundred and seventy nominal horse-power or of such less nominal horse-power as to such Government may deem fit.

(2) Any such licence shall remain in force only for such time as the person holding the same is in possession of and entitled to a master's or an engine-driver's certificate, as the case may be, of the nature referred to in sub-section (1) :

Provided that the Local Government may, in its discretion, suspend, cancel or vary the conditions of any such licence."

Amendment of section 23, Act I of 1917.

3. In section 23 of the said Act, after the word "service" the words "and every licence" shall be inserted, and after the words "entitled to the certificate" the words "or licence" shall be inserted.

Amendment of section 24, Act I of 1917.

Bills introduced in the Indian Legislative Council, Reports of Select Committees presented to the Council and Bills published under Rule 23.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill further to amend the Workman's Breach of Contracts, Act, 1859, was presented to the Indian Legislative of Council on the 25th February, 1910.

We, the undersigned, Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill further to amend the Workman's Breach of Contract Act, 1859, was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill as amended by us annexed thereto.

Paper No I.—From the Chief Commissioner of Baluchistan, dated the 20th October, 1919; Chief Commissioner of Ajmer-Merwara, dated the 7th November, 1919, and 27th November, 1919; Chief Commissioner, North-West Frontier Province, dated the 28th November, 1919; Chief Commissioner of Delhi, dated the 5th December, 1919; Chief Commissioner of Baluchistan, dated the 5th December, 1919; Government of United Provinces, dated the 4th December, 1919, and enclosures, and 9th December, 1919, and 12th December, 1919, and enclosures; and Chief Commissioner of Assam, dated the 11th December, 1919, and enclosures.

Paper No. II.—From the Government of the Punjab, dated the 11th December, 1919, and enclosures; Chief Commissioner of Coorg, dated the 18th December, 1919, and enclosure; Chief Commissioner of Central Provinces, dated the 20th December, 1919; Chief Commissioner of Coorg, dated the 24th December, 1919; and Government of Bengal, dated the 27th December 1919.

Paper No. III.—From Government of Bihar and Orissa, dated the 30th November, 1919; Government of Burma, dated the 28th December, 1919, and enclosures; Government of Bombay, dated the 9th January, 1920, and enclosures; and Government of Bihar and Orissa, dated the 10th January, 1920.

Paper No. IV.—From Government of Bengal, dated the 21st January, 1920; Calcutta High Court, dated the 22nd January, 1920; and Government of Madras, dated the 23rd January, 1920, and enclosures.

2. It was suggested to us that the words "or to get performed by any other artisans, workmen or labourers" in section 1 of the Act should be omitted. Some support for this proposal is to be found in the opinions which have been laid before us, but it involves a fresh extension of the limitation of the scope of the Act which is provided for by the Bill. We are not satisfied that those special interests which are particularly concerned in the working of the Act have had a sufficient opportunity of expressing an opinion on this point, (which was not directly referred to them) to justify us in amending the Bill in this direction. We are confirmed in this opinion by the fact that we are ourselves considerably divided as to the advisability or expediency of such an amendment.

3. With reference to the new section 2 introduced by clause 3 of the Bill it was suggested to us—(1) that the powers of the Magistrate should be limited, in the first instance, to the imposition of some pecuniary liability and that imprisonment should only follow upon default of payment; and (2) that for the provision limiting imprisonment for failure to pay an instalment there should be substituted a single offence carrying the maximum penalty. The first proposal seems to most of us calculated to deprive the Act of any efficacy it may possess from the point of view of the employer, and the second to be unduly severe upon the workman.

4. We think there is more to be said for a suggestion that an employer should not be allowed to use the Act against a particular workman after he has once obtained an order under the Act against that workman. There seems to us substance in the argument that an employer who deliberately engages a dishonest employee against whom he has previously taken proceedings does so with his eyes open, and should not therefore be again entitled to have resort to the special procedure allowed by the Act. We have accordingly amended the proviso to sub-section (1) of the new section 2 introduced by clause 3 of the Bill to meet this case.

5. We have made certain drafting alterations in the Bill, more particularly in section 2(B) inserted by clause 3 of the Bill, where we have struck out superfluous words which appear to have slipped into the draft.

Minute of Dissent.

1. I do not agree to proviso (b) to clause 3 (1) of the Bill. It appears to me that this proviso may operate very hardly against the employé.

2. In view of the note on this Bill from the Government of Madras which was not before the Select Committee during their deliberations I consider that the limitation of the advance to R300 in clause 2 (2) of the Bill is inadequate as far as maistries and kanganis in the Madras Presidency are concerned. I therefore reserve the right to move a further amendment on this point.

BILL NO. 30 OF 1919.

[AS AMENDED BY THE SELECT COMMITTEE.]

[Words printed in italics indicate the amendments suggested by Select Committee.]

A Bill Further to amend the Workman's Breach of Contract Act, 1859.

XIII of 1859. WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the Workman's Breach of Contract Act, 1859; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title. 1. This Act may be called the Workman's Breach of Contract (Amendment) Act, 191 .

Amendment of section 1, Act XIII of 1859. XIII of 1859. 2. (1) Section 1 of the Workman's Breach of Contract Act, 1859 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act) shall be re-numbered sub-section (1) of section 1.

(2) In the said sub-section—

(a) after the words "an advance of money" the words "not exceeding three hundred rupees" shall be inserted; and

(b) the words "and the Magistrate shall thereupon issue" to the end of the section shall be omitted.

(3) To the said section the following sub-sections shall be added, namely:—

"(2) The Magistrate shall at once examine the complainant on oath and may thereupon dismiss the complaint if in his opinion there is no sufficient ground for proceeding.

(3) If in the opinion of the Magistrate there is sufficient ground for proceeding, he shall issue a summons or warrant, as he may think proper, for bringing before him such artificer, workman or labourer, and shall hear and determine the case.".

Substitution of new sections for section 2, Act XIII of 1859. 3. (1) For section 2 of the said Act the following sections shall be substituted, namely:—

Order for repayment of advance or performance of contract. "2. (1) If it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the Magistrate that such artificer, workman or labourer has received money in advance, not exceeding three hundred rupees, from the complainant on account of any such work, and has wilfully and without lawful or reasonable excuse neglected or refused to perform or get performed the same according to the terms of his contract, the Magistrate may in his discretion either order such artificer, workman or labourer to repay the money advanced, or such part thereof as may be just and proper, within such period and in such instalments, if any, as the Magistrate thinks fit, or order him to perform or get performed such work within such period not exceeding one year as the Magistrate may determine and otherwise according to the terms of the contract:

Provided that no such order shall be made—

(a) unless the complaint was brought within three months of the neglect or refusal; or

(b) if it is proved that the complainant has on any previous occasion obtained an order under this sub-section against such artificer, workman or labourer.

Explanation:—Where no time has been fixed for the performance of a contract, neglect may be presumed to have occurred on the expiry of such period as the Magistrate deems to be a reasonable time for the performance thereof.

(2) If such artificer, workman or labourer shall fail to comply with an order made under sub-section (1), the Magistrate may sentence him to imprisonment for a period not exceeding three months, or, if the order be for the repayment of a sum of money, for a period which may extend to three months or until repayment is made, whichever period is shorter:

Provided that, where any instalment has been ordered, no sentence of imprisonment exceeding one month shall be passed for default in payment of any one instalment, and the aggregate of such sentences shall not exceed three months.

(3) The Magistrate may from time to time extend the period for repayment of money advanced or for the performance of work, as the case may be, and may vary the instalments:

Provided that no order shall be made under this sub-section extending beyond one year from the date of the order under sub-section (1) the period within which the work is to be performed.

(4) No repayment of any money or order therefor shall deprive the complainant of any civil remedy whether for the recovery of any money advanced and remaining unpaid or otherwise, which he may have otherwise than under this Act.

Inequitable contracts not to be enforced. 2 A. The Magistrate may in his discretion refuse to make an order under section 2 where in his opinion the contract in respect of a breach of which the complaint has been made was substantially unfair.

Compensation in false or frivolous or vexatious complaints. 2 B. (1) If in any proceedings under this Act the Magistrate is of opinion that the complaint was false to the knowledge of the complainant or was frivolous or vexatious, he may in his discretion call upon the complainant forthwith to show cause why he should not pay compensation to the person complained against.

(2) The Magistrate shall consider any cause which such complainant may show, and, if after so doing he is satisfied that the accusation was false to the knowledge of the complainant or was frivolous or vexatious, he may, for reasons to be recorded, direct that compensation not exceeding fifty rupees be paid by the complainant to the person complained against.

(3) Compensation for the payment of which an order is made under sub-section (2) shall be recoverable as if it were a fine, and the Magistrate may, by the order directing payment of the same, further order that in default of payment the complainant shall suffer simple imprisonment for a period which may extend to thirty days or until payment is made, whichever period is shorter."

Amendment of section 3, Act XIII of 1859.

4. In section 3 of the said Act for the words "to be imprisoned with hard labour" the words "to imprisonment" shall be substituted.

Substitution of new section for section 4, Act XIII of 1859.

5. For section 4 of the said Act the following section shall be substituted, namely:—

To what contracts Act extends.

"4. In this Act the word "contract" shall extend to all contracts within the meaning of the Indian Contract Act, 1872: IX of 1872.

Provided that nothing in this Act shall apply to contracts where, a period having been specified for performance, such period exceeds one year."

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 25th February, 1920 :—

No. 7 OF 1920.

A bill to take power to require passports of persons entering British India.

WHEREAS it is expedient to take power to require passports of persons entering British India; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title and extent.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Passport Act, 1920.

(2) It shall extend to the whole of British India, including British Baluchistan, the Sonthal Parganas and the district of Angul.

Definitions.

2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

"entry" means entry, by water, land or air;

"passport" means a passport for the time being in force issued or renewed by the prescribed authority and satisfying the conditions prescribed relating to the class of passports to which it belongs, and having attached to it a photograph of the person to whom it was issued; and

"prescribed" means prescribed by rules made under this Act.

Power to make rules.

3. (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules requiring that persons entering British India shall be in possession of passports, and for all matters ancillary or incidental to that purpose.

(2) Without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power such rules may—

(a) prohibit the entry into British India or any part thereof of any person who has not in his possession a passport issued to him;

(b) prescribe the authorities by whom passports must have been issued or renewed, and the conditions with which they must comply, for the purposes of this Act; and

(c) provide for the exemption, either absolutely or on any condition, of any person or class of persons from any provision of such rules.

(3) Rules made under this section may provide that any contravention thereof or of any order issued under the authority of any such rule shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine or with both.

(4) All rules made under this section shall be published in the Gazette of India, and shall thereupon have effect as if enacted in this Act.

Power of arrest.

4. (1) Any officer of police not below the rank of a sub-inspector and any officer of the Customs Department empowered by a general or special order of the Local Government in this behalf may arrest without warrant any person who has contravened or against whom a reasonable suspicion exists that he has contravened any rule or order made under section 3.

(2) Every officer making an arrest under this section shall, without unnecessary delay, take or send the person arrested before a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case or to the officer in charge of the nearest police-station.

Power of removal.

5. The Local Government may, by general or special order, direct the removal of any person from British India who, in contravention of any rule made under section 3 prohibiting entry into British India without passport, has entered therein, and thereupon any officer of Government shall have all reasonable powers necessary to enforce such direction.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The present rules requiring passports for egress from and ingress into India were issued under the Defence of India Act which expires six months after the end of the war. It is desired to retain power to continue the present system in whole or in part as may seem necessary for the purpose, bringing the Indian practice into line with that of other parts of the British Empire and of foreign nations.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 25th February 1920:—

No. 8 OF 1920.

A Bill to amend the Dourine Act, 1910.

V of 1910. WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Dourine Act, 1910; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title. 1. This Act may be called the Dourine (Amendment) Act, 1920.

V of 1910. Amendment of section 5, Act V of 1910. 2. In section 5 of the Dourine Act, 1910 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act),—

(1) the word "and" at the end of clause (a) shall be omitted; and

(2) after clause (b) the following clause shall be added, namely:—

"(c) direct, by order in writing, the owner or keeper of any horse which, in the opinion of the Inspectors, is affected with dourine to remove it or permit it to be removed for the purpose of segregation to a place specified in the order, and such direction shall be sufficient authority for the detention of the horse in that place for that purpose."

Amendment of section 6, Act V of 1910. 3. In section 6 of the said Act the word and letter "clause (b)" shall be omitted.

Amendment of section 8, Act V of 1910. 4. In section 8 of the said Act—

(1) in clause (a) the word and letter "clause (b)" shall be omitted; and

(2) in clause (b)—

(a) after the words "on microscopical examination" the words "or by other scientific test" shall be inserted; and

(b) for sub-clause (ii) the following shall be substituted, namely:—

"(ii) in the case of a mare, with the previous sanction of such authority as the Local Government, may appoint in this behalf, or, if so empowered by the Local Government, without such sanction, cause it to be destroyed."

Amendment of section 14, Act V of 1910. 5. In sub-section (2) of section 14 of the said Act—

(1) for clause (a) the following shall be substituted, namely:—

"(a) regulate the exercise of the powers conferred on Inspectors under section 5"; and

(2) the word "and" at the end of clause (b) and the whole of clause (c) shall be omitted.

Amendment of section 15, Act V of 1910. 6. For clauses (b) and (c) of section 15 of the said Act, the following shall be substituted, namely:—

"(b) any horse in respect of which an order under clause (b) or clause (c) of section 5 is in force."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The increased prevalence of the disease 'dourine', particularly in the districts of Northern India where horse-breeding operations are carried out, has rendered necessary a strengthening of the preventive provisions of the Dourine Act, 1910 (V of 1910). It is proposed to empower Government to compel the segregation of stallions and mares suspected of affection with dourine, and in the case of mares definitely found to be affected, to permit their destruction in all cases, abolishing the alternative of branding. The Bill leaves it to the discretion of Local Governments either (a) to require the previous sanction of higher authority to enable a Veterinary practitioner to destroy a mare affected with dourine, or (b) to dispense with such sanction. It is further proposed to recognize other tests than microscopical examination for the purpose of determining whether an animal is affected with the disease.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 25th February, 1920:—

No. 9 OF 1920.

A Bill further to amend the law relating to Glanders and Farcy.

WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the law relating to Glanders and Farcy; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called the Glanders and Farcy (Amendment) Act, 1920.

Extension of Act to camels.

XIII of 1899.

2. In section 2 (2) of the Glanders and Farcy Act, 1899, the word 'camels' shall be inserted between the words "to" and "asses."

Substitution of new section for s. 3, Act XIII of 1899.

3. For section 3 of the same Act the following section shall be substituted, namely:—

Application of Act to local areas by Local Government.

"3. (1) The Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, apply this Act or any provision of this Act to any local area, to be specified in such notification, within the province.

(2) In any such notification the Local Government may further direct that the Act or any provision so applied shall apply in respect of—

(a) all or any of the diseases mentioned or specified in a notification under section 2, sub-section (1),

(b) all animals or any class of animals mentioned in section 2, sub-section (2)."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE necessity for adopting preventive measures against the disease 'surra' has recently been brought into prominence by the high incidence of mortality from this disease among transport animals. Camels are particularly susceptible to 'surra' and have been found to be the most dangerous carriers of the disease. Surra was declared in Notification No. 2069, dated the 22nd September, 1910, to be a dangerous epidemic disease within the meaning of section 2, sub-section (1) of the Glanders and Farcy Act, 1899 (XIII of 1899), but the Act, as it stands at present, applies only to horses, asses and mules In the present Bill it is proposed to amend the Act so as to include camels among the animals to which its provisions apply. It is also proposed to extend the discretion allowed to Local Governments under section 3 of the Act of determining the local application of the Act. Under clause 3 of the Bill it will be open to Local Governments to apply the Act or any of its provisions to any of the particular classes of animals specified in section 2, sub-section (2).

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915. (5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61.)

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Wednesday, the 18th February, 1920.

PRESENT :

The Hon'ble SIR GEORGE LOWNDES, K.C., K.C.S.I., Vice-President, presiding, and 55 Members, of whom 48 were Additional Members.

STATEMENT LAID ON THE TABLE.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"Sir, I beg to lay on the table* a statement showing the number of persons arrested and the number released without trial in connection with the disturbances in the Punjab, which was promised in reply to questions asked by the Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya on the 10th† and 25th‡ September, 1919, respectively." 11-2 A.M.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha asked :— 11-3 A.M.

Nominations for the Indian Civil Service

1. "(a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the editorial comments of the Bengalee in a paragraph headed 'Bengal Nominations' in its issue dated the 23rd January, 1920, expressing great dissatisfaction with the nominations made in Bengal for the Indian Civil Service ?

(b) Is it a fact that similar dissatisfaction has been expressed in the Press of some other Provinces as well, with regard to such nominations ?

* Vide Appendix A.

† Vide pages 53 and 54 of Council Proceedings of 10th September, 1919.

‡ Vide page 528 of Council Proceedings of 25th September, 1919.

[Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha; Sir William Vincent; Mr. H. Moncrieff Smith.] [18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

(c) Were any suggestions or directions issued on the subject by either the Secretary of State or the Government of India laying down the principles which should guide the Local Governments and Administrations in making the recommendations for the nomination of candidates? If so, will Government place a copy of the same on the table? If not, why not?

(d) Will Government lay on the table a statement giving for each province—

(i) the names of candidates recommended by Local Governments and Administrations;

(ii) details as to the educational qualifications of the candidates so recommended, showing amongst other things which of them, if any, had failed at one or more University examination or examinations;

(iii) the names of the candidates recommended for appointment by the Government of India to the Secretary of State for India; and

(iv) information in regard to each candidate finally selected being either a native of the province or domiciled therein?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied:—

"(a) Government has seen the editorial comments of the 'Bengalee' in its issue dated the 23rd January 1920.

(b) Government are not aware that dissatisfaction has been expressed in the press of other provinces; but it is inevitable that there should be some discontent when there were more than 700 applications for the 34 available vacancies.

(c) The Hon'ble Member is referred to Home Department notification No. 1278 of the 5th September 1919 and notifications Nos. 1658 and 1788 of the 21st October and 4th November 1919, respectively. These were also reproduced as Press Communiqués on the same dates.

(d) Government are unable to furnish all the information asked for, but a* statement is laid on the table showing by provinces the successful candidates."

The Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha asked:—

Replacement of the judicial administration of the North-West Frontier Province under the Punjab Government.

2. "(a) Is it a fact that Mr. Merk, when officiating as the Chief Commissioner of the North-West Frontier Province, submitted a scheme to the Government of India recommending that the judicial administration of the province be replaced under the Punjab Government?

(b) If so, what was the reply of the Government of India? Will Government lay on the table copies of Mr. Merk's communication and the Government of India's reply thereto? If not, why not?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied:—

"No such scheme was submitted to the Government of India."

The Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha asked:—

Expiration of War Legislation.

3. "(a) Has the war been officially declared to have come to an end? If so, from what date?

(b) What is or are the Act or Acts that will expire at the end of six months from the date of the declaration of the closing of the war?"

The Hon'ble Mr. Moncrieff Smith replied:—

"(a) His Majesty in Council has declared that the war as between Great Britain and Germany terminated on the 10th January, 1920. No declaration

---

* Vide Appendix B.

[18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Mr. Moncrieff Smith; Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda; Mr. W. M. Hailey; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief; Sir Claude Hill.] has yet been made as to the date of the termination of the war with other belligerents.

(b) A list* of the enactments which will (unless further continued by legislation) expire at the end of six months from the date of the official termination of the war is laid on the table."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

4. "(a) Has the attention of the Government been called to the fact that the scarcity of silver coins is causing serious difficulties to the Hindus in their religious performances, as the Sastras require gifts for every ceremony to be in silver (rajat)? Scarcity of silver coins.

(b) Do Government propose to take steps to remove this difficulty?"

The Hon'ble Mr. W. M. Hailey replied :—

"The Government of India are not aware that serious difficulties have been caused to Hindus in their religious observances through any scarcity of silver coins. During the last financial year the net absorption of silver coins by the public amounted to 450 million rupees, while during the current year the net absorption up to date has been over 200 million rupees. The Government understand that gold is equally acceptable as a gift on occasions of religious ceremony, and the Hon'ble Member's attention is invited to the fact that gold is now being sold to the public by tender in large quantities, the minimum amount to be sold during the next six months being equivalent to the gold contents of 24 million sovereigns."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

5. "(a) Is it a fact that General Dyer received promotion after the firing in Jallianwalabagh? Promotion of General Dyer.

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the different posts and places to which he was appointed after the said firing?"

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

"(a) The answer is in the negative.

(b) It would serve no useful purpose to enumerate either the posts or places where General Dyer has served since the firing at Amritsar. He is now commanding a Brigade at Jamrud."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

6. "What is the total expenditure incurred on works in the New Capital including the city improvement and the Notified Area, since Delhi was created the Capital of India?" Expenditure incurred on the New Capital.

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

"The total expenditure incurred on the New Capital, including the city improvement and the Notified Area, since Delhi was made the Capital of India is as follows :—

	Rs.
Actual expenditure to end of 1918-19	4,75,17,339
Approximate during 1919-20	67,55,690
Total	5,42,73,029"

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

7. "(a) What action, if any, has been taken to reduce the public expenditure to pre-war standards? Creation of a Retrenchment Board.

(b) Have Government considered the advisability of creating a Retrenchment Board in the same way as the British Cabinet has done?"

* Not included in these Proceedings.

[Mr. W. M. Hailey; Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief; Sir Claude Hill.] [18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

The Hon'ble Mr. W. M. Hailey replied:—

"(a) The growth of public expenditure as compared with pre-war standards is largely due, on the one hand, to the rise in prices, which involves among other things extensive revisions of pay, on the other hand, to expansion of Government activities with a view to developing the resources of India. It is, therefore, impossible, consistently with public policy, to reduce expenditure to pre-war standards.

(b) The Government of India have not had under consideration the advisability of creating a Retrenchment Board."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked:—

Lord Jellicoe's report on the naval defences of India.

8. "Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of Lord Jellicoe's report, if any, relative to the naval defences of India, or, in the alternative, make a statement on the subject?"

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied:—

"Lord Jellicoe's Report is a confidential document which cannot be published without the consent of the Admiralty. It touches on questions of Imperial and International policy, and its publication at the present time would not be in the interests of the public service."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked:—

Retirement of Mr. Keeling, etc.

9. "(a) Will Government be pleased to state whether Mr. Keeling, Chief Engineer, is shortly to retire, and whether his services thereafter will be retained, and if so, on what terms?

(b) What are the terms under which Messrs. Lutyens and Baker, Architects, have undertaken the designing and supervision of the New Capital Works? Will Government lay on the table copies of their contract?"

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied:—

"(a) Mr. Keeling, Chief Engineer, Delhi, is due to retire from service on the 14th April, 1920 The question of retaining his services after retirement is under consideration.

(b) The terms under which Sir Edwin Lutyens and Mr. Herbert Baker have undertaken the designing and supervision of the New Capital works at Delhi are incorporated in their agreement with the Secretary of State for India, a copy* of which is placed on the table."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked:—

Cost of maintenance of the Imperial Sub-Division.

10. "(a) What is the cost of the maintenance of the Imperial Public Works Sub-division, including the salary of the Superintending Engineer for the supervision of the Imperial Public Works?

(b) Are Government considering the question of the transfer of the supervision and control of the Sub-division to the Punjab Public Works Department?"

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied:—

"(a) The cost of maintenance of the Imperial Circle, Simla, which comprises the Imperial Division (formerly Imperial Sub-division), Imperial Construction Division and Independent Electrical Sub-division at Simla, is Rs. 1,30,000 according to the budget estimate for the year 1920-21.

(b) No."

* Not to be included in these Proceedings.

[18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda; Sir William Vincent; Sir Claude Hill; Sir William Marris; Mr. G. S. Khaparde; Sir Arthur Anderson.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked:—

Censoring of letters addressed to Haziqul-Mulk Hakim Ajmal Khan and Dr. M. A. Ansari.

11. "(a) Is it a fact that letters addressed to Haziqul-Mulk Hakim Ajmal Khan and Dr. M. A. Ansari, respectively, have been and are still censored?

(b) During the whole time that their letters have been censored, has any objectionable matter been discovered in such correspondence?

(c) Under what authority are the said letters censored now?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied:—

"(a) It is a fact that letters addressed to Haziqul Mulk Hakim Ajmal Khan and Dr. M. A. Ansari have been censored, but the censorship has lately been removed, on the recommendation of the Chief Commissioner of Delhi, made before receipt of the present question.

(b) Government are unable to make any statement regarding the contents of the censored correspondence.

(c) The censorship was exercised under the provisions of section 26 (1) of the Indian Post Office Act, 1898."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked:—

The Delhi New Capital Committee.

12. "Will Government be pleased to state whether the Delhi New Capital Committee created by Lord Hardinge is still in existence; if so, what is its present composition?"

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied:—

"The Committee created by Lord Hardinge is in existence, though it is now designated the New Capital Committee, and it is at present composed of—

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill	President.
The Chief Commissioner, Delhi	Members."
The Secretary to the Government of India, Public Works Department.
The Chief Engineer, Delhi
An officer of the Government of India, Finance Department .

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked:—

Appointment of a High Commissioner for India in London.

13. "(a) What action, if any, has been taken to give effect to the recommendations of the Joint Committee of the two Houses of Parliament on the Indian Reforms Bill relative to the appointment of a High Commissioner for India in London?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether the office will be manned by Indians?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Marris replied:—

"The matter is under the consideration of the Government of India, and they are not yet in a position to make any announcement."

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde asked:—

Food arrangements on platforms of Indian railways.

14. "Are any arrangements made for the supply of Indian food to Hindu and Muhammadan passengers by any of the Indian railways, other than by permitting platform hawkers of sweet-meats and cooked food to ply their trade on the railway stations?"

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied:—

"The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer I gave at the meeting of the Imperial Legislative Council held at Delhi on the 6th February, 1919, to a similar question asked by the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda. The reply then given was as follows:—

[Sir Arthur Anderson: Mr. G. S. Khaparde; Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer.] [18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

'Refreshment rooms for Hindu and Muhammadan travellers are provided at important stations and junctions where needed on most railways. This matter has been receiving a great deal of attention in recent years.

The provision of such rooms is within the competence of the railways concerned, and does not require Government sanction.'

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde asked:—

Refreshment rooms for Indian passengers.

15. "Is it a fact that the East Indian Railway and the Great Indian Peninsula Railway contemplate building refreshment rooms for supplying Indian food to Indian passengers, but that the other railways have no such measures in view?

If so, do Government propose to issue instructions to all railways to construct such refreshment rooms at an early date?"

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied:—

"The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply I have given to his question regarding food arrangements on platforms of Indian Railways."

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde asked:—

Conveniences for third class passengers.

16. "Is it a fact that while there are passenger-guards, train conductors and train attendants for the convenience of upper class passengers, there is no agency to attend to the needs of the third class passengers, and that the Passenger Superintendents posted at certain stations have proved of little value?"

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied:—

"It is the normal duty of the ordinary train staff to look after the welfare of all passengers. Conductor guards or train attendants also travel on certain trains, but their duties are not necessarily confined to attending on upper class passengers.

Passenger Superintendents were appointed specially for the assistance of lower class passengers, and it is believed they have proved useful, but if the Hon'ble Member will quote any specific instances to the contrary, they will be brought to the notice of the Railway concerned."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer asked:—

17. "When will the construction of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Station at Poona be taken in hand?"

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied:—

"It is impossible, at present, to say. The remodelling scheme is a large one requiring the sanction of the Secretary of State, and the accommodation to be provided has not yet been finally agreed upon by both of the Railways concerned."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer asked:—

Indian refreshment rooms.

18. "(a) On what railways in India are Indian refreshment rooms (similar to those on the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway) not provided?

(b) Do Government propose to order such railways to provide such refreshment rooms?"

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied:—

"The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply I have given to a similar question asked by the Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde."

[18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer; Sir Arthur Anderson; Mr. H. R. C. Dobbs.]

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer asked :—

19. "(a) On what railways is intermediate class accommodation not provided on passenger and mail trains? Intermediate class accommodation on passenger and mail trains.

(b) Do Government propose to ask such railways to provide such accommodation?"

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied :—

"(a) A statement* showing the railways on which the intermediate class accommodation is not provided is placed on the table.

(b) The Railway Board have already suggested to the few important railways which do not provide such accommodation, that the question of its provision should receive careful consideration."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer asked :—

20. "(a) Is it a fact that Muhammadan pilgrims from India suffered great hardships during the last pilgrimage to Mecca? Hardships felt by Muhammadan pilgrims during the last pilgrimage to Mecca.

(b) Did Government make an inquiry into this matter? If so, with what result?

(c) Do Government intend to make better provision for the convenience and safety of such pilgrims? If so, will Government state the nature of such arrangements?"

The Hon'ble Mr. H. R. C. Dobbs replied :—

"(a) Government have received various reports regarding the recent Haj pilgrimage. These show that the arrangements made for the pilgrims on the road from Jeddah to Mecca were satisfactory, but that on the Mecca-Medina road pilgrims suffered from the lawlessness of the Bedouin tribes who were not completely under control. Government, however, are informed that King Hussain made good to all Indian pilgrims the losses which they sustained from the depredations of Bedouin tribesmen.

(b) Inquiries into complaints made by pilgrims were instituted by the British Agent at Jeddah, and the result of those inquiries is given in the answer to (a) above.

(c) The arrangements for the Haj pilgrimage are made by King Hussain, and the British Government exercise no control over the internal administration of the Hedjaz. His Majesty's Government are of course keenly interested in the welfare of pilgrims who are British subjects and, in conjunction with the Government of India, have taken and are taking steps to look after their interests. They maintain a British Agent at Jeddah and have also stationed an Indian Police Officer at Jeddah to assist Indian pilgrims. A scheme is under consideration to build and maintain a hostel at Mecca for the benefit of pilgrims from all parts of the British Empire, and it is hoped that an Indian Moslem gentleman will, in the near future, take up his permanent residence at Mecca, for the purpose of watching the interests of Indian pilgrims and other pilgrims who are British subjects."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer asked :—

21. "Will Government lay on the table a statement showing the export from India of food-grains during the current year and the corresponding comparative figures for the past ten years?" Exportation of food-grains from India.

* Vide Appendix.

[Sir Claude Hill; Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer; Sir George Barnes; Sir William Vincent; Mr. W. M. Hailey.] [18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

"The statement* asked for is laid on the table."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer asked :—

Reduction of railway fares and telegraphic charges.

22. "When will the increased railway fares and telegraphic charges be reduced to pre-war rates?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"With regard to railway fares I must refer the Hon'ble Member to the answer given by the President of the Railway Board to the Hon'ble Mr. Sita Nath Ray on the 11th February.

With regard to telegraphic charges it is the intention of Government to make a reduction in the charges for inland telegrams as soon as it may be found feasible. Owing to the shortage of telegraphic wire and other material caused by the war, the Telegraph Department is barely capable of dealing with the present volume of traffic. If the rates were reduced at once, the volume of traffic is expected to increase so rapidly that the Telegraph Department would be quite unable to cope with it. The Government intend shortly to reduce the rates on foreign telegrams."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer asked :—

Recognition of Urdu as an official language.

23. "(a) Are Government aware that the eighth Session of the Bombay Presidency Muhammadan Educational Conference which was held at Poona in November last passed a resolution on the desirability and justice of Urdu being recognised as an official language in all towns having a Muhammadan population of at least 10,000?

(b) Do Government intend to accede to the prayer of the Conference?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The resolution in question has not been brought to the notice of the Government of India."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer asked :—

The General Provident Fund.

24. "(a) Have Government come to a decision with regard to the raising of the rate of interest allowed on the General Provident Fund instituted for State servants?

(b) If not, when are they likely to come to a decision on the subject?

(c) Will the decision be given retrospective effect from the time the general rate of interest rose in the country."

The Hon'ble Mr. W. M. Hailey replied :—

"(a) and (b) It has been decided to raise the rate of interest on the General Provident Fund to 5½ per cent.

(c) Effect to this decision will be given from the 1st of April, 1919."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer asked :—

Labour in factories.

25. "Do Government propose to appoint a Commission to inquire into and report upon the conditions of labour in factories and outside and to make recommendations with a view to the improvement of those conditions?"

"Since sending this question, Sir, I have given notice of a similar resolution. I therefore request you to kindly permit me to withdraw this question."

The question was by leave withdrawn.

[18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy; Sir George Barnes.]

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy asked :—

26. "(a) Is it a fact that the present whole-sale prices of ghee and milk are nearly 300 per cent. more than the average in pre-war times? Price of ghee and milk.

(b) Do Government propose to provide statistics about the prices of milk in the Presidency-towns in the same way as is done in the case of other articles shown on pages 2664 to 2683 of the Supplement to the Gazette of India, dated the 13th December 1919?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"(a) It is not a fact that the price of ghee has risen to the extent mentioned in the Hon'ble Member's question. A statement* compiled from the half-monthly returns of wholesale prices furnished by Provincial authorities and published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India by the Department of Statistics is placed on the table. It will be seen that the increase varies from 61 to 143 per cent, the all-India average increase being 95 per cent.

(b) The reply is in the negative. I may mention, however, for the Hon'ble Member's information that retail prices of milk in the principal towns in Bombay and Sind are given by the Director of Agriculture, Bombay, in his monthly return of prices current published in the local gazette. The Advisory Food Committee, Calcutta, also publishes in the Calcutta Gazette average wholesale and retail prices of milk in Calcutta markets."

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy asked :—

27. "(a) Is it a fact that His Majesty's Government has on 7th August 1918 given six months' notice to withdraw from the International Sugar Convention? International sugar Convention and Imperial Preference.

(b) Were the Indian Government consulted before the notice was given?

(c) If so, will the correspondence on the subject be placed on the table?

(d) How far are the Government of India free, or how far do they expect to be free, to discriminate between various countries as to the tariff-duty?

(e) What countries are now entitled to receive from India 'the most favoured nation treatment' and from what countries is India entitled to receive similar treatment?

(f) Will Government be pleased to place on the table the correspondence which may have taken place with the Secretary of State about Imperial Preference?

(g) Which, if any, British Colonies, Dependencies, or Protectorates have shown willingness to discriminate in favour of India?

(h) What form of reciprocity do they propose?

(i) Will this Council be allowed a voice in settling the terms of reference for the Committee which is to be appointed for fixing the general principles involved in the subject of Imperial Preference?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"(a) His Majesty's Government actually withdrew from the International Sugar Convention in 1913, but undertook not to depart from the fundamental principles of the Convention without giving six months' notice. On the 7th August, 1918, they gave this notice and instructed the British Minister at Havre to request the Belgian Government to inform the powers concerned that His Majesty's Government had decided to resume complete liberty of action in regard to all sugar questions.

(d) I refer the Hon'ble Member to the remarks in Clause 33 of the Report of the Joint Select Committee on the Government of India Bill. The Government of India are not in a position to give any further information on the subject at present.

(e) Until recently Indian products were entitled to 'most favoured nation' treatment in the following countries:—

Argentina, Belgium, Bolivia, China, Columbia, the Congo Free States, Costa Rica, Denmark, Ethiopia, Honduras, Italy, Japan, Liberia, Montenegro, Morocco, Muscat, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Norway, Persia, Portugal, Roumania, Siam, Serbia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, United States of America and Venezuela; and the products of these countries, excepting the Congo Free States, Ethiopia and Siam, were reciprocally entitled to 'most favoured nation' treatment in India. In the case of Bolivia, Honduras, Montenegro, Nicaragua, Portugal, Roumania and Serbia the treaties do not themselves apply to India, but Indian goods are entitled to 'most favoured nation' treatment in those countries so long as India accords similar treatment to their goods. In view, however, of the uncertain conditions of the validity of treaty arrangements generally during the past five years, I am unable to inform the Hon'ble Member exactly how the position stands at the present moment.

(f) Such correspondence as has taken place with the Secretary of State on the subject of Imperial Preference has been of a confidential nature, and the Government of India do not propose to lay it on the table.

(g) and (h) No British Colony, Dependency or Protectorate has yet been approached with reference to the question of preferential treatment of Indian goods, and it is therefore not possible for me to give a definite reply to the Hon'ble Member's question. At present Indian goods enjoy the benefits of the British preferential tariffs in Canada and New Zealand as well as in the United Kingdom.

(i) A resolution will shortly be moved to appoint a Committee to consider the question of Imperial preference in its relation to India, and the Council will consequently have an opportunity of discussing the terms of reference to the Committee."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

Hunter Committee's Report.

28. "With reference to the reply of the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent to the supplementary question put by the Hon'ble Dr. Sapru on the 30th January, 1920, regarding the report of the Hunter Committee, will Government be pleased to say whether it is their intention to admit for discussion in the month of March, resolutions based on the findings of the Hunter Committee and whether they will relax the rule requiring fifteen days' notice in case the report of the Committee is not published in time to admit of such notice?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"Government do not expect that they will be in a position to publish the report of Lord Hunter's Committee before the end of March. The question of discussion will not therefore arise in the present Session of the Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

Disparity between the size of the electorates in the different Provinces.

29. "Do Government propose to take any action, and if so what, to carry out the recommendation of Lord Selborne's Committee that an effort should be made to remedy in part at least the present disparity between the size of the electorates in the different Provinces?"

[18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Sir William Marris; Mr. V. J. Patel; Mr. W. M. Hailey.]

The Hon'ble Sir William Marris replied :—

"Yes. The disparity was noticeable in the case of Madras and the Punjab. The Governments of these provinces are taking steps to increase very largely the electorates proposed by the Franchise Committee."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

30. "Are Government aware that there is strong feeling in the Indian commercial and industrial circles that their interests would be better served if, instead of amalgamating the three Presidency Banks into a Central Imperial Bank, a separate and distinct Bank were started in addition to the three Presidency Banks?" Amalgamation of Presidency Banks into a Central Imperial Bank.

The Hon'ble Mr. W. M. Hailey replied :—

"The Government are not aware that there is a strong feeling in Indian commercial and industrial circles in the direction suggested by the Hon'ble Member. The Council will have an opportunity of discussing the comparative merits of the two courses mentioned in the Hon'ble Member's question when the Bill to amalgamate the Presidency Banks is before it."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

31. "(a) What is the personnel of the Provincial Financial Relations Committee and what are its terms of reference? Provincial Financial Relations Committee.

(b) Will the Committee be authorised to go into the question whether the Government of India could be self-supporting and financially independent of the Provinces?

(c) Is it a fact that in a debate on the question raised in the House of Commons by Colonel Wedgewood, the Secretary of State in reply to the argument of Colonel Wedgewood that Provincial contributions were not necessary in view of the fact that the Indian Government itself could raise its own revenue without any contributions whatever, made the following observation :—

"I would really not like to commit myself to a view as to the taxable capacity of India. That is a subject I would like to leave to the Government of India to decide, but, whatever the facts, they could not be decided in a day or two."

The Hon'ble Mr. W. M. Hailey replied :—

"(a) The desired information will be found in the Resolution of the Government of India in the Finance Department, No. 306-F., dated 27th January, 1920, which was published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India, No. V, dated January 31st, 1920.

(b) The Committee has been specially requested to examine the correctness of the estimate of the Imperial deficit under the revised Provincial Settlements which has been framed by the Government of India, and to express its opinion on it.

(c) Yes."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

32. "Do Government propose to call the attention of the Government of Bombay, the Punjab and Central Provinces to the debate in the House of Commons on the question of residential qualification, and ask them to report whether they still hold the view that they presented to the Franchise Committee?" Residential qualification.

The Hon'ble Sir William Marris replied :—

"The Government of India see no reason to take the action suggested. The proposed residential qualification for candidates in the Bombay Presidency, the Punjab and the Central Provinces, was accepted by the Joint Committee and by Parliament."

[Sir William Marris; Mr. V. J. Patel; Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis; Sir Claude Hill.] [18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

European Representation in Bengal.

33. "(a) Is it true that the representation in the Legislative Council of Europeans in Bengal, as recommended by the Franchise Committee, is out of all proportion to their population or voting strength?

(c) What action do Government propose to take to remedy the inequality?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Marris replied :—

"(a) The Franchise Committee proposed that 14 out of 100 elected seats should be allotted to Europeans in Bengal. Europeans constitute 0·04 per cent of the total population of Bengal. Their proportionate voting strength is not known. As the Hon'ble Member is aware, however, population and voting strength are not the only factors to be taken into account in determining the number of seats to be allotted to a community, nor is it in the case of the Europeans only that the Franchise Committee have recommended representation in excess of population and voting strength.

(b) The Joint Committee considered that there were good grounds for a re-adjustment of European representation in Bengal.

(c) The non-official Members in the Bengal Legislative Council recommended that the European representation on the new Council should be sufficient to safeguard European interests and to correspond with any increase in the number of elected members. It is proposed that in accordance with this recommendation the representation of European interests should be in approximately the same proportion as in the existing Council. The Government of India believe that this would be in accordance with the wishes of the Joint Committee."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

High Commissioner for India.

34. "From what date is the appointment of a High Commissioner for India to be made?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Marris replied :—

"The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply given to-day to Mr. Chanda's question on the same subject."

The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis asked:—

Government control on exportation of grain.

35. "(a) In which provinces does Government control on exportation of grain still continue and what effect has such control had in these provinces since it was first introduced?

(b) Have prices of late risen very high in some provinces, especially of rice, and what effect has this rise had on the policy of Government in stopping control of exports?

(c) What steps do Government intend taking to prevent any further rise in prices of grain, especially wheat and rice?"

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

"(a) The only existing restrictions on internal movements of grain are—

(i) Over inter-Provincial movements of rice.

(ii) Over exports of wheat and gram from the United Provinces, the Punjab and the Province of Delhi, and (iii) Over movements of all food-grains to and from Baluchistan and the North-West Frontier Province.

[18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Sir Claude Hill; Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer.]

For the effect which the measures of control introduced by the Government of India during 1919 had on the provinces, the Hon'ble Member is referred to the report on the operations of the Indian Foodstuffs Commissioner, a *copy of which is placed on the table.

(b) Prices of the staple articles of food including rice have been abnormally high for some time, and their export from India is, therefore, being strictly controlled.

(c) For the general policy of Government in its relation to high prices of grain, especially wheat and rice, the Hon'ble Member is referred to the Press Communiqués on the subject which are also placed on the table.* The question whether anything further can be done will shortly be discussed at a second meeting of the committee which was appointed by this Council at the September Session to consider the subject of high prices. A *copy of the proceedings of the first meeting of the committee held last September is laid on the table. One meeting has already taken place."

CUTCHI MEMONS BILL.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer:— 11-25 A.M.
"Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to declare that the members of the Cutchi Memon community are subject to Muhammadan Law. I applied for permission in August last to introduce it during the September Sessions, but under the Rules for the Conduct of Legislative Business as I was unable to give sufficient notice, the permission could not be accorded me. I was then, I may explain, but newly elected to the Council.

"The present is the third occasion, Sir, on which a Bill has been introduced into this Council to remedy the long-standing grievance under which the wealthy and influential Cutchi Memon community have been suffering these many years. It may be useful, therefore, if at the outset, I try to explain why it has become necessary to introduce once more a Bill of this nature, notwithstanding the experience gained from the practical rejection of the last two measures. The keenness felt by Cutchi Memons to be governed by the Hanafi Muhammadan Law remains as intense as ever, and the disappointments experienced at the delays caused by the refusal of this Counil to accord its sanction to the two previous Bills has only made that desire all the more ardent. I may be permitted, therefore, I think to give to this Council a short history of the previous Bills and the present state of law applicable to the Cutchi Memons in so far as the rules of succession and inheritance are concerned.

"Sir, Cutchi Memons claim that they are the descendants of those who settled in Cutch after migration from the Coast of Oman. It does not matter whether this belief is well founded or whether, as is generally believed, they are the descendants of converts to Muhammadanism brought about by the influence of Muhammadan preachers and missionaries from Oman. Taking a strict view of the law as converts to Muhammadanism, these people must be governed by Muhammadan law because to a Muhammadan his religion is his law, and that law is his religious precept as laid down in the Koran. Therefore, no matter what their previous religion may have been, it must be taken that at the moment of conversion they renounced all their former religious and personal laws and substituted for them that of Muhammadanism. What we actually find, however, in the case of these converts from Hinduism, is that they retained for a very long time their Hindu customs. They observed the religious ordinances laid down in the Koran and the traditions of the Prophet, they regularly said their prayers and paid their Zakat; they performed their pilgrimages to Mecca and kept the fast during the month of Ramzan like all good Mussalmans; but when it came to a question of law, especially to the law governing their affairs in connection with inheritance and succession, they continued to be governed by those of their Hindu neighbours. These Memon converts belonged principally to two classes; the Cutchi Memons with whom we are concerned at present and the Halai Memons. The Cutchi Memons come from Cutch and the Halai Memons from Kathiawar. It is not known how and when the members of the Halai Memon community ceased to observe Hindu religious customs. It is only the Cutchi Memons who are at present in the unfortunate position of being governed in certain respects by Hindu law, though strict orthodox Muhammadans, and therefore in every respect entitled to be governed by Muhammadan law. In the case of the Cutchi Memons, it is believed, that as they were surrounded by their former Hindu co-religionists and were living frequently under the protection of Hindu Rajas, with Courts presided over by Hindu Judges, they retained much of their old habits not as a law but as customary observances. In this way, it would seem, as if Hindu customs became stereotyped amongst these Muhammadan converts, customs which we know conflict in the main with the Muhammadan law.

*Not included in these Proceedings.

[Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer.] [18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

"Sir, the first judicial reference before the Courts was what is known as the Khoja-Memon case reported in Perry's Oriental cases, page 110. The judgment in this case which has now become famous, a Memon female filed a suit for the recovery of her share from her father's estate in accordance with Muhammadan law. The claim was resisted on the ground that according to the custom prevailing amongst the Cutchi Memons, females were excluded from inheritance. Evidence regarding the alleged custom was given for two days, and finally it was held that females amongst Cutchi Memons were not entitled to inherit property. If the judgment in this case had confined itself to the particular facts proved in this suit and had not been taken as a precedent for applying a large body of principles governing Hindus in matters of succession and inheritance to the Cutchi Memons, much of the mischief that subsequently arose might have been averted.

"I desire to emphasise this point as it was solely because this judgment was not challenged in a higher tribunal, that the anomaly of the law exists as it does to-day.

"The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beaman discussed this case at great length in another suit, Jan Mahomed versus Dattu Jaffer, decided in 1913 and reported in 15, Bombay Law Reporter, page 1044.

"The next case of importance, after the above celebrated case, is the case of Haji Ismail Haji Abdulla reported in I. L. R. 6 Bom., page 452. It was a case on the Testamentary side of the High Court, and here it was held that Cutchi Memons are not Hindus within the meaning of section 2 of the Hindu Wills Act, and therefore the request that probate should take effect throughout India could not be granted in the case of a will of a Cutchi Memon testator. It was further held that Cutchi Memons are Muhammadans to whom Muhammadan law is to be applied, except when an ancient and invariable special custom to the contrary is established.

"Sir, it was owing to this state of things that the first Memon Bill was introduced by the Hon'ble Mr. Amir Ali in 1885. That Bill was introduced on the strength of a memorial sent to Government by the Cutchi Memons of Calcutta and Bombay. The memorialists urged with great reason that their brethren, the Halai Memons, who had abandoned Hindu customs as completely as their ancestors had abandoned the Hindu faith, do not labour under such disadvantages as they, the Cutchi Memons, are subject to. Why should they, who are as good Muhammadans as the Halai or any other sect of Muhammadans, be tied for ever to Pagan institutions. The Cutchi Memons' memorial continued in the following forcible words: 'Your petitioners venture to characterise this state of things which has been afflicting their community, ever since Sir Erskine Perry's aforesaid judgment as absolutely intolerable. They deem it a great hardship that they should be Mussalmans and still be deprived of the benefit of Muhammadan laws."

[18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer.]

"The Bill that the Hon'ble Mr. Amir Ali introduced in response to this appeal was intended to make it permissive to the members of the Cutchi Memon community to declare themselves subject to the Muhammadan law. The Bill provided that a declaration to the above effect could be made by any Cutchi Memon who had attained his age of majority by a written instrument under the hand of the person making it in a prescribed form, and that the declaration should be registered during the life-time of the declarant under the Act. The difficulty in connection with this Bill arose out of a difference of opinion as to whether the onus of making the declaration should be put upon the innovators or upon the Conservative Party, that is, upon those Cutchi Memons who desired to be governed by the Muhammadan law, or upon those who preferred to be regarded as Hindus like their remote ancestors. Owing to this difference of opinion, Sir, the measure was not proceeded with.

"About this time there came to be decided the third case of importance in this connection, namely, that of Mahomed Siddick versus Haji Ahmed and others (I. L. R. 10 Bom., page 1). It was the case of a will made by a Cutchi Memon. The dispositions of the will were successfully challenged on the ground that the properties sought to be disposed of were ancestral family property, and that the Cutchi Memons like the Hindus had no power to dispose of by will of ancestral family property. It was held in this case that:

'Wills made by members of the Cutchi Memon community, whereby the testator disposed of property which was proved to be ancestral were held to be invalid. Cutchi Memons are governed by the Hindu law of inheritance in the absence of proof of special custom. Although the Muhammadan law, pure and simple, is part of the Muhammadan religion, it does not, of necessity, bind all who embrace the Muhammadan creed. A custom alleged to exist among Cutchi Memons of recognising no difference between ancestral and self-acquired property, was held not proved.'

"In the course of his judgement, Scott, J. observes in this suit:—

'But it is also pretty clear that a large and influential section of the community, in fact the great majority, wish to follow in future the law of their religion A good case is thus made out for the consideration of the legislature, but no case whatever for the interference of a Court of Law'.

"In this state of things, Sir, a second Bill was introduced by Sir John Woodburn in 1896 to render it permissive to the members of the Memon community to declare themselves bound by Muhammadan law. By that Bill it was proposed that by an irrevocable declaration to be made by that Act, a Cutchi Memon could declare himself governed by Muhammadan law as established in the Hanafi School. On such a declaration being made that law would apply to him and to his children, if any, being minors at the time of such declaration and to all property of which he or they should then be or thereafter become absolutely entitled to in each part of British India, in the same particulars and to the same extent as it applies in the same part of British India to other Muhammadans and their property. When such a declaration was once made by a Cutchi Memon and by any of his sons, the Muhammadan law as established in the Hanafi School was to be applied to all the lineal descendants of such son. The Bill was referred to a Select Committee who in their report stated:—

'It will be seen from their (Bombay Government) replies that the inquiry addressed to the Memon community has elicited from what is intended to be a large majority of the community an opinion adverse to the proposals of the Bill as introduced. Under these circumstances we cannot recommend that the Bill should be proceeded with in its present form. The petitioners suggest that the proposal of the Bill should be reversed, and that the Muhammadan law should apply to the whole community with the reservation that Memons who do not desire to follow the Muhammadan law of succession should make a declaration to that effect.'

"Thus, the same difficulty which was experienced in 1885 was felt again, namely, which party should be asked to make the declaration, those who wanted the change or those who did not. This difficulty arose from the fact that there was a minority and a very respectable minority who did not desire a change in the law. The Committee, therefore, made the following proposal :—.

'That the Muhammadan law of intestate succession should be declared applicable to the whole of the Memon community, but that complete liberty of testamentary dispositions should be reserved to individuals.'

The matter was referred for opinion to the Judges of the High Court of Bombay, the Advocate General, the Remembrancer of Legal Affairs and the Judicial Commissioner in Sind. The Government of Bombay also obtained the opinions in writing of the leading members of the Cutchi Memon community. The result was a reply returned to the Government of India, stating that 'The Governor in Council finds that the weight of opinion is distinctly against the proposal of the Select Committee.'

"No motion with respect to the Bill was made for two years and the Bill was removed from the List of Business on the 24th March, 1900, by an order under rule 43 of the Rules for the Conduct of Legislative Business.

"I now come to another case of importance, decided by Beaman, J., in 1915. This was the case of Advocate General versus Jimbabai reported in 17 Bom. Law Reporter on page 799. Here the dispositions contained in the will of a wealthy Cutchi Memon of Bombay regarding charity were in dispute. In a very long, elaborate and complete survey of the law, as well as after a searching analysis of the evidence recorded in the case, which consisted of the oral testimony of leading Cutchi Memons and of numerous wills produced from the Testamentary side of the High Court, the learned Judge came to certain very important conclusions. In the course of his judgment the learned Judge says :—

'In 1847, I do not think that either sect would have thought it a very serious hardship had the Courts decided that in the eye of the law they were Hindus and not Muhammadans. The Courts never did decide anything of the kind; but I concede that, on the evidence before him, Sir Erskine Perry probably thought that the Khojas and Cutchi Memons had virtually retained the whole of their domestic and personal law as distinct from their religion No one could then have foreseen the length to which the judgments in those cases would afterwards be carried. And it is, no doubt, true to some extent as contended by Mr. Inverarity in this case that the most serious grievance which the Khojas and Cutchi Memons now have, is not that they have been placed definitely under the Hindu Law, but that they are perpetually being called upon to prove this or that custom in derogation both of the Muhammadan and of the Hindu Law. They stand now in the unfortunate position of being governed in many most important relations in life neither by the Hindu nor by the Muhammadan law. Legally their condition is one more or less of chaos, and that undoubtedly has been brought about by the loose and often inaccurate reasoning and wide inferential processes upon which I have commented in my criticism of the case-law.'

"Sir, the whole of this case affords interesting reading in showing how the unfortunate Cutchi Memon community came to be forced to adopt the term Hindu against their will by the combined effect of the decisions of the Court and of the opinion of members of the legal profession.

"From what I have said Hon'ble Members will see that one of the proposals of the Select Committee on Sir John Woodburn's Bill was for giving nothing more to the Cutchi Memons than what they were entitled to as by right, namely .—The power of disposing of the whole of their property by Will. It is also clear that there is no power in the land which can come to the assistance of Cutchi Memons, except the Indian Legislature, so as to remove this long-standing grievance. There is a considerable feeling of dissatisfaction and unrest amongst the community on this question. The community will never feel itself at rest till they get themselves removed from the thraldom of being governed by a certain portion of the Hindu law. The Cutchi Memon community of Bombay held a meeting of their Jamat on the 28th September 1919 and passed the following Resolutions :—

(1) This meeting resolves that no member of our community should make a Will or Testament against the Shara Mahommedi Hanafi Mazhab, and that if any one dies after making such a Will it should be considered as null and void; if the heirs of the Testator try to obtain the benefit of such a Will against Shara

[18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer.]

Mahommedi, he be considered guilty; or if a member of our community dies without making a Will, his property be governed by the Shara Mahommedi Hanafi Mazhab; and if any member takes or tries to take the benefit of Hindu law, in a Court of Justice, he be considered as a guilty person of the community.

(2) In order that the members of the community and their descendants may abide by the above Resolution the meeting further resolved that all members willingly and sincerely bind themselves to get a law passed by the Government to the above effect and to get the rules of the Hindu law applicable to the property of Cutchi Memons repealed; and it further resolved to take steps necessary for the purpose, the expenditure of which should be defrayed from the funds of the community.

(3) It further resolved that this Public Meeting of Cutchi Memons of Bombay strongly supports the Muhammadan law Bill, which is to be introduced in the Imperial Legislative Council by the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer, and request His Excellency the Viceroy to repeal immediately the sections of inheritance and succession of the Hindu law applicable to the Cutchi Memons and to pass in its stead the Muhammadan Law.

Similar Resolutions were passed unanimously at Calcutta, Madras, Poona, Bangalore, Mysore, Nagpore, Karachi, Khedoi, Aujar (Cutch), and other places in India.

"Sir, His Excellency's Government has received within the past fortnight a memorial to this effect from the community, and, I think the Hon'ble Members of this Council may have also received copies of the same.

"The Muhammadan law, as you know, is interwoven with the moral and social life of Mussalmans. The customary law to which they are subjected by the decisions of the Courts is in direct conflict with their religion. Why should the Cutchi Memons, who are good Muhammadans, be compelled to obey rules of law which are not sanctioned by the Muhammadan law? There is no reason whatever why the anomaly, started in 1847, should any longer be perpetuated? The sentiments of the community are against it, and there is no justification for compelling them to continue under the thraldom of a body of rules taken from the Hindus except this Judge-made law.

"Realising the keenness of the Cutchi Memon community to have the Hindu Law of Succession and Inheritance as at present applicable to them replaced by Muhammadan law and feeling, the justness and fairness of their claim, I undertook to move the present Bill. The Cutchi Memons, as a matter of right, are entitled to enjoy the full freedom, like other Mussalmans, in the observance of their religion, and the benefit they derive from the Muhammadan law, which they are debarred according to the present decisions of the High Court.

"Sir, the Bill which I propose to introduce is free from the objections raised against the former Bills. All the members of the Cutchi Memon community are unanimous in desiring that they be governed, in future, by Muhammadan law in all respects. It is not even necessary to consider the proposals made by the Select Committee in view of the decision of Beaman, J. in Advocate General versus Jimbabai, already referred to by me. From the evidence taken in that case, it is clear that there is a strong feeling amongst the Cutchi Memons desiring the change now proposed. The Bill, which I ask leave to introduce, is a very simple measure. It is a Declaratory Bill, declaring that Cutchi Memons are governed by the Muhammadan law of the Hanafi School. There are no complications about the declarations and who should make them, and about the extent of Testamentary Powers and of the Law to be applied to on Intestacy.

"Before I conclude, Sir, I desire to tender my best thanks to His Excellency for according me sanction to introduce this Bill and to the Legislative Department for the ungrudging help it has given me by placing at my disposal all the previous Bills on the same question, as well as such reports and papers as were likely to be useful and to aid me in my task. As a Cutchi Memon I rejoice in, and feel proud of, the fact that it has fallen to my lot to move a measure of this nature for the benefit and relief of my community, and I sincerely trust that this Council will see its way to pass the Bill during the present year, so as to remove all possibility of its being shelved a third time, should the new Council, which will sit here next year under the Reform Act, happen to have a different Muhammadan Representative for the Bombay Council than myself.

"With these words, Sir, I beg leave to introduce the Bill."

11-52 A.M. The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy:—"Sir, I rise to heartily support the Bill. After the long explanatory speech of my Hon'ble friend the mover of the Bill, I do not wish to take up the time of the Council. The Memon community all over are anxious to come under Muhammadan Law. I think, therefore, in fairness to them, this Bill should be supported and passed by this Council. I hope my own community will not continue to throw money away on litigation, but will follow the Memon community"

11-53 A.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Sir, it may perhaps shorten the debate if I explain at this stage the attitude of Government on this Bill. I will not detain the Council for more than a very few minutes. The Government have no objection to this Bill being introduced and published in the Gazette of India and in the various local Gazettes, or to its being circulated for public opinion They will therefore accept the present motion, but only on the clear understanding that they reserve to themselves complete freedom as to their attitude towards this Bill on a future occasion, if, and when, any further motion is brought forward. I have no doubt that members of the Council will agree that it is necessary for Government to ascertain independently what public opinion on this measure is before they take any more definite attitude in regard to it. The Bill differs from those which have been brought before the Council on previous occasions in that those Bills were in the nature of permissive measures, they allowed any member of the Memon community to remain under the old system of Hindu law instead of under Muhammadan law if he so wished; no such option is left under the present measure, and for that reason it is the more necessary that the Bill should be fully ventilated and the opinion of the community concerned obtained in the most complete manner. There are difficulties that occur to me on a preliminary perusal of the Bill which, I think, will need some examination. For instance, the position of Cutchi Memons who have property, both inside and outside of British India, may have to be considered. I do not profess to be aware what the law governing Cutchi Memons in Indian States is. I only say this may give rise to difficulties if they are at present governed by Hindu law, as, with the Bill passed into law, such persons would be subject to two different systems of law in and outside British India. There may be nothing in the point, and I would prefer to defer consideration of the matter until we have fuller information. Again, there are some words used in the Bill which to my mind are very wide, for instance, I cite the words 'it is hereby declared that the Cutchi Memons residing in the Bombay Presidency and elsewhere.' I do not know what is meant by 'elsewhere,' whether this means in British India or outside it . . .

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer:—"In British India."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Similarly, we have the words in the Bill 'notwithstanding any custom to the contrary.' This, again, is a very wide expression, having regard to the variety of family customs.

[18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Sir William Vincent; Mr. V. J. Patel; Khan Sahib Shah Nawaz Bhutto; Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer.]

"I do not, however, think it is necessary for me to deal in detail with these points at present, but I am quite willing to accept the motion of the Hon'ble Mr. Jaffer for leave to introduce the Bill."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel:—"Sir, I am very glad that the Government have accepted the motion of my Hon'ble friend Mr. Jaffer. With regard to the point raised by the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent as to the position of Memons in parts other than British India, I may say for the information of this Council that, so far as the Memons residing in Cutch are concerned, they are governed by Hindu law, but the feeling, as my Hon'ble friend Mr. Jaffer has said, is that the Cutchi Memons should in future be governed by Muhammadan law. I am not sure that this feeling is shared by the entire community. In fact, I know several instances of Cutchi Memons desiring that they should continue to be governed by Hindu law. As my friend Mr. Jaffer distinctly gives this Council to understand that the whole of the Cutchi Memon community is unanimous in regard to the change of law that he proposes, I think it is worthwhile inviting the opinions of the community in the matter. I wish this measure was permissive; I very much wish it was so because so long as there is one single Memon who is not willing to be governed by Muhammadan law and is willing to continue to be governed by Hindu law, this Council cannot force new law on him. The Hon'ble Mr. Jaffer has said that there is no member of the Cutchi Memons who is not willing to be governed by Muhammadan law. Even if we accept the position that the whole of the community is unanimous in the desire to be governed by Muhammadan law, what is the objection to a permissive law? It would be better to have a permissive law even if we accept the point of view put forward by the mover of the motion. All Memons could take advantage of a permissive measure. In either view, it would be far better if this were a permissive measure. Attempts were twice made in 1885 and in 1897 by the representatives of the Cutchi Memons to introduce a permissive measure in this Council. These attempts were, if I understand aright, resisted by the Government of India on the ground that the opinion of the Cutchi Memons was not unanimous, that the entire community was not in favour of even a permissive measure. This measure, I am afraid, goes much further, it wants to force a new law which is proposed in the motion on an unwilling people, people who may not like to be governed by Muhammadan law. Sir, I have however personally no objection to permission being given to the mover and for opinions being invited on the measure proposed." 11-57 A.M.

The Hon'ble Khan Sahib Shah Nawaz Bhutto:—Sir, I rise to support the Bill for which leave to introduce has been asked by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Jaffer. This Bill has been moved none too soon. Sir, I have consulted the Cutchi Memon community resident in Sind, the province to which I have the honour to belong, and I may say that they are entirely in favour of this measure which will go a long way to remove a grave disability they were hitherto labouring under. The Cutchi Memons, Sir, are to all intents and purposes Islams. They embrace the Islamic religion, and there is little or nothing in common with the Hindus from the standpoint of religion. It is therefore very unfortunate that they should be governed by the Hindu law in matters of inheritance and succession. My Hon'ble friend Mr. Jaffer has dealt with the question so exhaustively, that there is very little for me to add to what he has said. I therefore cordially support the proposition and hope that Government will be pleased to see their way to pass this measure at this Session, if possible." 12 P.M.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer:—"Sir, I have heard with great pleasure the various speeches made on the Cutchi Memon Bill. I am glad to find that the feelings of the Hon'ble Members of this Council are so sympathetic towards the Bill which, when passed, I 12-2 P.M.

[Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer; The Vice-President; Mr. V. J. Patel.] [18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

am sure will right a long-standing grievance. I thank the Government for accepting the present motion."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Ebrahim Haroon Jaffer:—"Sir, I have great pleasure to introduce the Bill, and to move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English, and in the local official Gazettes in English and in such other languages as the Local Governments think fit."

The motion was put and agreed to.

RESOLUTION RE LOCATION OF GOVERNMENT OF INDIA HEADQUARTERS—contd.

12-3 P.M. The Vice-President:—"The Council will now resume the discussion of Mr. Sarma's Resolution. We will take the amendment of the Hon'ble Mr. Patel first."

12-4 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel:—"Sir, I beg to move the following amendment:—

'That for the words 'and that a suitable centre may, if necessary, be selected for the purpose' the words 'and that a committee be appointed to select and recommend a suitable centre for the purpose' be substituted.'

"The original resolution as proposed to be amended will stand thus:—

'This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that the headquarters of the Government of India be permanently located in one place, and that a committee be appointed to select and recommend a suitable centre for the purpose.'

"Sir, when this Resolution was discussed on the last occasion, I think it was my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sinha who pointed out the difficulties of selecting a suitable centre without some sort of inquiry by a Committee. In fact, if I understood him rightly, he suggested that there ought to be a Committee appointed for the purpose. The Resolution of the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma is clear enough on one point, it is quite emphatic, that the headquarters of the Government of India should be located at one place, that is, it should not be at more than one place as at present. At present, we have the headquarters at Simla and we have also the headquarters at Delhi, and the first part of my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma's Resolution is quite emphatic that that should not be so; it must be at one place. What that place should be is a matter which, according to the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma, should be left to the decision of the Government of India. His Resolution does not exclude the possibility of the headquarters being at Delhi, because the words he uses in the second part of his Resolution are 'and, if necessary, a suitable centre may be selected for the purpose'. So he does contemplate the possibility of the Government of India considering the question whether it would not be feasible to have the headquarters of the Government of India at Delhi. Nor does his resolution debar the possibility of the headquarters being at Simla. I do not think he really means that it is ever possible to have the headquarters of the Government of India all the year round at Simla. We all know that it is not at all possible to have the headquarters of the Government of India all the year round at Simla, and even if it were possible, and even if the conditions were favourable, there is a strong public opinion against such course. Nothing would justify the Government of India keeping their headquarters even for a short time at Simla. We know there is a strong feeling all round expressed for the past so many years, both from the press as well as from the platform, against the Government having their headquarters even for a few months in Simla. A fortiori public opinion would certainly be much more against having permanently the headquarters of the Government of India at Simla. That being so, Sir, the only other place under the present arrangement is Delhi. To that course, my Hon'ble friend Mr. Chanda takes exception, and he says the headquarters ought to be at Calcutta. My Hon'ble friend Mr. Sinha points out very serious objections to the headquarters being taken back to Calcutta. He also points out, and very rightly too, that when the headquarters of the Government of India was shifted from Calcutta to Delhi, several other questions were simultaneously decided, and all those questions really hang together. You cannot by one stroke of the pen now say that we shall go back to Calcutta and leave the other questions where they are. That being so, let us consider whether there are any real objections to the headquarters of the Government of India being permanently in Delhi. Perhaps the climatic conditions would not allow of that being done.

"But then there is also the consideration which my Hon'ble friend Sir Claude Hill in his reply to a question just said that five crores of rupees have already been spent, and whether it would be wise now to shift the headquarters from Delhi after spending such a huge amount. Then there are other equally good and perhaps better places in other parts of the country. In the Central Provinces there is a very good place which my friend Mr. Khaparde was telling me about called Pachmarhi. It is a sanatarium. I will read a few lines from the Imperial Gazetteer about it. On page 306, volume XIX, it is said :—

'Pachmarhi.—Sanitarium in the Sohagpur tahsil of Hoshangabad District, Central Provinces, situated in 22·28′ N. and 78·26′ E. on a plateau of the Satpura range, 32 miles from Piparia station on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway. Pachmarhi is connected with Piparia by a metalled road, along which there is a mail tonga service. The plateau of the Satpura Hills on which the town stands, at an elevation of just over 3,500 feet, has an area of 23 square miles, the greater part of which is covered with forest.'

That is a very good place, and I can suggest another place which you, Sir, know very well, the island of Salsette near Bombay, a very good place for the Government of India, and I would welcome the Government of India there. My other Hon'ble friends would welcome the Government of India headquarters at their own respective places, but it is a question which has got to be gone into, and my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma would leave it to the Government of India to do it and finally settle the centre for the purpose. I suggest that a committee should be appointed. I do not agree with my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma, and it was particularly to meet the objection of my friend Mr. Sinha that I gave notice of this amendment. Of course the Hon'ble Mr. Crum would not like to go the whole hog as I do; he would like to leave the question open for the committee to consider whether the Capital should be at one place or at two places. While so far as my friend Mr Sarma is concerned and I agree with him that the committee should have no such discretion. The committee should commence its deliberations with a distinct mandate that the headquarters are to be at one place and not at two. To select the place should be the only function of the committee and no more. With these few words, I beg to move my amendment."

The Hon'ble Mr. W. E. Crum :—"Sir, I beg to move as an amendment to Mr. Sarma's resolution :— 12·14 P.M.

'(1) that between the words 'that' and 'the headquarters' the words 'if possible' be inserted, and

(2) that for the words 'a suitable centre may, if necessary, be selected for the purpose' the words 'a committee be appointed to examine that question and to report to the Governor General in Council thereon and generally on the question of the location of the headquarters' be substituted.'

"Sir, it is necessary, in discussing this question, to go back to the Government of India's despatch of 25th August 1911 which led up to His Majesty's Proclamation of December 1911. This despatch was a very curious despatch. Its matter was never discussed in public at all before it was sent, and as far as I am aware, it has never been discussed in this Council since, and therefore I think it is necessary at the outset to go into the reasons which prompted the Government of India of that day to recommend the transfer of the Capital from Calcutta to Delhi. The first reason was, that it is most inconvenient for the Government of India to be in the same place as the Government of Bengal, and I admit at once that there is a very great deal of force in this argument, and for the reason that I admit the force of this argument I am unwilling to support Mr. Chanda's amendment that the Government should go back to Calcutta without its being discussed whether this is an all-important factor in the location of the Government. The second reason was that geographically Delhi is much more central than Calcutta as the headquarters of Government. Now I was rather disposed to take that view when I first thought about it, but I took the trouble to work out the distances by rail from the various principal cities of the provinces of India to Calcutta and to Delhi, and I have found the very remarkable fact that the aggregate distances to Calcutta from various cities is 6,100 miles, whereas the aggregate distances to Delhi are 8,890 miles, a difference of over 40 per cent. in favour of Calcutta. Then it was said that historically Delhi was the only place in India where the Capital could be, provided that they moved from Calcutta. Well, Sir, Calcutta has been the capital of the British Empire in India for the last 150 years. I am quoting from Lord Curzon's speech in the House of Lords in June 1912. 'Delhi, though it has been the capital of India, cannot be said to be associated as such with the British Indian Empire.'

"And, then, again, it was said that, politically, Delhi again was the only place; and it is rather interesting to read the words of the Government of India despatch used on this occasion with regard to the political effect of the transference to Delhi. They say—

'The change would strike the imagination of the people of India as nothing else could do, would send a wave of enthusiasm throughout the country and would be accepted by all as an announcement of the unfaltering determination to maintain British rule in India. It would be hailed with joy by the Ruling Chiefs and the races of Northern India, and would be warmly welcomed by the vast majority of Indians throughout the country.'

"Now, Sir, I do not know what the views of the Ruling Chiefs at present are, but I do know that, as far as the races of Northern India are concerned, representatives of these races on this Council have told me that on the whole they cannot see the merits of Delhi as a capital ; and as regards the rest of India, it is a very remarkable thing that this Resolution is moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma from Madras, is supported by the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda from Assam, and is also supported by the Hon'ble Mr. Patel from Bombay.

"Then, Sir, another point which the Government of India brought out at the time was the duration of the stay ; that it would be possible if Delhi was made the capital, to stay in Delhi from the 1st of October to the 1st of May. Now, Sir, the Government of India has certainly not, I think, been in Delhi for more than five months in the year so far, and I am very doubtful indeed whether it would be possible for them in the future, or whether they ever will in the future stay for more than five months. So, I think, on that ground there is very little support to be found for the Government of India despatch.

"Then, Sir, in regard to the question of cost. The Government of India in the same despatch wrote as follows :—

'The cost of transfer to Delhi would be considerable. We cannot conceive, however, that a larger sum than £4 million sterling would be necessary, and within that figure probably could be found the three years' interest on capital which would have to be paid till the necessary works and buildings were completed.'

"The Bengal Chamber of Commerce at once took exception to this view, and their arguments were taken up again by Lord Curzon in the House of Lords on the 17th of June 1912, when he said, that from information he had received he was satisfied that the cost of the capital would be at least £8 millions and would probably be more like £12 millions. We know, for we have heard to-day, that 5½ crores roughly has been spent so far on

[18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Mr. W. E. Crum.]

Delhi. That of course includes the alterations to the town and this part of the city. I understand that it is not solely expenditure on New Delhi, but I understand that the expenditure on New Delhi has been something like 3½ crores, and that it is certain that the expenditure will be in the neighbourhood of 10 crores, and I should not be surprised if it was a very great deal more.

"But there were certain points which were ignored altogether in the Government of India's despatch, and the first point was that this decision was arrived at without consultation in any way with the public opinion in India or elsewhere. It was done without consulting European or Indian unofficial opinion; it was done without consulting civil servants; without consulting the Governors of the Provinces; I believe without even consulting the India Council; and the remarkable fact is that this was done by a Government which in the same report admitted that very shortly the just demands of Indians to a larger share in the government and therefore presumably to a larger share of opinion must be admitted.

"Then, Sir, there is the other point which was never considered in this report, the fact that the removal of the capital of the Government to Delhi must seclude the Government from the wholesome effect of public opinion. This again was at once taken up by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, and perhaps, somewhat naturally, it was said 'Oh! yes, it is pure jealousy on the part of the Bengal Chamber'. Well, Sir, everybody did not share that view. I would like to read what Lord Curzon had to say on that subject. He said:—

'With regard to the attitude of the Bengal Chamber, their attitude with regard to this change has not been dictated by selfish or mercenary motives. They object to it not because Calcutta will suffer—I do not think it will—in the mercantile sense of the term, but because they regard this policy as involving a cruel waste of public money and because they regard with dismay the effect that will be exercised both on the Government of India and upon commerce in their opinion by the removal of the capital of India to Delhi.'

"Now, Sir, I have not only consulted non-officials since I have been at Delhi, I have consulted officials, and it is a very remarkable thing that almost without exception officials here in Delhi recognise that there are no merits in favour of Delhi as a capital, and that the only arguments to be adduced in favour of its retention are that His Majesty's announcement cannot be ignored and that a large amount of money has already been spent on the place.

"Now, Sir, I have been able to quote to you the opinions of non-officials and to cite them by name. Unfortunately, I cannot do the same regarding officials because they are somewhat in the same position as tenants in Bombay, Calcutta and Rangoon with regard to the Rent Inquiry Committees that were held the other day. These tenants said 'This is my opinion, but for goodness sake do not give me away because my landlord will turn me out'. Therefore, Sir, I can only say that I believe that if the question of Delhi is discussed purely on its merits and without reference to His Majesty's announcement and without reference to the amount of money spent, that the Council would be almost unanimously in favour of my amendment.

"Then, Sir, I should like to say a word about His Majesty's announcement. What we all felt then and what we all feel to-day about that announcement is very well expressed in the Bengal Chamber's letter to which I have already referred. They say:—

'This momentous announcement has been received and accepted by the mercantile community of Calcutta in a spirit of loyalty and devotion to the throne and person of His Imperial Majesty; for, as loyal subjects, the merchants of this city recognise that the will of His Majesty as regards the governance of his Indian Empire is final.'

"I am perfectly certain, Sir, that that is the spirit of the whole of this Council to-day, but, Sir, I claim that I have made out that His Majesty's announcement was the result of incorrect advice on the part of his advisers, and I cannot help thinking that if His Majesty were differently advised to-day, he would not bind India to a capital which the people of India regard as a wrong capital.'

"As regards the money spent, it certainly is an important matter, but if I am right in assuming that we are going to spend some 10 or 11 crores before Delhi is finished, then the money that has been spent is not a considerable point compared with the importance of choosing the right capital for India. Therefore, Sir, I would urge Government, before it is too late, to take this matter into their consideration and to take it into consideration with the confidence and with the opinions of the non-official communities in India, because I believe that there is a great deal of apprehension and a great deal of misgiving regarding the future of Delhi, and I think that a Committee of this sort would settle the question and allay once for all a point on which there is so much doubtful opinion."

12-28 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea :—"Sir, I desire to accord my support to the amendments moved by my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Patel and my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Crum.

"Sir, the number of motions that have been tabled in connection with this matter have a significance all their own. The fact testifies to the volume of public opinion which prevails with regard to this matter. It is an increasing volume of public opinion which grows day by day and has grown with the growth and the enactment of the Reform Act. It is a body of public opinion that cannot be ignored or burked. The Government must face it; it is as well that it should face it early and find a solution for the problem which this Council presents to the Government to-day.

"Sir, in all these motions there is an underlying note of dissatisfaction with Delhi as the capital of India. Does that represent the public feeling and the deliberate judgment of United India, of India, of the Europeans and Indians alike? If it did, the solution of the question would be easy enough. But I am afraid there is a very considerable difference of opinion about the matter. The Hon'ble Mr. Sinha has already sounded a note of dissent, and I very much fear there will be others in this Council Chamber who will speak in the same strain. Therefore, it is necessary that we should pass from the consideration of opinions to the solid ground of facts and discuss the merits of the case. Let me ask the question—is Delhi a suitable place to be the capital of India? In answering this question we have to ask another. Delhi has now been the Capital of India for eight years. Has Delhi to any appreciable extent in any sensible degree fulfilled the conditions which constitute the indispensable equipment of a modern capital?

"Sir, the first and foremost of these conditions is the existence in the capital city of a body of public opinion, strong, vigorous, militant—if I may be permitted to use that word—guiding, controlling, stimulating the Government in the paths of progressive development. Does such a body of public opinion exist in Delhi? The answer must be in the negative. Of public opinion there is little or none at Delhi; and public opinion is the vital breath of Governments in these days. We need it all the more in the case of an autocratic Government which the Central Government will be even under the Reform Act. We need it still more in the transformation which is destined to take place in respect of the Central Government from an autocracy to the introduction of responsibility. In the altered circumstances of India, for the ends of our political progress, for the attainment of that goal which has been fixed for us by the mandate of our Sovereign and of the British Parliament, it seems to me that the transfer of the capital from Delhi has become urgently necessary.

"Let us somewhat elaborate this point. Sir, we are on the threshold of great possibilities. In the words of our Sovereign a new era is opening out for us. Our people have to be qualified for the new destiny that awaits them. Our educational system has to be reorganised; our industries have to be created; our commerce must expand; the Government has to be nationalised; the process has already begun; a vast progressive movement is developing slowly and silently, but steadily and majestically in the bosom of Indian society, and amid the deeper under-currents of Indian life. I say, Sir, with the utmost emphasis that I can command that the Government should place itself at the head of this national movement, that the Government should watch it. Is it possible for the Government to watch it from a place isolated and detached from the great centres of public opinion? The Government should be in living touch with those great capitals which are the centres of our public activities. At Delhi it is in touch with the dead past, but not with the living present, with the memories of departed greatness, but not with the life and the soul and the heart of the people, manifesting itself in our manifold activities and in a thousand directions. Public opinion ought to be the guide of the Government, and Government ought to influence public opinion. Government and public opinion should act and re-act upon one another and strengthen one another by their mutual interaction; but this process is absolutely impossible if Delhi is to be the capital of the Indian Empire.

"Let us look at the same consideration from another point of view. All these motions point to one definite conclusion, namely, that there should be one capital and one alone. It precludes the idea of a summer capital for India; it precludes the idea of the Simla exodus; for if you had a summer capital it would only be an aggravation of the evil which we are complaining of at the present moment, the isolation of Government from the centres of public opinion. Sir, the Indian Government has not been free from blunders. I do not bring it as an indictment or a charge against the Government; all human institutions are fallible, and the Indian Government is no exception to this general rule. It has committed mistakes; it is through mistakes that we learn how not to commit them. It has committed gigantic blunders, and those blunders have in many cases been due to its position of isolation from the centres of public opinion. You had that fact prominently brought home in the Mesopotamian Report. I therefore, urge, Sir, with all the emphasis that I can command that the first and foremost duty of Government in the new situation, which is about to be inaugurated, is to have one centre and one centre alone of Government and such a centre to be in close and vital touch with public opinion.

"I know it will be said on the other side that Delhi is the Capital of India is a settled fact. Sir, I do not believe in the doctrine of a settled fact; there is no such thing as a settled fact in life or in politics. We are moving, the world is moving; in the words of the Prime Minister we are running through the track of centuries. Everything is more or less in a state of unsettlement. What is 'progress' but unsettlement, subject to proper safeguards; progress and unsettlement are often identical. There never was a more decisively settled fact than the partition of Bengal, and yet it was unsettled; it was modified, and why should not this matter be similarly dealt with? It may be said that it is the mandate of the King-Emperor; and he has made Delhi the Capital of India. The King can do no wrong, but his ministers may and their mistakes should be righted; and this is a case where, I will not say a wrong, but a mistake has been committed, which ought to be mended. If the King passes an order he can revoke it; the King can make and unmake things. India to-day in 1920 is not the India of 1911 when the capital was fixed at Delhi. The conditions have changed, a stupendous transformation has taken place in our ideals and aspirations and in the whole outlook of Indian life and society. That being so, we call upon the Government to move with the times and carry out its own policy, and the central fact of that policy is the location of the capital in a place which should be in living touch with public opinion.

'Sir, the question of expense has been dealt with by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Crum, and I will not trouble you further about it. If you have one permanent capital you will save the cost of building two capitals, spending a crore of rupees or so at Simla, and then you will also save the recurring charges of the annual migration; but look at the moral gain in the added popularity and efficiency of the Government, and does not the moral gain outweigh the material loss that you might incur?

[Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea; Mr. Srinivasa Sastri.] [18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

"Sir, I know there are one or two considerations on the other side of a very valid character. We want a calm atmosphere for the successful working of the Reform Act. A controversy at this time would be most undesirable; it would let loose forces which may create a state of things the reverse of what we want; we want to concentrate our attention upon the success of the Reform Act, and the question has to be looked at from that point of view. Then, Sir, there is this other fact which has to be borne in mind and which favours the idea of a non-transfer. We are a dying legislature. This is the last year of our existence. The sands in our hour-glass are fast running out. Should we almost at the supreme moment of our lives determine this grave question for our successors? Should they not be allowed to deal with it? They will be in the thick of the business—they will be in medias res—they will be confronted with the actualities of the situation; they will be in a better position to judge of the matter than we can, and they will speak with a voice of authority which we do not possess.

"Sir, these are the considerations for and against the transfer of the capital. It used to be said of the ancient Kings of Castille and Arragon that when they were confronted with a difficult and complicated problem they appealed to the venerable oracles of their revered ancestors. In my difficulties in regard to this matter I consulted some of my constituents and what was their advice? They said 'go and vote for the transfer of the capital to Calcutta.' I cannot say that I am bound by their advice; I am bound, however, to show it the utmost deference. Circumstances have somewhat changed since that advice was given. My Hon'ble friend who represents Calcutta Chamber of Commerce has given notice of a motion for the appointment of a Committee. My friend on the other side has done the same thing. Therefore, I vote for the appointment of a Committee to inquire into the whole matter, and I do believe that the Committee will recommend that Calcutta be the capital of India (laughter). This is no laughing matter at all. Calcutta, let me remind my friends, is the centre of the public opinion of a great Province which not long ago was the metropolitan province of India. It is the cradle of the British power, the nursery of British institutions. It used to be not long ago, and even now is, the fountainhead, the inspiring source of those beneficent activities which have made India what India is to-day, an aspiring member, if not an actual unit, of the great confederacy of the free States of the British Empire. Such is the claim of Calcutta to be the capital of the Indian Empire. I am sure that if a Committee is appointed it will recognize that claim, and I hope that, having regard to the complexity of the problem and the differences of opinion that exist with regard to it, a Committee will be appointed to inquire into the whole question and including that of the practicability as my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Crum suggests of the transfer of the capital. The Government loses nothing by assenting to the appointment of such a Committee—they stand to gain. If the Committee rejects the proposal, the atmosphere will be cleared and all the controversy and agitation about it will disappear. If, on the other hand, it recommends that the capital should be transferred, that recommendation ought to be given effect to; for in these days you cannot flout public opinion. A great Viceroy, Lord Ripon, has told us that even in India public opinion is bound to be the irresistible and the unresisted master of the Government. Lord Beaconsfield said 50 years ago that public opinion is the strongest bulwark of States and Thrones. If that was true half a century ago, it is still more so at the present moment. I hope therefore that the Government will not object to the appointment of a Committee to go into this matter, and I am fully confident that if such a Committee is appointed, they will select Calcutta as the capital of the Indian Empire."

12-45 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri:—"Sir, in discussing this topic I wish very much that we had a clean slate to write upon—one cannot resist such a wish. As the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea has pointed out we are in the eve of great changes in India, changes of a constitutional nature, without doubt also changes that touch very deeply the entire life of the nation. It has been pointed out that the advance we are going to make in the Indian constitution postulates an entire alteration of outlook on the part of the Indian Civil Service, on the part of the Local Governments, and on the part of the people of India; it is a profound change of mind and of general attitude which are the pre-requisites of the successful inauguration of responsible government. Changes of a mighty character that go to the roots of the people's life might well be symbolised in the external world by a change of venue. Students of modern history will remember that such a marked change of venue was accomplished by the Japanese Government on the eve of the Meiji Era, the Restoration was heralded by a change of capital from Kyoto to Tokyo. One wishes indeed that it were possible to signalise the radical alteration of the perspective of Indian peoples by a change of capital. Apart, however, from this imaginative and sentimental ground, there are other considerations that make it necessary to do so, and that is why one wishes from the bottom of one's heart that we had a clean slate to write upon. Now, if we had a clean slate to write upon, what would we do? Doubtless, we would appoint a Committee as Mr. Patel recommends and as Mr. Crum recommends and would canvas the claims of competing candidates for the post of capital. Calcutta has been once the capital and its claims have been eloquently pleaded before us to-day. We want the place to be central and to be easily accessible from all parts of this far-flung Empire. We want the place chosen to have a salubrious climate, where it would be possible for work of very high character to be performed all the year round. We want besides, as Mr. Banerjea has said, a place where the Government and Parliament of the future will be in touch with, and under the guiding hand of, strong and well-organised vocal public opinion Calcutta is by no means central and besides is congested. There are no open grounds round Calcutta. I, therefore, have no hesitation in disallowing the claim of Calcutta to be re-instated as the capital of India. Places like Dehra Dun may have their own qualifications, but there is nothing like public opinion there. Pachmarhi, in the Central Provinces, does not even deserve notice. Jubbulpore has been described as the geographical centre of the country, and the curious reader may be advised to study its claim in one of the brilliant essays of a former Civilian who wrote under the pseudonym of 'Competition wallah'. But it has only a historical interest now. I seriously recommend the claims of Allahabad to be the future capital of India. Allahabad may be described as fairly central. It is the most easily accessible place, considering not only its situation, but its railway facilities from all parts of India. Its claim, if I may say so, is much better certainly than that of Delhi and considerably superior to that of Calcutta.

"It may be oppressively hot for two or three months in the year. The Parliament of the future may well have a holiday during those months. As for public opinion, it certainly is not so strong in Allahabad, as public opinion is in any of the Presidency capitals. But, thanks to the recent arrangements, the United Provinces are going to be raised to the rank of a Presidency, and then a very considerate Lieutenant-Governor, more considerate than probably he himself realises, is already making arrangements for the shifting of his own capital to Lucknow.

"Now to come to the slate which is not clean. What are our difficulties in thinking of a change of capital? They have been already mentioned. First of all, there is the word of the King upon which we have acted during the last eight years. Then there is the expenditure that has already been incurred, and, lastly, although it has not been openly avowed, there is the partiality for Simla in the minds of those who every year spend seven months in that hill centre. If Delhi were to be fixed as the capital, nobody can talk of Simla, as they used to talk of it in the Calcutta days, as a mere luxury. If Delhi were the capital of India, it would be impossible to resist the claims of Simla to be the summer capital. That is the opinion of a great many who have suffered from the rigours of the Delhi climate. I have myself no experience of the summer possibilities of this city, but I can very well imagine it is intolerable for a great part of the year. Sir, I must acknowledge the courtesy and kindness of Sir Claude Hill which enabled me the other day to go round New Delhi and see what is being done to build the new capital. I acknowledge I was impressed very much indeed, and, I think, I may well pay a tribute to the noble and imposing city that through the ability and skill of the architects is about to be built, if we allow it on the site chosen. The money, however, that has been spent is only about a third of what is going to be spent, and if we decide on a change of capital, the expenditure so far incurred ought not really to deter us when we consider that we are really deciding for posterity. Well, as to the King's word upon which we have acted, all I have to say is that the King is a constitutional Monarch. He acted then on the advice of his advisers. He will act in the future on the advice of his advisers, and if his advisers are persuaded, that is about all that we need ask for. What is the main difficulty then in changing the capital? I come to that last consideration, that the Government of India have been used to spend more than half the year, nearly seven months, in Simla. Now I know that that would be a greater consideration in the minds of certain people than is commonly acknowledged, and I desire on this occasion, although we cannot go into the whole question, I desire on this occasion, in the name of the Indian tax-payer to make an emphatic protest against the erection of Simla into a summer capital It will involve the duplication of expenditure on a very considerable scale. If the erection of the new Parliamentary House in Delhi will cost about 50 lakhs, I am certain, by the experience of the Public Work's Department's estimates, it would be a good deal more, the cost of erecting similar buildings in Simla will not be considerably less. It may be slightly less, but it is bound to amount to at least half a crore. I do not think, even if we omitted the consideration of there being nothing like a controlling public opinion in Simla, the Government of India would be justified in selecting it as a summer capital for the future government of this country and spending sums upon it. I am, therefore, of opinion that this question must be seriously considered. It must not be considered as merely academic. If a great mistake has been committed in the past—and the Hon'ble Mr. Crum has shown grounds for believing that the change of capital was a great mistake—I think it is time that the mistake were rectified. I know of nothing so difficult in Indian administration as the rectification of a blunder. Every one may acknowledge it, people may regret it, but you will never get a sign of this regret in the official papers. Formally and publicly there will always be a maintenance of the original blunder It is only in very rare cases that a great man is to be found who will come and say 'this mistake must be rectified.' If it is impossible to find a man with authority sufficient to rectify the blunder, it is possible, if the Government will only wait for them, to see whether the public opinion of the country will not assert itself with an authority which it is impossible to dispute. I would therefore request the Government of India, I would implore them, not to push ahead with the building operations in Simla at all events. If the Committee to be set up to-day decides that Delhi must be the capital, then, I think, the Government of India are bound to put up with the inconveniences of Delhi as a capital. It is cruelty to the Indian tax-payer, cynical disregard of his interests, to support at the same time the movement annually of the Government and of the future Parliament into Simla quarters.

"If we accept Delhi at all, let us accept it with all its inconveniences, but I do hope, if we appoint a Committee, they will be bold enough to face the question as if we had a clean slate, and select a place outside Delhi as a suitable place for the future capital."

1 P.M. The Hon'ble Khan Sahib Shah Nawaz Bhutto:—" Sir, after listening to the debate which has taken place on this important question, if I may be allowed to make a suggestion in this matter, it is that to my mind there is no part of India so conveniently situated for the location of the Government of

[18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Khan Sahib Shah Nawaz Bhutto; Major Malik Sir Umar Hayat Khan.]

India as Karachi. I need hardly say, Sir, that from a geographical, climatic, industrial and, what is more, from a strategic point of view, the city of Karachi stands second to none should the Government of India decide to remain in one place The city of Karachi is capable of considerable expansion. It is pregnant with immense possibilities in the future. The Council is perhaps aware that it is proposed that the main station of the Baghdad Railway should be established at Karachi. It is also proposed to establish the main station for aeroplanes at Karachi. It is also very close to Aden which is the gateway to India. The officials in Karachi, Sir, feel no necessity to move to a hill-station in the summer as the climate is temperate, and as such there will be no need for the Government of India, if its headquarters are located at Karachi, to seek another summer headquarters. I, therefore, hope that the Government and this Council will not in deciding the matter overlook the case of Karachi."

The Hon'ble Major Malik Sir Umar Hayat Khan:— 1-3 P.
"Sir, last Session the suggestion was made that the Punjab Government should be ejected from Simla. Now, the turn of the Government of India has come and they are being called upon to justify their presence there. This demand is open to the retort that those who profess to change the established order of things must produce good reasons to justify their proposal. However, we will examine what would happen if Government remained all the year round in one place. Let us take Simla first. Now though there are many Europeans well clothed and well housed who might even enjoy the cold and snow, our own countrymen would necessarily suffer, and, for the time being, would lose their efficiency. The quality of their work would greatly deteriorate from November to February. If, on the other hand, Delhi was chosen as the headquarters of the Government throughout the year, the whole staff would be exposed to malaria and in certain months the outturn of work would diminish. No staff, whether European or Indian, can work its best during the extreme heat of May and June, or when suffering from prickly heat and other illnesses incidental to living in Delhi during the rains. If the capital of India ever has to be located in one place, I would prefer Simla, but I do not think there is really any place in India which is really suitable all the year round.

"It will not be out of place to put before the Council that one of the underlying objects for moving this resolution is pecuniary. When Calcutta was the capital the Government of India Secretariat was full of the inhabitants of Bengal, with the exception of some from Madras. The people of these two provinces even now so predominate, that others have got no comparison with them whatsoever. Lakhs of rupees have been pouring into those provinces. Since the transfer of the capital to this place some men from the United Provinces and the Punjab, and even from other provinces, have had a look in, and there is a chance that in the long run the other parts of India may have their due share. The fact of the predominance of these two provinces could be easily ascertained by inquiry into the matter. As all the secretariat posts go to the graduates or other literate classes there is no wonder if there may have been a general talk of resentment at the change of capital among them which may have reached the Hon'ble mover of the resolution The secretariat clerks have had, and even still have, cliques and if any man enters their department from an undesirable province or class he gets no help, and is furthermore so overburdened with work that he soon proves unequal to the task, while, on the other hand, if an inferior candidate comes from the same province or class as the other members of this clique he is helped through with his work. These cliques are threatened because some of the old Bengal or down-country clerks would have to leave as the climate all the year round will not suit them and their place will be taken by the sturdier people from the North. Sir, about Calcutta I remember I once said that it is in one corner, the place is very unhealthy and . . . . . .

[Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea; The Vice-President; Major Malik Sir Umar Hayat Khan; Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy.] [18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee:—"Sir, I rise to correct a mistake. Calcutta is not unhealthy as my friend says."

The Vice-President:—"The Hon'ble Member must only rise to a personal explanation."

The Hon'ble Major Malik Sir Umar Hayat Khan:—"Why I say it is unhealthy is because a large number of men from that province were taken and tried and it was found that bodily they were inferior and weak. They were tried, I think, at a very difficult place, that is, at the front.

"Then there was the difficulty found that because there was a Lieutenant-Governor at Calcutta we should not have the Government of India there. Now there is a Governor there, so there are still more reasons why the Government of India should not be located there. Of course some people are against Simla because they say it is in the Punjab, but Delhi is all right, because there is only a Chief Commissioner here and there is no Governor or Lieutenant-Governor, and, I think, it should not be objected to. Another thing that has been said, is, that the taxpayers would suffer if Simla or Delhi were kept on as the capital; but would they not suffer if there was another capital? All these architects and their staff who are engaged on making the new capital would have to be engaged in designing and making a new capital again. What superiority would Allahabad have over Delhi? It is more towards the south and more towards the equator, and naturally it would be much hotter. It is situated on the same river as Delhi is, and when there has been so much spent on Delhi it is just as well to go on spending it and keep it as the capital. Now, as to Simla, Sir, if India wants the services of Europeans to help it and lead it along the road which it wants to travel, it is necessary to keep them in a place where you can get good work out of them. Why hamper them and keep them in a climate where they will all suffer? I think one of the reasons why our friends who come from Madras or Calcutta want to leave Delhi or Simla is that they suffer from the cold and suffer in health, and when this Resolution was being written it was at a time when it was very cold in Delhi. Perhaps one of the causes of its being put forward may have been also this. I think in the revenues of the Government of India every province has got its share, and we should not move to a place where only people of one province will get round the Government. So everybody should have the haq, to be in the Secretariat, or to be with the Government of India so as to put forward their own particular ideas before them. Therefore when so much has been spent on Delhi, it ought to be kept as the capital of India and Simla ought to remain as it has always been, just a place to go to in summer. I think very much more work is done there than is done while the Government is on the plains. Besides I think there are now many Indians who have begun going to Simla, and if they do not go to Simla they go to other hill-stations. So when you get the new Reformed Councils Indians will like to go to the hills for their own benefit. So I think when we are considering this question, we ought to consider that there should be Simla in the hot weather and Delhi in the cold weather as the seats of the Government. It is for these reasons that I am against this Resolution."

1-12 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy:—"Sir, public opinion in the country is strongly against hill-top administration, and as the Government stays only a few months in Delhi and longer in Simla, public opinion also condemns Delhi. When the Government removed the capital from Calcutta to Delhi, it was the intention of the Government to stay eight months in the year in Delhi, but unfortunately, owing to the war, the capital was not built up soon. The Government had to stay under canvas, and therefore it was necessary for it to go up to Simla. If with the engineering and architectural skill at the disposal of the Government Delhi can be made a healthy place and one where the Government can stay for eight months in the year, then the Government ought to stick to Delhi. As other members have said, the foundation stone of the city has been laid by His Imperial Majesty the King-Emperor; we have spent a lot of money on the place, and it is also a central place. But if the Government think that it is not possible for them to stay eight months in the year in New Delhi, then surely the Government ought to select some central place where they can stay all the year round. And for that purpose the Committee would be useful. That we will know when the Government Member replies; till then I cannot make up my mind.

"Now I come to my friends the Hon'ble Mr. Crum and the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea. Mr. Crum throughout his speech gave us the opinions of Lord Curzon and of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, but he never mentioned what place he liked, or whether he wants to go back to Calcutta. The Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea has, after discussion of the pros and cons and of the disadvantages of Delhi, honestly said that he prefers that the capital should go back to Calcutta . . . ."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea:- Provisionally, pending the decision of the Committee."

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy:—"Sir, I am rather surprised to find that my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea who is such a champion of independence, who has supported the reform policy and has advocated provincial autonomy, wants that the capital should be removed to Calcutta. He must know in his heart of hearts that if the Government of India reverts to Calcutta, they will influence the administration of Bengal . . . ."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea:—"We will not allow it."

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy:—"The Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea says he will not allow it. In that case I suppose he is anxious that Bengal should again dominate the whole of India. That also, I think, is unfair. Now when he mentioned public opinion, I suppose he meant that the public opinion of Calcutta should dominate the whole of India again. I do not think members of this Council will ever agree to the Government of India being dominated by some cities like Bombay or Calcutta, and that Calcutta or Bombay should have influence over the administration of the Government of India.

"Sir, the capitals of big countries like the United States of America and Canada are not in the centre of commerce. For instance, in the United States, New York is the great commercial centre, and yet the capital is Washington. The same is the case with Ottawa in Canada. If the Government of India can stay in Delhi for eight months and build New Delhi, I think it will be accessible to all the people from different parts of the country to come and see the Government and stay here. At present we cannot judge because the Government stays here a very short time and there is no accommodation. From what I have seen of New Delhi,—its plan and the laying out of the city,—I think it will be possible for the Government to stay eight months in Delhi. If, however, the Government say no, then they ought to remove to a central place, because nine-tenths of the people of the country live in the plains, and the country ought to be administered from the plains. With these few remarks I would support the amendment after hearing the Government."

The Hon'ble Chaudhuri Muhammad Ismail Khan:— 1-18 P.M.
"Sir, I beg to associate myself with my friend Mr. Sarma in recommending that the headquarters of the Government of India be permanently located in one place. The migratory nature of the Government of India results in a huge and, I would add, unnecessary expenditure which India can ill afford to incur when her educational, sanitary and industrial needs have to be satisfied, and the Departments in charge of these important subjects are being more or less starved. Sir, the Reforms will increase the expenditure of administration, and retrenchment will be even more necessary in the future than in the past. Indians have protested against the exodus to the hills where our officials spend their time like gods together for more than half the year. The cost of living on the hills is daily going up, and the Indian clerks of the Government of India are like 'Oliver Twist' clamouring for more. The Reformed Councils will have a larger number of members and a foretaste of the proceedings of those Councils was given when this Council sat till the early hours of the morning discussing—what is commonly known as—the Rowlatt Bill. The question of housing about two hundred members at Simla will in itself be serious and members from the distant provinces will find it very inconvenient to travel to Simla for a short Session. I, therefore, recommend that the headquarters of the Government of India be permanently located in one place, and in selecting the site the convenience of members should be considered. In other words the place should be centrally situated. I know, Sir, we are bound by the decision of His Imperial Majesty the King-Emperor, who was pleased to transfer the capital of His Indian Empire from Calcutta to Delhi. But, then, no one has the audacity to suggest that the matter would be decided without His command and against His desire. The Reforms have ushered in a new era and, Sir, it has been said—'New occasions teach new duties, time makes ancient good uncouth.' The new Councils are likely to have long and continuous Sessions. They cannot be situated far away from centres of public opinion and should no longer be nomadic. We are sure if His Excellency's Government would accept the Resolution His Imperial Majesty the King-Emperor who has always evinced a strong desire to please His people will not grudge his permission to locate the headquarters of the Government of India permanently in a central place—retaining Delhi the ceremonial Capital—if necessary.

"My friend Mr. Chanda wants the Government to go back to Calcutta, and personally I shall be glad to welcome them back in our provincial capital. But if I advocate the claims of Calcutta it is not because that would be of advantage to the Bengalees, but because a return to Calcutta would not involve any considerable expenditure. At Calcutta it will not be necessary to spend crores of rupees in building a new city. It is already there and the Government have only to go back to their own home.

"With these words, Sir, I have pleasure in supporting the original proposal as amended by Mr. Chanda."

[At this stage the Council adjourned for Lunch till 2-30 P.M.]

2-32 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent.—"Sir, I should like, in the first place if I may, to congratulate the mover on having inaugurated what has really been not only an interesting but, if I may say so, a very instructive debate, and, if I answer shortly, I am unable to accept the resolution or any of the various amendments proposed, I hope the Council will not think that I am treating it with discourtesy or that I take this line in any unreasoning spirit of opposition; for it is not so. From the point of view of the Government, it seems to me that there was great force in the argument put forward by Mr. Sinha when he said these proposals were not at the present moment practical politics. There are two aspects of the case, one, if I may say so, that of the official Government and official members will vote with the Government on this occasion, and the other—that of non-official members. To the non-official members I would say that we are now on the eve of great changes in the constitution of this Council. We are shortly going to have a Council which will be admittedly much more representative of the wishes of the people and which will be more powerful. For eight years this Council has watched the building of the new capital of Delhi; they have acquiesced in, and many have definitely approved of, the changes that were effected in 1911. In these circumstances, I want to ask the members of this Council whether they think it is right for them at this juncture to propose a change in what has been so long accepted. From the point of view of the Government the reasons against acceptance of the proposals are even stronger. We have not got a clean slate; we have had, it is true, the ordinary notice of this resolution, though of the actual amendment by Mr. Chanda I had received only two days' clear notice on the first date fixed for the debate. I put it to the Council, however, that such notice would in any circumstances be inadequate for the careful consideration which a proposal of this magnitude demands; that the Government must have time; in any case, whatever their views were they would require reasonable time to examine and weigh a proposal of such magnitude. And here I may remind the Council of the manner in which this change was initiated. It was the subject of long deliberation—I admit, confidential deliberation—with the Secretary of State. It was subsequently inaugurated by His Majesty in a solemn pronouncement in this city. At that time, I think I am right in saying and for some years afterwards, there were few members, if any, in this Council, who raised any note of protest or dissent. Since then the move to Delhi has been discussed in Parliament more than once, the most recent occasion being a debate in the House of Lords in 1914 in which Lord Curzon took a large part. Since 1911, the Government of India have again, with the approval of this Council, or at any rate without the opposition of this Council, spent three and half crores on the new capital, and many of the Hon'ble Members, including at least one who has moved an amendment, have watched that expenditure going on without a word. Now, in these circumstances, I put it to the Council that this Government which acts under the authority of the Secretary of State and indirectly of Parliament, could not possibly, with due respect to its official position and in subordination to His Majesty's Government, accept a resolution of this kind. It has been said that the King can do no wrong, but that he acts on the advice of his ministers who may advise him wrongly. But in any case it is not for the Government of India, which is a subordinate Government, to alter a policy which has received the weighty sanction of His Majesty and His Majesty's Government. That really is the short answer to the various resolutions and amendments which have been moved.

"Sir, I admit the cogency of many of the arguments that have been adduced in this Council with respect to the move from Calcutta. These arguments have indeed the authority of a great man, Lord Curzon, behind them, and it would be idle in any way to minimise the weight of such authority, nor would any reasonable man say that they can be brushed aside on the merits. The severance of the Government of India from a great commercial centre, its separation from a seat of learning, the loss of daily contact with men of leading in the legal and business world, in fact with leading men in all branches of public affairs, those who make and guide public opinion, are matters which no reasonable person could afford to treat lightly. But I do not wish to-day to discuss in detail the reasons for or against the move, for the case is really in my opinion a chose jugée. It has been settled and it would be impossible for Government on a motion of this kind to agree to any re-opening of it. At the same time, while arguments have been cited in favour of removing the capital to Calcutta, I ought to say the advantages of Delhi as a capital have been underestimated by some of the speakers. I do not wish to take up the position of a champion of Delhi, and other members will follow me who are better able to sing its praises, but it would be a great mistake to neglect cardinal factors in its favour. It has undoubtedly a very central position; it is a large railway junction, and it is the great centre of public opinion in Northern India. I notice that one Hon'ble Member said that public opinion in Delhi is negligible. Sir, will any Muhammadan Member of this Council say that Muhammadan opinion in Delhi is not an important factor in Northern India at this moment? Have we not experienced otherwise?

[Sir William Vincent; Mr. W. E. Crum.] [18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

Then, again, Delhi is, from the military point of view, a far more convenient centre than either Calcutta or many other places mentioned in this Council. It is also a place of great historical associations. I have been told, I think it was Mr. Crum who said that it has never been associated with the British Empire. I hope I am quoting him correctly . . . .

The Hon'ble Mr. W. E. Crum :—"I mean that Delhi as a Capital was never associated with the British Empire."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"Sir, it is only fifty years ago that it was regarded by the British Government in India as a symbol of the Empire and its re-capture from the mutineers was a token of the Empire's safety. Delhi therefore is not so insignificant a place as some Hon'ble Members would have us believe. I am told that it is a place of stagnation fatal to any progress on the part of Government owing to the absence of public opinion. I admit that there has been a considerable difference in these respects between Calcutta and Delhi. At the same time, I would ask the Council to remember that eight years of the Government of India at Delhi have brought about changes in the form of government which fifty years of Calcutta failed to produce. That surely is no indication that the Government of India necessarily stagnates in a place of this kind. But, Sir, the whole of this debate really is centred round the possibility of a return to Calcutta. The Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea has, if I may say so, camouflaged his desire under a proposal to appoint a Committee, but he is too honest to keep his real desire concealed, and before the end of his speech he came out into the open and said that he knew that, if the Committee were appointed, it would decide to move the Government back to Calcutta, and that is the avowed object of the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda. Now, apart from other considerations, I think those who make that proposal perhaps have underestimated the difficulties that would arise in connection with such a proposal. I do not want to expatiate on the claims of rival cities, but Council must have gathered from the speeches made to-day that the possible influence of Calcutta and Bengal over the Government of India in the event of the Government of India being located there, would not be viewed with satisfaction by many residents of other Provinces. I think that is not an unfair way of putting it. We know, also, the whole of this Council knows, that Calcutta at this moment is an extraordinarily congested place, that proper accommodation cannot be found for the people who reside there already. Does the Council think that it would be easy to find accommodation, not merely for the officials who comprise the Government of India or even for the enlarged Council, but for the large number of people who would constantly be in Calcutta in connection with business with Government? Can any one contemplate with equanimity the acquisition of large building sites in Calcutta for the purpose of accommodating the Government of India at the present fabulous rates that prevail there? Would not the expenditure on such accommodation be prohibitive? That is a question I should like the Hon'ble Members to ask themselves.

"Then there is another question. It is, to my mind, extremely doubtful whether the Government of India would now be welcomed in Calcutta. I have not heard one member from Bengal say that they would. Nor is the difficulty of having the Government of India permanently located in the same capital as a Presidency Governor in Council one that can be overlooked. These are some of the many difficulties which I want this Council to consider before they accept the present Resolution. If the Government of India were to move again to Calcutta, and the annual exodus to the Hills were continued, the dislocation of public business and expense would also be very much larger than what is now complained of in the case of Delhi. Here the expense is comparatively small and the dislocation of business is also insignificant, and we hope to reduce it further, but the move to the Hills from Calcutta was a very different matter.

"There is another point in connection with the location of the Government of India at Delhi to which I wish to advert, and that is, that it has up to the present never really had a fair chance. Owing to the exigencies of the war the new capital has never been built, expenditure having been curtailed, owing to the necessity for economy during the war and the impossibility of procuring material, and it seems to me that it is premature now for this Council to decide to recommend Government to move from Delhi before the new policy has ever really been given a trial in the permanent city of new Delhi. Turning now to the main resolution, the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma is quite right in suggesting that a single capital in which the Government of India could reside for twelve months in the year would be the ideal solution if it were practicable. If any place suitable in climate, fairly accessible and central with some historical associations and good railway communications could be found, then the advantages of locating the Government of India in such a place would be very great. But what do we find as practical men when the question is discussed in this Council? The Hon'ble Member himself has wandered almost from one end of India to the other, suggesting such places as Poona, Ranchi, Pachmarhi and Dehra Dun as suitable places for the location of Government. Then we had suggestions that we should move far afield, as Karachi, and another that we should make the new capital Allahabad. These various suggestions indicate that it is really impossible to select any suitable centre which will meet all requirements and the wishes of all. Let me examine one or two of these proposed new capitals, Ranchi for instance. Now I know Ranchi, I suppose as well as, or possibly better even than, the Hon'ble Member himself. I spent many happy years of my life there; it is a delightful place; it has a comparatively temperate climate though it is very hot for six weeks in the year. But one of the things to which the Hon'ble Member attached importance, if I understood him aright, was subjecting the Government of India to the influence of public opinion in a great business-town and in a centre of legal and other learning. Now Ranchi is situated on a narrow gauge railway, and though the headquarters of the Local Government is a small town in a district inhabited mainly by the aboriginal tribes, it is a delightful place in many ways, but I have never heard its best friend—and, I think, Mr Sinha will bear me out—claim that it is a centre of industrial activity or learning. Again, take the case of Pachmarhi, I have learned to have the greatest respect for the Central Provinces from my Hon'ble predecessor in office, who always pointed to it as the best administered Province in India. We were indeed often asked to frame our administration on the model of the Central Provinces. But even Sir Reginald Craddock, I think, would not have claimed that Pachmarhi was a seat of any great public opinion or learning or commercial activity.

"It would however be idle for me to discuss all these places that have been named. The fact is that the ideal capital would be one with a temperate climate, in a place where Government would be in constant contact with leading men of affairs in the different branches of life. If that could be secured anywhere, if the Hon'ble Members in this Council even had been able to agree on any place as likely to meet the requirements, then, I think, there would be something to be said for this motion. As it is the matter is really—I hesitate to use the word because the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea may object to it—a settled fact so far as this Council and the Government are concerned. The question has been decided by His Majesty's Government, and the Government of India could not possibly, for the reasons I have given, accept this resolution. At the same time, I may say that to my mind the debate has been a very valuable one, and it will be my duty to put the papers of the discussion before His Excellency the Viceroy in case he wishes this question to be further examined. The Hon'ble Mr. Crum may say 'Why do you not at any rate appoint a committee at once'? and the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea has said 'Oh there can be no objection to such a proposal'. In vain in the sight of the bird is the net of the fowler displayed. The appointment of a committee would at once create the impression that the Government of India were wavering in their decision on this matter. That is a position which I have no authority to take in this Council. That is an impression which, I think, the Government of India would be acting improperly in creating at the present juncture, having regard to the constitution of this Council and having regard to the manner in which the present move from Calcutta was inaugurated, and to the fact that it has on more occasions than one been discussed by His Majesty's Government."

2-54 P.M. The Hon'ble Nawab Saiyed Nawab Ali Chaudhri :—"Sir, I do not know if some of my Hon'ble colleagues will denounce me as a renegade if, as a member from Bengal, I rise to oppose the transfer of capital from Delhi to Calcutta. In these days when changes are so much in the air, we, the Muhammadans of Bengal, generally get nervous when we hear of 'changes' 'Reforms,' and 'Modifications' which unfortunately have the curious coincidence of being effected always at the cost of our suffering community in Bengal. The present fad for the transfer of capital has given rise to considerable misgivings in the minds of Mussalmans. Many Hon'ble Members have referred to the circumstances that led to the change of capital from Calcutta to Delhi. But there is one aspect of the question that has been totally ignored. The change of capital was but one of the momentous measures inaugurated by His Majesty the King-Emperor. To understand the situation properly, we must consider the bearing of other allied changes on the question of the transfer of capital. The dominating influence of Calcutta opinion on the Government of India to which my Hon'ble Friend, Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy, has referred, has spelt the ruin of the Mussalmans of Eastern Bengal They consider the transfer of capital as one of the compensatory elements that would enable the Government of India of the future to frame their policy without submitting to the dictates of the Calcutta politicians The modification of the partition, the unsettling of the settled fact to which Mr. Banerjea has so proudly referred, was, in fact, due to the unfair influence of the Bengal politicians on the policies of the Government of India. The Muhammadans of Bengal calmly submitted to the modification of the Partition because the decision, disastrous though it was, came from His Majesty the King himself. Now, if all sorts of constitutional theories of ministerial responsibility are put forward for undoing what it had pleased His Majesty to inaugurate, the modification of the Partition too should, on the same ground, be re-considered again. The Muhammadans view with alarm the proposal to place the Government of India under the thumb of the Calcutta politicians whose opinions have so often passed for Bengal public opinion, though it ran counter to the opinions of the millions of Muhammadan population who form the majority of the Province. Under these circumstances, I find myself unable to support the transfer of capital from Delhi to Calcutta, even though it involves the tempting possibility of the transfer of the seat of the Bengal Government from Calcutta to Dacca—a possibility ever hoped for, but perhaps never to be realised."

2-57 P.M. The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur :—"Sir, the resolution moved by my Honourable colleague implies more than what appears on the surface of it. Even as it appears, its meaning is not quite clear. Divested of its new garb, it is virtually a resolution against the exodus of the Government to the hills. It is evidently an old friend with a new face. As it stands, the resolution asks for two things, first, for the permanent location in one place of the headquarters of the Government of India, and secondly, for the selection of a suitable centre for the purpose. The significant, shall, I say purposeful, use of the word 'headquarters' instead of the word 'capital' is worthy of a clever lawyer. As we are all well aware, Delhi, the modern capital of the Indian Empire, is the permanent headquarters of the

[18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur.]

Government, while Simla, the beautiful hill city, is the temporary headquarters of the Heads of administrations with their respective staffs. So Delhi satisfies the terms of the resolution, and the resolution seems to me quite superfluous But if the resolution aims at the abandonment of Simla as the summer headquarters, opinion is divided even among the non-official members of the Council as to the desirability of the proposal. While it is both desirable and necessary that the headquarters should remain much longer at Delhi and that the Simla official season should be shortened along with a considerable curtailment of the exodus expenditure, it is neither advisable nor expedient that the exodus to Simla should altogether cease. The objection to the exodus, it appears to me, is more often sentimental than rational. When exceptional circumstances require it the exodus may temporarily cease at any time.

"If the resolution, Sir, contemplates a change of capital from Delhi, may I venture to ask what becomes of the sanctity of the Royal word in honour and praise of which a loyal resolution was passed unanimously in the Council on the opening day? Was it not after deep deliberation and thoughtful consideration that Delhi was chosen as the new headquarters of the Government of India? For sufficiently good reasons the ancient Hastinapura of the Hindus and the old court of the Moghuls was selected as the prime seat of the British Indian administration. To my mind, new Delhi stands as the symbol of Hindu-Muslim unity. If, however, my Honourable friend desires a change from Delhi on orthodox grounds, I may be permitted to assure him that modern courts are guided by practical politicians and scientific experts, and not by time-serving priests and opportune astrologers. Again, is it reasonable to abandon Delhi, after spending about five and a half crores of the taxpayer's money, more than half the sanctioned total estimate for the new capital? Is there a more suitable centre in Northern India than Delhi where from the frontier policy of the Indian Government can successfully be carried out? Even for political and military or strategic reasons, an Imperial city like Delhi is better fitted to be the seat of the Central Government. Further, none of the provincial capitals can vie with Delhi in historic greatness or political importance. If it is, however, suggested that a new centre should be chosen as the headquarters, it means the re-construction of a new capital on a modern scale, which the present financial condition of India can scarcely allow. Moreover, the re-building of a new headquarters away from Delhi means in one sense the putting off for yet another generation of the political progress of the country. And a frequent change of capital is in itself highly objectionable. For good or evil,—I do hope it is for good,—the seat of the Supreme Government has come to stay at Delhi, and let us all endeavour to make Delhi the worthy capital of the British Indian Empire. For these and other reasons it is out of the question now to think of the change of headquarters from Delhi.

"Even after listening to the various speeches of my Honourable colleagues I feel convinced that a change of headquarters is uncalled for. Almost every provincial capital and a few large cities have been mentioned, and this changing frame of mind of the non-official members is in itself a strong ground that, since there is no unanimity of opinion among themselves as to a suitable centre, no change is needed. Again, the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea pleaded with his characteristic eloquence in favour of Calcutta and said that the India of 1911 is not the India of 1920. Following the same line of argument, I may be permitted to say that the India of 1930 or 1910 will not be the same. So it follows that the capital should change each time that great political changes take place in India. I am not convinced by the force of this argument.

"Lastly, it is expedient that the construction of new Delhi should proceed even more quickly than in the past, and that the coming Budget should allot a substantial amount for the purpose. If the resolution, however, means to suggest that either Delhi or Simla should continue to be the headquarters of the Government throughout the year, it does not look like a feasible or practicable proposal, chiefly owing to climatic conditions. If the resolution is inspired by the Calcutta Anglo-Indian sentiment, it seems to me that no repetition of unsettling a settled fact, as in the case of the partition of Bengal, is possible in the present circumstances of the country, though the coming Royal visit of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales may be looked forward to for the accomplishment of the event. For these reasons I oppose the resolution before the Council."

3-5 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde:—"This Resolution, I think, requires to be re-stated, for this reason that my friend Mr. Sarma, who moved this proposition, fought for there being one capital in which the Government of India would reside for all time. That, I think, was his proposition, and for the rest he mentioned various places, but he did not decide in favour of any of them. In fact he appeared to be entirely impartial; he did not want it to be any particular place, but he wanted it to be in some place where the Government of India would be all through the year. Then my friend, Mr. Chanda, who spoke next proposed an amendment. He agreed that the Government of India should be in one place, but he thought that that one place should be Calcutta. There the matter ended. Afterwards, when Mr. Patel moved an amendment to this Resolution, he agreed that the capital should be in one and the same place where the Government of India should reside all through the year, but he thought that that place should be determined by a Committee of this Council or a Commission, or by some arrangement by which all the opinions and all things would be considered and a suitable place chosen. Then, later, came the amendment of the Hon'ble Mr. Crum and, in order that I may understand it properly, I have embodied it into the original proposition which reads :—

'This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that, if possible, the headquarters of the Government of India be permanently located in one place and that a Committee be appointed to examine that question and to report to the Governor General in Council thereon and generally on the question of the location of the headquarters.'

"I humbly submit that this amendment made a variation. The first proposition it puts in is that it wants to be inquired into whether it is possible that the headquarters of the Government of India be permanently located in one place. 'If possible' means is it possible that the Government of India should be located permanently in one place? Then, if it is possible, Mr. Crum recommends that a Committee be appointed to consider that question and, after considering that question, he wishes that the Committee should generally report on the question of the location of the headquarters, so it introduced a further question into this Resolution, namely, whether it is possible for the Government of India to be in one place, and if it is possible, then the Committee is to make a recommendation and report generally on the question of location. From the discussion that took place on this Resolution I can understand those gentlemen who clearly said 'No, we want Calcutta or nothing less' or those gentlemen who said 'No, Calcutta is not desirable; some other place is better or Delhi is the best'. But some propositions are rather difficult and with your permission I wish briefly to refer to them in order only to indicate the lines along which the voting might take place. My Hon'ble friend Mr. Banerjea said that he supported both the amendments of the Hon'ble Mr. Patel as well as of Mr. Crum's. Now that is not possible, I think, because Mr. Crum introduced one proposition more which Mr. Patel never did, and those two Resolutions are mutually destructive, and, therefore, my friend could not possibly favour both. Then the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri went on to speak, but it appeared to me that he also fell into the trap because these are legal propositions put together in one form so as to lead slightly to different things. However, I do not mean to criticise my Hon'ble colleagues; that is not my function. I wish to submit some considerations of my own, and those considerations have not, unfortunately for me, been discussed here before. The first consideration which I should speak about if I were speaking in court would be that Delhi is in full possession of the status of a capital now, and whoever is in possession, has got nine points of the law in his favour. The burden of proof lies on those who are not in possession, so all those other places, if they were coming as claimants here, would have to fight against Delhi and no burden would lie on Delhi. Then we must consider as to why Delhi was chosen. The Hon'ble the Home Member has told us how it was chosen. He has also kindly pointed out all the advantages of Delhi and the money that has been spent upon it, which, if I understand him aright, amounts to five crores or a little more . . . .'

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Three and a half crores on the new city, I believe."

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde:—"Thank you, Sir. Some such amount has been spent over the capital at Delhi up to the present time. But if for any reason at all, for some cause unknown up to this time but may be disclosed later, if at all it is intended to move the capital from Delhi, then I submit that the claims of the Central Provinces have precedence over everybody else. And why? Why do I say that the Central Provinces claim precedence over every one else? The reason first of all can be found in the name itself. The provinces are called the Central Provinces. Next you have got Pachmarhi there; it was mentioned by some Hon'ble Members, but the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri thought that it should not even be mentioned in this connection though I do not know why he said so. Pachmarhi has got 23 square miles of plateau; it is nice and salubrious, about 3,500 feet above sea level and it is habitable all the year round; there is enough ground for the Government of India to provide a proper capital there, but there is one thing more, and that is this; it has not been mentioned yet. Jubbulpore was mentioned some time ago, but, I believe, it was considered at the time as being likely to be malarious or some such reason; any how its claims were considered and then set aside. Then there is a place called Betul whose claims I would urge here. It has claims on me because it is so near to my own district, and next it has got a large plateau, a very large plateau; it goes right up to Chindwara and there is enough room for the whole city of Delhi being moved bodily to that place. There is any amount of room, and it is very central and its climate is very salubrious. The objection may be advanced against it that there is no public opinion there, that it is not a centre of trade and so on. Well, to that my reply is that this idea of historical associations to begin with need not be taken into a consideration of this question, for the reason that we are now forming a composite nation, such as probably has never been formed before on this globe, except perhaps in the case of the United States of America; there a large number of people from different nationalities and countries came together and agreed to form a government; and what did they do? They did not choose a place for its historical associations, but just a place which would be very convenient for them. The absence of memory was the greatest recommendation to them in that case, because they thought it was best to begin anew without any memories, without any bitterness or pleasure, to start afresh in a new place. It is very plain to understand. From that point of view this place, Betul, which I have in view has got no memories; it will please nobody, it will pain nobody.

"The next objection that was urged is that it would be cut off from the central part of intelligence and public opinion. Well, Washington was chosen for the same purpose; they did not want to be oppressed by theories of politicians and theories of other people and by what is called public opinion; they wanted to sit in a place where they could take everything calmly into consideration and decide properly. Betul would be ideal for that purpose. It is rather difficult to understand what is meant by being cut off from the centre of intelligence and commerce. In these days when we have annihilated space and time, when we can run up trains in no time, and aeroplanes have made matters easier, and there is the telegraph and the wireless which convey news from one corner to another in no time, I believe it is difficult to say that these places are connected with nothing at all; if anything the whole world is being brought together; so there is not much force at least from my point of view in the argument that it is cut off from the centres of commerce and intelligence, because every place is in communication now with every other place. If Delhi is to be changed I believe this place, Betul, would be very good indeed, because we have no marble palaces and sky scrapers and all that sort of thing. We can start in Betul with humbler beginnings as a capital, just as the United States of America did with Washington, with a residence for the President like the White House; we need not have very big buildings, because after all one has got to learn to live simply and naturally; and though these modern things, some of them, may be necessary for the more convenient despatch of office business, still we shall have started a simple capital without the burden of memories, carried out in the simplest way possible and adjoining virgin forests which, I venture to think, is a very great recommendation, because there the officers will have plenty of shooting, and there are tigers and all sorts of wild animals there. It is further very conducive to concentrated thought, because there are no distracting elements there at all. All the officers will be concentrated in their attention to their work and everybody will always be thinking of his own work, which will conduce to efficiency. So taken all together it appears to me, Sir, that if for any reason Delhi is to be abandoned, then the capital of India had better be changed to one of three places, namely, Chikalda which is a sanitarium, Pachmarhi which is also a sanitarium, and last Betul which is to my mind a sort of ideal place. So I personally would support the amendment of Mr. Patel because it concentrates attention upon a place being selected as the permanent seat of the Government of India and its selection being left to a committee who will consider the competing claims of different places and decide. With these words I wish to support the amendment of Mr. Patel and I oppose the amendment of the Hon'ble Mr. Crum."

3-18 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir Zulfikar Ali Khan.—"Sir, this very question was discussed at Simla last Session and I then lodged my strong protest against it. It has now again been discussed here and I here rise to oppose it. The debate on this subject to-day has shown that the Hon'ble representatives from different provinces are trying to pull in their own different directions. This shows that we are still floating in the airy regions of political romanticism. The proposition contained in the resolution automatically resolves itself into two portions, first, the policy of Government as regards the headquarters, secondly, the cost of the move from Delhi to some other place. As regards the policy of Government, I think every right-thinking man will see that if Government change its capital or accept the resolution and change the capital from Delhi to some other place, they will surely be stultifying themselves in the eyes of the public. It will show that when deciding this policy they were not actuated by any consideration of far-sighted statesmanship in that they are so easily persuaded to change the capital again after eight years only. Again, Sir, the solemn policy enunciated by the King-Emperor during the Durbar has every title to the respectful consideration of us all. We cannot lightly set that policy aside.

"That policy was deliberately adopted and carried out and, I think, it shows a lack of perspective on our part again to revise that policy. As regards the cost I think the Hon'ble Members have absolutely ignored the magnitude of the problem; they have ignored the money already invested in Delhi; they are also ignoring the far greater amount of money invested in Simla. What will they do with these buildings at Delhi and Simla if they move to some other place? I cannot understand how any man with any sense of responsibility can try to persuade the Government to forget all that has been accomplished and to go elsewhere. We have heard a panegyric from my friend Mr. S. N. Banerjea and from my friend Mr. Nawaz Bhutto. The one has tried to induce us to look to the charms of Calcutta and the other tries to fascinate us with the sea breezes of Karachi, but all the weight of argument was against them. Mr. Banerjea laid great stress on public opinion, as though the Government of India were living in a wilderness where there was no public voice. Sir Ferozeshah Mehta used to say I remember that public opinion that queen of the world as she is called by classical writers first visited Bombay then having done a round of visits went to pay a visit to Calcutta and after a fortnight or so went further down to Madras, and perhaps after a month reached Simla, so Calcutta was by no means the favourite. Sir, a very important consideration to my mind as regards Delhi is the expanding interest of the Indian Empire, from that point of view it is a most suitable place. We have to remember not only the nearness of Persia but also Mesopotamia, Egypt and other Oriental countries. Can we ignore the magnitude of this interest? Supposing the capital is transferred again to Calcutta, would it be to the interest of the Empire to live in that corner of it and ignore all these expanding interests of this big Empire? Then, again, Sir, as regards the future of India and the policy laid down by His Majesty's Government it is said that after ten years another step will be taken in the direction of her public liberties. If after ten years another measure of reform is granted to India, would it be wise in view of the autonomy granted to provinces for one to be overshadowed by the presence of the Government of India? I believe that this consideration will have great weight with the people who advance the claim of the various provinces. Sir, there is a consideration as to the ruling chiefs who form a most important factor in the polity of the Indian Empire. Would it be convenient for them to go to Calcutta? Most of the States are situated either close to Delhi or in the Punjab, Rajputana and Central India. How can it by any stretch of imagination be said to be convenient for them to go to Calcutta? You cannot ignore that problem either. With these few words, Sir, I beg to oppose the resolution which is before the Council."

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill :—" Sir, I should like to associate myself with the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent in expressing my appreciation of the manner in which the Hon'ble mover of this resolution has presented his case to the Council, and I think I may add, up to a certain point, of the high level of responsibility which inspired most of the speakers in dealing with the various motions which are now before the Council. My Hon'ble friend Mr. Khaparde has done his best to bring a certain element of ridicule to bear upon the proposition. I am not aware whether he did so intentionally or not, but, in spite of that, I regard it as a matter wholly of satisfaction that this very important subject should have come up in debate in the Legislative Council, and I hope that, as the result of certain cold facts which I hope to lay before it, this Council will be persuaded that the resolution is not really of a practical character, and that my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma may even be persuaded to withdraw his motion. In the first place, I should like to draw the attention of Council to the circumstance that they have concentrated practically the whole of their attention upon the question as it affects the future location of the Legislative Council. Now I have the greatest respect for the Council, but I think that every member, at heart, must realize that that is only one aspect of the problem; the larger question really is, where are you going to locate your administrative machine? As an example of the misapprehension arising from a too limited aspect of the question, I may refer perhaps to the suggestion which one Hon'ble Member made, namely that Allahabad should be the capital. I think that the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri made the suggestion, coupling with it the happy inspiration that Parliament should take a holiday when it becomes too hot. But what is going to happen to the administrative machine? Is it to work at high pressure in Allahabad all the year round without a holiday? For that is the meaning of the capital being located at one centre all the year round. I believe that many of the members who have spoken have failed to appreciate the problem which embraces more than the question of the location of the Legislative Assembly. 8-26 P.M.

[Sir Claude Hill.] [18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

"In regard to that point I would like to suggest to the Council that India stands now in a situation of very great responsibility with regard to the future. India is about to enter upon a new and metamorphosed life.

"Now India, it will be conceded I think, has in the past suffered, as compared with her pre-existing greatness, from what, I think, may be justly described as her climatic conditions. It has been the practice in the past to ease off work during the hot weather throughout India, and one reason why the hill-station tradition has sprung up, is that it has not been the practice of the British administration in India to slack off work during the hot weather. Well, in the future, India will not be able to slack off. India will be in competition with the other nations of the world and India will have, year in and year out, month in and month out, and week in and week out, to compete in regard to efficiency with the other nations of the world. She cannot afford in her capital to have periods of slacking off. In other words, if it is a question of India finding one centre for her capital, she must find that centre in a place where there is no question whatever but that work at the highest possible pressure can be conducted throughout the year. It is not merely the question whether the Legislative Council can sit for six months or nine months in the year, but the question is of the administrative machine carrying on at high pressure, and I suggest to this Council that that aspect of the case has not been fully realised.

"Then, Sir, I find it somewhat difficult to follow the reasoning in favour of the different places—I believe 13 in number—which have been suggested as possible capitals. While my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma brought forward several well-reasoned arguments for taking a careful stock of possible alternative sites, and emphasised, quite rightly, the desirability of having one capital, he did not dogmatise as to where that capital should be. But the point I want to make, if I may, Sir, is that the considerations, which have occurred to Mr Sarma and which he put very well, have been the subject of investigation for years past on different occasions and were present to the minds of those who, in 1911, eventually came to the conclusion that Delhi was the best capital to select. In other words, the possibility of selecting some alternative place to Delhi has been very carefully, from time to time, gone into, and it is significant that there is not one single alternative, among the 13 places that have been suggested in this Chamber, which is a possible capital from the point of view of work and residence throughout the year. That, I think, would be the unanimous conclusion, assuming that a committee were appointed of the different members composing it, with the exception, possibly, of the individuals representing the provinces who thought they had provincial claims to advocate.

"But I should like to turn to another aspect of the problem which, I feel certain, has not been appreciated by the speakers hitherto; although it was referred to by my Hon'ble friend Nawab Sir Zulfikar Ali Khan; that is, it has been assumed that the question is merely one of scrapping the $3\frac{1}{2}$ crores of direct expenditure on new Delhi or an aggregate of $5\frac{1}{2}$ crores on Delhi including the new city improvement of scrapping that and going somewhere else and building a new city. That is very far from being the case. It will amount to tens and tens of crores to scrap what exists at the present time in Simla and to reproduce it elsewhere. One of the reasons why the existence of the capital at Delhi is compatible with a certain measure of economy is that, so long as the capital is at Delhi, in close contiguity with Simla, it may be practicable and possible for Army Headquarters to continue to have their head offices at Simla all the year round. I doubt very much whether, if one of the more distant places mentioned to-day were selected as the capital, Simla could continue as the centre for Army Headquarters. The result would be that in the new capital provision would have to be made, which has not been made at Delhi at present, for the construction of buildings for the whole of Army Headquarters while incurring enormous loss on account of the capital sunk in Simla. There is also the question of the Kalka-Simla Railway. That is the property of the State. I only mention it as a further item which has been omitted from the calculation. But what will happen to the Kalka-Simla Railway if Simla were abandoned? It will certainly cease to be a valuable asset to the tax-payer. So that when it comes to the question of considering the interests of the tax-payer, as has been rightly suggested as one of the points of view by the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri, I venture to assert that the consideration of the tax-payer compels us practically to abandon the thought of the other alternative capitals, seeing that these alternatives must involve enormously increased expenditure as compared with that on New Delhi.

[18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Sir Claude Hill.]

"Then, Sir, in regard to some of the alternatives suggested, I think it is not altogether irrelevant to indicate, especially with reference to the very concrete proposition of Calcutta, what would be involved, or some part of what would be involved, by any question of going back there. In New Delhi we have acquired land for the new city at an all-round rate of Rs. 123 an acre. I am not in a position to say precisely what the outlay for a revised capital of the Government of India in Calcutta would mean. Calcutta's congestion has already been referred to. A very considerable area would be required within Calcutta, and even if we take the cost of land to be acquired at the very moderate figure of 5 lacs an acre against Rs. 123, we shall not be exaggerating the relative cost per acre for the acquisition of the requisite properties in Calcutta; and, I think, the Hon'ble Mr. Crum would be the first to admit that there is no room whatever for the Government of India at present there, nor does there exist the requisite space for their accommodation. This would have to be acquired and provided.

"Well, Sir, that will give some indication to Hon'ble Members of the relative cost of acquiring land for the location of the Government of India in Calcutta and in Delhi. Then, as compared with another alternative, which had its attractions to my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma, I can tell him that the cost of acquiring land at Dehra Dun, which he suggested, would approximate to Rs. 400 an acre. The acquisition of land at Dehra Dun, requisite for the accommodation of the Government of India, will have to be approximately on the same level as the area acquired in New Delhi, and the cost in the former case would have been one crore and forty lakhs as against 35 lakhs.

"Then, Sir, the Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy indicated quite clearly that, for his part, if it were possible for the Government of India to have their headquarters at Delhi for a considerable period, he suggested some seven or eight months in the year, then he was quite clearly of opinion that the Government ought to remain at Delhi and Simla. Well, I may tell him that the policy is to organise, at the earliest possible moment, a residence in Delhi from the 15th of October to the 15th of April in each year, and when conditions in New Delhi have reached the stage of comfortable and complete accommodation, I have no doubt that the question of extending that period will be further considered.

"Now, Sir, there was one quotation which the Hon'ble Mr Crum made from Lord Curzon which, I think, carries with it its own refutation. If I heard him correctly—I was unable to verify it—Lord Curzon expressed his dismay at the effect of the move from Calcutta on commerce. Well, Sir, I would ask the Hon'ble Mr. Crum whether that vaticination on the part of Lord Curzon has been fulfilled. The Hon'ble Mr. Crum also implied that he was not aware what official opinion was in regard to this question of the move. I am not in a better position to reply on that point than my Hon'ble friend Sir William Vincent, who has already indicated what the official view is in regard to our commitment based on His Majesty's proclamation; but if I may add my own personal view on the subject, it is that I cannot help feeling that the objections which have in some quarters grown up to Delhi are very largely due to a sense of impatience at the discomforts incidental to the delay in the provision of accommodation in the new city. Such discomforts are an inevitable accompaniment of any such movement. They are inevitable for those who have to live under canvas for so many years. It is hard on them that instead of the fleshpots of Calcutta they should have to live in a dusty plain in tents which become very hot in the month of March. I think that is human nature to entertain this feeling of impatience, but, I think, we may very well bear in mind that after all that is only a temporary ill which has been prolonged very greatly owing to the war; and that with the return of peace we shall be able to get on with the completion of Delhi far more rapidly; and I hope I am justified in believing that three or four years hence, when comfortable houses and accommodation have been provided for Hon'ble Members and for other residents in Delhi for the cold weather, the view taken with regard to this will be a very different one from that which has found expression on the part of some Hon'ble Members to-day. But I do suggest very strongly that that point of view is an additional reason why this Council should not commit itself to suggesting a re-consideration of this policy at the present juncture.

"And that brings me to my Hon'ble friend Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea's reference to this assembly as a dying legislature. That seems to me to be the final reason, if I may say so, why we should not enter upon an inquiry of this kind. Again, the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri referred to this as being an opportune moment, when the constitution of India is undergoing a change, for considering the question of a change of venue. I suggest to this Council that, on the contrary, it was the change of venue to Delhi—this has already been hinted at by the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent—which as a matter of fact gave the stimulus, and was indeed accompanied by an indication of the intention to inquire into reforms and political changes for India which have since matured.

"In conclusion, Sir, I would only add this. It has been rather a surprise to me, I confess, to find so very little reference made in connection with the present debate to the existence of a national spirit in India. My Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma did mention that this was a matter which must be considered in connection with this question, but he rather put it aside as one on which too great stress should not be laid. But, Sir, I do suggest that it is a very important matter. It seems to me a very vital matter. India is about now, as I have already said, to enter upon a new existence as we hope, a homogeneous nationality, politically speaking at all events. Surely, it is not irrelevant, when selecting a capital, to have regard to the glory, the traditions and the heroes of the past; and to take those things into consideration when deciding upon what is the most appropriate location of the new national capital? Now, I think, it is incontrovertible that, from that point of view, there is only one city in India which can in any sense appeal as a national capital, at all events to the great majority of the races which inhabit India. Who in Madras has ever heard of Ranchi? Without any disrespect to Ranchi, I still believe that Ranchi is unknown historically. Who has heard of Betul or any of these other places? Surely this is a consideration? I confess it is a consideration which I should have thought would have carried great weight. Muhammadan and Hindu tradition both centred in Delhi in the past, and I can think of no other capital which, from that standpoint, can in any way fulfil the prime requirements of a political capital. I think, Sir, in those circumstances, it is a matter for some surprise that, with the advent of political nationality, that aspect of the case should not have carried greater weight in this Council. But I do hope, I do suggest that it should be given weight, and that due weight will also be given to the reasons which have been urged by Sir William Vincent for not pressing upon this Council the resolution and the amendments which have been put forward to-day."

3-18 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha :—"Sir, I have very carefully listened to the various speakers and their reasons for urging a change of capital and for appointing a committee, but I do not know what even a committee can do. I was at first in favour of appointing a committee in the terms of Mr. Crum's amendment, but after hearing the very weighty arguments urged both by the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent and the Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill, I am strongly of opinion that a committee at this stage will do no good. We may as well have 12 Diogeneses with 12 lighted candles in their hands going through the whole of India from east to west and north to south to find a place where the Government could remain throughout the year. I am afraid they would not find it Taking into consideration the climatic conditions in the different provinces and also the other elements and factors mentioned, namely, of commerce and the public generally and one thing and another, I suppose it would be an ideal place if these 12 Diogeneses could ever find it, where the capital might be permanently located. I think the reason urged by Sir Claude Hill in his preliminary statement was exceedingly sound.. The Legislative Council holds a somewhat subordinate position. We have to look, as far as all-India capital is concerned, to a place where what is called administrative machinery might be located—the administrative machinery, from where all branches of administration might radiate in such a way as to bring about the largest amount of efficiency. That place, of course, as Sir Claude Hill has said, is Delhi, particularly having regard to the military branch. I think Hon'ble Members should take into consideration that this military branch cannot be forgotten.

"In fact it is a most important branch and is going to be the most important branch of our future administrative machinery taking into consideration the political conditions of Central Asia and of the Near East. That being so, I do hope that my friend Mr. Sarma and my friends Mr. Crum and Mr Patel will very seriously consider, as Sir Claude Hill has suggested, whether each and every one of them ought not to withdraw their respective Resolution and amendments. As every one knows, history does not furnish examples of capitals being removed so often as our Indian capital is now sought to be removed. I want to know—perhaps some of my Hon'ble friends on the opposite side who are more experts in this line than any of us will instruct me—whether in the history of the world, say, in Europe or Asia or America or South Africa or elsewhere, capitals have been removed from one locality to another in the way suggested in this Council? Has London been remained ever since the time it was called Londonium ? Has Paris been removed ? Has Rome, which is always called the Eternal City, been removed ? Has Constantinople been removed for centuries past ? Again, take Moscow. It is true that St. Petersburg became the seat of Government in Russia some 200 years ago, but still Moscow was always recognised as the capital of Russia. As far as Washington was concerned, it was chosen haphazardly and has remained where it is. If India were like the United States and if some place had been haphazardly fixed round which might have grown great centres of interests to make a capital as suitable as Washington, say, commercial, political, engineering, technical and all other interests, it might have been a different thing. But I think, Sir, that as far as Delhi is concerned, it will happen like this that, were the Government to continue to remain in Delhi, perhaps, in the next ten years or more, you will see a vast city growing up ; and as Delhi is a distributing centre, for commerce, public opinion and many other interests would be found to grow round about it, and in that way the capital will grow. I think, my friend, the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea and others should congratulate themselves on the fact that, after all, that Delhi was the right place to go to for the capital.

"We have also to consider the question of finance. Suppose, you remove the capital from Delhi, and suppose you fix upon some other place. What will happen? You will have to build another capital at perhaps double the number of crores for which we are going to build Delhi. Where will the money come from ? Here we are entering upon the Reform era, and as soon as the new Councils are formed, what will happen ? They will say expenditure on 'education shall be so many crores, for sanitation so many more crores, and on new buildings so many other crores ! 'Well, when all those crores are counted up and totalled together, I should like to know from my friends how are they going to adjust their Budget, and how are they going to balance the expenditure with the revenue ? That is a rather serious question. Could a loan of 100 crores be raised ? The question which would then arise will be whether you would be able to provide the annual interest charge thereon? All these are very grave and serious financial questions, apart from the pivotal question to which I have already referred, namely, the necessity of a central place where the administrative machinery could be suitably located. As I said in the beginning, I was previously in favour of having a Committee; but after having heard both the Hon'ble Members on behalf of Government I think, Sir, that on the whole it would be far better to allow Delhi to develop to evolve itself rather than abandon it. In ten or perhaps twenty years the evolution will, I am of opinion, be so great that we ourselves will be astonished at it if we survive till that time. My optimism on this evolution is great. In the circumstances I consider that this matter had better be left alone. Let Delhi rise and let it be a new Delhi of even greater historical importance than the Delhi of the past. That being my opinion, I entirely agree with the Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill, that my friends the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma, the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda, the Hon'ble Mr. Patel and the Hon'ble Mr. Crum would do well to withdraw their respective Resolution and amendments."

3-56 P.M. The Hon'ble Raja Sir Rampal Singh:—"Mr. Vice-President, I feel unable to support the resolution moved by my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma. It is no good now to question the title or the privilege of Delhi to remain the headquarters of the Government of India. With all its shortcomings Delhi has a peculiar fascination for itself in the hearts of the Indian people in general, and no logic can convince them of the necessity or the desirability to dislodge it from the position which it has re-occupied after a long interval. Its hoary traditions of pre-historic times when the Hindus held the undisputed sovereignty over this vast land, its pre-eminence and greatness during the Muhammadan rule and not the least the well-deserved recognition of its superiority and suitability for all ceremonial functions during the British rule; all these and several other considerations have combined to impart to it an historic importance and reverence which cannot be claimed by any city or town in India. Then, again, I may remind the Council that the seat of the Government of India was changed from Calcutta to Delhi by Royal Proclamation, and the King-Emperor himself was graciously pleased to lay the foundation of the new city and to proclaim it as the Capital of India. Shall we go behind that Proclamation and select a new Capital? There is something of sacredness and sanctity attached to that Proclamation and to this city, and, I think, it is improper and unbecoming now to open that question. I admit that public opinion was not consulted when the seat of the Government was changed. I admit the change was so sudden and unexpected that nobody amongst the un-official classes could have a say in the matter. But that matters little now and, unless the extreme necessity of a re-change of the capital be established, I for one do not see my way to think it worthwhile to raise that subject for discussion. Moreover, apart from these considerations which my friend may set aside as sentimental, a large amount of expenditure has already been sunk over this new capital, and would it be in keeping with economy to let that expenditure go for nothing, and to begin anew our activities for the foundation of another capital. None can deny the fact that the geographical position of Delhi is not central, but on that account only it should not be discarded and a new seat selected in its place. Are all seats of Government in the world at central places? I think not. My Hon'ble friend Mr. Sastri has suggested Allahabad as one central place to which the seat of the Government might be transferred. If convenience is the only criterion in the decision of this question, the change would be quite welcome to the people of the United Provinces, but the question ought to be adjudged from a higher standard than that of convenience. The saving of a few hours journey is not such as to warrant a change of such magnitude.

"Great stress has been laid that the seat of the Government of India should be at a place where they might be more amenable to public opinion and where it could be exercised with greater ease and feasibility. No one can question the correctness or the soundness of this view. But such public opinion should not be of one place or locality, but it should be an all India public opinion because the Government of India have their jurisdiction not over one province or locality, but over the whole of India. They have to guide and mould their policy in the interests of the whole of India, and this will not be achieved if the seat will be shifted to Calcutta or Bombay or Karachi. In the end I take very strong exception to the observations that have fallen from the lips of the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri to the effect that Sir Harcourt Butler has changed the capital of the United Provinces from Allahabad to Lucknow. Nothing of the kind. His Honour left the question of the building of the Council Chamber in the hands of the non-official members of the Council and they decided the matter by an overwhelming majority in favour of Lucknow. The development of Lucknow does not in any way commit the Government on the question of the capital of that province and the remarks that were made were uncalled for."

The Hon'ble Mr. W. E. Crum:—"Sir, the Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy, in addressing you, spoke of the Hon'ble Mr. Surendranath Banerjea's speech as honest in that it clearly designated that he wished to return to Calcutta. He was comparing my speech with that of Mr. Banerjea and, therefore, I suppose, he considered that my speech was not honest. . . . 4 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy:—"Sir, I never meant that."

The Hon'ble Mr. W. E. Crum:—"Well, Sir, I purposely did not make any reference to Calcutta or any other place as a suggested capital, and I did so, because I thought that if the Government accepted the suggestion that a committee be appointed, that committee would consider the question where the capital should be. But, Sir, since the Government do not wish to appoint this committee, and since every other gentleman in this Council has, I think, suggested some place as a capital, I would like to say one or two words on this subject. Now, Sir, I consider that the return of the Government to Calcutta as a capital is impossible. I have thought that matter out very carefully and we have discussed it in Calcutta in our Chamber Committee, and that is the conclusion that we have come to. I cannot quite agree with Sir Claude Hill's estimate of five lakhs an acre. I think he has added an extra 'o' on somewhere, that is to say, for land which can be acquired somewhere outside Calcutta for the creation of a new capital. But there is a serious consideration now, in that we have a Governor; and that the Presidency Councils will assume greater importance as the years go on, and, therefore, I do not see that it is feasible to bring the Government of India back to Calcutta. But, since many other suggestions have been made, I would like to make one myself. It is a suggestion that has been made before and the objects of this suggestion are two; first, to curtail, if possible, the expenditure on Delhi. and secondly, to as much as possible bring the Government of India into association with public opinion. As long ago, as February 1912, the Bengal Chamber suggested that the capital of India should be located in Simla, and that the ceremonial capital of India should be at Delhi; that the work of the Legislative Councils should be undertaken in Simla in the hot weather, say, between the months of March and October, and that during the cold weather months the Government of India, that is to say, His Excellency the Viceroy and Members of the Executive Council, and, I hope, the Secretaries to Government, should make it their business to travel in India and visit all the large Presidency towns. Now, Sir, Sir Claude Hill has made a great point of the fact that it is very necessary that the administrative part of the Government should be in the most suitable place, and it is possible that it may be objected that Simla would not be a suitable place. Well, we have already been told that the Army Department does remain in Simla all the year round, that is to say, the machine of the Army Department remains in Simla all the year round. If that is so, I think it would be possible for the machine of Government to remain there all the year round, and I merely put this forward as a suggestion to be considered, because, I understand that Government are considering various suggestions that have been put forward. It would have this great advantage, Sir, that the expenditure on Delhi itself could be enormously curtailed, and that the Government of India will, in the cold weather months, be brought into contact with opinion throughout India.

"As regards my amendment, Sir, I can quite understand that the Government are unable to accept it; I see their position, in that they are a Government under another Government and under His Majesty the King, and therefore they cannot accept a resolution which deals with an announcement made by His Majesty the King. We have their assurance that they will consider the various points which have been brought up to-day, and therefore, Sir, I would ask your leave to withdraw the amendment which I have proposed to the resolution."

The amendment was, by leave of the Council, withdrawn.

4-6 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel :—"Sir, I wish I could follow suit and withdraw my amendment The main reason why my friend, the Hon'ble Mr. Crum, was inclined to withdraw his amendment, and did actually withdraw it, was that he saw constitutional difficulties in the way of Government accepting his amendment. He thought that this Government was under another Government and therefore it was not possible for it to accept the resolution. Well, I am afraid, I cannot take the same view as he takes. As a matter of fact, there is nothing to prevent this Council from making a representation to the Government under which this Government is. All that this Council, by passing this resolution, and the Government by accepting it, would be doing would be to make a representation to the British Government and to His Majesty the King-Emperor that under the changed circumstances, it would be desirable, in the interests of the people of India, to change the Capital. After all, as has been observed during the debate, the King does no wrong; the King is a constitutional Monarch and he acts on the advice of his Ministers, and it is the duty of this Council, I think, and of the Government to lay the facts of the case before His Majesty's advisers in order that those advisers may see their way to advise His Majesty to re-consider the position in the light of the discussion that has taken place. It is wrong to give up the cause we have taken up in despair on the ground that constitutionally there is some objection. There is in fact no such objection. I think it is our duty to place our views before His Majesty, otherwise he cannot know, and will never know, that we are suffering. The facts are quite clear, there are many Hon'ble Members of this Council and, as my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Crum, has told us, including among them a good many officials feel the position, they think there ought to be a change, that it was a mistake to have the capital in Delhi, and if that is so, why should we on alleged constitutional grounds keep quiet and not say anything about the matter? The reply of the Hon'ble the Home Member is entirely on a wrong basis. Both my friend Mr. Sarma's resolution and my amendment do not really debar the possibility of having the capital in Delhi. We do not for a moment suggest that; we want you to be in one place all the year round. If you could do that, in Delhi, stick to Delhi; we do not for a moment suggest that you should go out of Delhi. All that we say is, have the capital or the headquarters of the Government of India in one place. Do not run about from place to place. Do not go to Simla. That is our principal objection. If you can all the year round stay in Delhi, as two hundred thousand people stay and live all the year round, if you can do that, by all means keep your headquarters in Delhi. What we object to is the Government of India going about from place to place Very recently the President of the all-India Moderate Conference Sir S. Iyer, remarked that the disturbances in the Punjab would not have taken the serious form they did had the Government of India been on the plains. Public opinion is decisive on this question. You must also be prepared to face the fact that after twelve months you' will have Resolutions coming in over and over again dealing with this question. It will then be more and more difficult and intricate as the time passes, and the best thing is to solve the question now before it is too late. I, therefore, trust, that my amendment will be accepted. As I have said it does not exclude the consideration of the headquarters of the Government of India being at Delhi."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda:—" Sir, I desired by the amendment which I submitted that the matter should be investigated and the claims of Calcutta be again re-considered. Well, since the speeches made and since the withdrawal of Mr. Crum's amendment the principle has somewhat shifted. I deliberately did not ask for a Committee but prayed that the matter should be carefully investigated. I am glad to hear from the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent that to some extent he will accept that suggestion. We desire that our views in this matter should be placed before the Home Government for consideration. So far as Delhi is concerned, I think this debate has shown that the great majority of non-officials are in favour of leaving Delhi. I think very few of my official colleagues have tried to defend the claims of Delhi, and what is more my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Crum, has openly challenged the Government to deny the fact that official members in their individual capacity are in agreement with the plan. I read in the Englishman of the 14th February the following passage :— 4-12 P.M.

' From expressions of opinion made in private by members of the Government here in India, and in England, it is perfectly clear that there is no whole-hearted defender left of Lord Hardinge's silly policy. It is pathetic to see the Viceroy and his Council paying periodical prolonged visits to Calcutta and tearfully complaining, by way of apology, for the mistakes committed, that they have no abiding place where public opinion can assist them. '

" The whole article is worth perusal. It is clear that the official members in their individual capacity are in agreement with the views I submitted to the Council. We know that officials are bound to oppose, the first article in their creed is belief in the infallibility of official wisdom and decision. What is, is for the best and must not be disturbed at the instance of non-official opposition. We have had an instance of this before, when in 1904 the Bengal partition was being considered it was said Bengal was too much overgrown and was too big a charge for one ruler. Indian opposition suggested the creation of an Executive Council to give relief to the Government. Government poohpoohed the idea. They said it is unthinkable that there should be an Executive Council, that Orientals preferred a one-man rule. The partition then took place and seven years later when Calcutta was to be abandoned the Government of India had no difficulty in demonstrating the excellence of Council Government. As regards my motion I did not seriously expect that it would be accepted by Government at once. What I submit is that the Government of India should submit our views to the Home Government. When the Government proposed the change of Capital, it is well known, that there was great reluctance on the part of the India Office and that its consent was only given when it was said that His Majesty had consented to the proposal. I think the matter should be re-considered.

" My Hon'ble friend Mr. Crum has discussed the grounds given in the Despatch . . . . .

The Hon'ble Mr. A. P. Muddiman:—" I rise to a point of order. Is it permissible, Sir, for a Member to make a second general speech when replying on his amendment?"

[The Vice-President; Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda; Sir Claude Hill; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.] [18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

The Vice-President:—"If I could hear all that the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda was saying I should probably have stopped him. I will only now say that the Hon'ble Member must confine his reply to his amendment and must refer to nothing oustside it."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda:—"Sir, with regard to the opposition to my amendment, it was firstly on the ground of cost and, secondly, that it was an act of His Majesty the King-Emperor. Now with regard to the question of cost, I submit, Sir, my Hon'ble friend Mr. Crum has shown that the argument is the other way. No doubt, we have spent five crores on New Delhi, but if you are going to complete the capital on the scale contemplated, you will have to spend many more crores to make it complete, whereas if you remove the capital to Calcutta, only a small fraction of it will be needed because the old Government of India offices will be available there. They remain practically unused, there is the Belvedere, the Victoria Memorial Hall and other large buildings which could very well be used for offices . .

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill:—"Am I in order, Sir, in merely stating that the Hon'ble Member is stating diametrically the opposite of what the Hon'ble Member stated?"

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda:—"I think, Sir, the Hon'ble Mr. Crum said that at least 10 crores of rupees will be required to complete the New Delhi, and I say only a small fraction would be needed if the Government of India is removed to Calcutta.

"Then with regard to the argument that it was an act of His Majesty the King, may I point out, Sir, that you have already shifted the foundation which was laid by His Majesty the King-Emperor, several miles distant. Of course, as has been rightly said by one of the previous speakers, His Majesty acted on the advice of his advisers, and if His Majesty is now advised by his Ministers that a mistake has been done in not consulting popular opinion and that the mistake has been found out after some years' experience, if His Majesty is advised to undo what he has done, there is an unique opportunity now because His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales who is coming out to India can rectify the mistake if a message is sent with him. These are my grounds for placing this amendment before this Council, but as my Hon'ble friend Sir William Vincent has given some indication that the matter will be investigated, I beg leave to withdraw my amendment."

The amendment was by leave of the Council withdrawn.

4-20 P.M. The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"Sir, I must cordially appreciate the very satisfactory manner in which my Hon'ble Colleagues have generally tried to approach the problem, and I am extremely thankful to the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent for his promise to place the whole discussion before His Excellency the Viceroy to see if the Government of India can consider the question. I could not help regretting, however, that he did not leave the choice to the official members to vote as they pleased, because, after all, a resolution of this Council is only a recommendation which the Government may or may not accept and the Government need not pledge themselves beforehand to accept any recommendation, and I have not asked that the Government should accept the Resolution; but however let that pass.

"I am thankful to the Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill for the importance he has attached to the debate and for the manner in which he tried to approach the question. We are fundamentally opposed to one another on a question of principle, and therefore there cannot be much agreement between him and me. He looks upon the future Legislative Councils and the work which they would have to perform in the future, remote and near, as not of such great importance as the work which the administrative machine would have to perform . . . . .

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill :—"I should like to explain, Sir, that I said nothing whatever to indicate that the work of the future Councils would be of less significance."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—"I am glad that there is not much difference after all between Sir Claude Hill and myself. Well, I did make the mistake, if it was a mistake, in thinking that he was of opinion the Legislative Councils were a matter of comparatively less significance than the machinery of administration. I am glad to be told that it is not so

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill :—"I drew no comparison at all."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—"Well, Sir, I think and I ask this Council to consider also whether it is not so, that the real work of the Government of India would have to be performed by the Legislative Councils of the future, that the policy which has to determine the conduct of the administration would be largely in their hands, that minute control over the details of administration would be exercised by the Committees of the whole Council ; and the real factors which would determine the situation hereafter would be not so much, as I have put already,—the convenience or efficiency of the administrative machine, though they would also count, as the facility for members to meet and consider carefully the various problems so as to arrive at correct conclusions. That is the reason why I tried to show that while Delhi would be convenient only to about 30 or 35 out of 100 members at the most and a population of 60 millions, any other centre like Ranchi in Bihar or a place in the Central Provinces would be convenient to 65 representatives and 150 to 200 millions of people in British India ; and consequently both from the point of view of the representatives of the people and of the people themselves, Delhi is comparatively ill-suited for the purposes we have in view. Of course, if we are to have two capitals and Simla is to be one of them, then I do not think the proposition would admit of much controversy. The second capital may be Delhi, it does not make any difference whether we travel twelve hours more or less, but if it is the convenience of the people, and the Members of the Legislative Councils that is to count in the future, then I submit there is no alternative left to us but to consider as to whether we should not shift to another centre before a large expenditure of money is incurred either at Delhi or Simla, or at both places. Here it is, I cannot help thinking, that Sir William Vincent very adroitly confused the issues and tried to show that my proposition was not entitled to as much support as otherwise it might be. He said that I pleaded to a certain extent the claims of Ranchi from the climatic point of view. Sir William Vincent did not seem to take any very great objection to Ranchi being a place suitable for work practically all the year round, but then he naively asked where is public opinion to be had at Ranchi ? Where are the leading men in commerce, in law, in administration of justice and so on to help us ? Ranchi is in the midst of Chota Nagpur, it is in the midst of wild tribes practically that we are to be settled ; and therefore the suggestion is that Ranchi need not be considered. I put it to the Council that we have to come to some determination on one or two points. Are we in fixing our capital to have regard to the existence of public opinion and the locality being a commercial centre, or are we to have regard to the fact that it is salubrious all the year round so that the administrative machine can work efficiently, that people can visit the place easily and Members do their work in the Legislative Councils with ease and comfort? If the claims of public opinion and commerce are to find favour then we have no option but to choose Calcutta, Bombay, or Allahabad, but if we are deliberately to shut our eyes to their importance and have regard to other considerations, then certainly nothing can be said against Ranchi or a place in the Central Provinces. Ranchi is admittedly very salubrious because it is the summer headquarters of a responsible Government just as Pachmarhi is of the Central Provinces. Therefore, from the point of view of climate and central position, there is nothing to be said against either of these places, and as public opinion is not to be a very great or relevant factor, I submit that the arguments proceeded upon a confusion of the issues involved.

"Then we are not very much worse off at Ranchi or in any of these places because there is not much of public opinion either at Simla or Delhi. From the central position they command, from the point of view of the convenience of the people and their representatives, coupled with salubrity either of these places has superior claims and neither of them is inferior in any way to Simla or Delhi. I think the argument is therefore in favour of changing the venue from Delhi. But it is asked, are we not to attach importance to historical considerations? Historical considerations, I have already argued in the beginning, have their own importance, but this is an age of democracy, and this is an age when time is of some consideration and not as in the past. Therefore, whether a member has to travel for two or three days unnecessarily to reach the capital is a point worthy of some consideration and will become one of greater importance according as the people become a little richer, more business-like and educated. I therefore submit, Sir, that nothing has been really shown against the possibility of our fixing a single locality for our capital as we can find many places which have a salubrious climate all the year round and are central. The only difficulty would be one of cost. I have already advanced my arguments in regard to that and I shall not repeat them.

"One word, sir, with regard to administrative efficiency. Are not the commercial firms and other large business-houses especially those of Europeans in Madras, Bombay, and Calcutta carrying on work all through the year? Do you think that there would be such a serious lack of efficiency by reason of the capital being situated at one of the commercial centres? I respectfully submit not.

"Then there are one or two matters that I would like to advert to. I am sorry that my friend Sir Umar Hayat Khan has chosen to bring down the level of the debate somewhat. He has of course judged things by his own standard, and very naturally too, and brought in the question of Bengalee and Madrasee clerks as against the claims of the Punjabi clerks. I submit, Sir, that there is not a single official or clerk belonging to my community in the Government of India and I, at any rate, may be said to be impartial in this matter.

"Then coming to the question as to whether personal convenience darkly hinted at was not a factor which influenced me in drafting the Resolution; it would have been unnecessary but for the seriousness of this subject, for me to allude to it, but I may say that I gave notice of a similar Resolution in Simla on this matter. I love a hill climate and own some small property in a hill station and every year resort to it. Therefore it is not because I do not like a cold climate that I choose to bring forward this Resolution, but I do so in the interests of future good government of the whole of India. I am extremely sorry to have had to enter into such an explanation and would not have done so but for the fact that the personal element has been imported into the debate.

[18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma; Sir William Vincent; The Vice-President.]

"There is another consideration which seems to be pressing very heavily on Mr. Sinha and others, and that is whether Bihar would not again be united to the Bengal Province if Delhi is not to be the capital inasmuch as the whole scheme hangs together. I think that is a misapprehension and I do not think there is any one who would suggest for a moment that if the capital is to go elsewhere, Bihar should again be united with Bengal and 80 millions of people be put under one Government. I think, therefore, that such considerations need not weigh with members in arriving at a solution of this problem. I submit, Sir, that this is a question of supreme importance for the future, though not of the immediate present or future, and has a great bearing on the success of the Reforms Scheme. Sir William Vincent and Sir Claude Hill were right in a certain sense in saying that this is a matter which it would be competent for the future Councils to deal with rather than this expiring Council. But if I do not rest satisfied with the assurance of Sir William Vincent that he will place the matter before the Council, and if I do not withdraw my resolution, it is not because I think any very great purpose will be served by pressing it, but it is with the purpose of showing that this is a live issue, that it is an issue about which I am optimistic, that it is an issue which can admit of only one solution, and that in my favour and with a view to not weakening the result of that issue, I regret I cannot withdraw the resolution."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Sir, I have very little to say in reply. I should like however to state in answer to Mr Patel that I do not think he was putting the position very fairly when he said he had not excluded Delhi as a possible location to be chosen for the Government of India by the Committee. He has suggested one capital for all the year round, and it is well known, and it has been stated often in this Council from time to time, that Delhi is not a possible place for the location of the Government of India throughout the year. That is generally admitted, and it was perhaps a little disingenuous to suggest that Mr. Patel had not contemplated the exclusion of Delhi altogether. 4-31 P.M.

"I do not know if I am in order in referring to Mr. Chanda's remarks? He made a long speech on his amendment before he withdrew it . . . .

The Vice-President :—" I think the Hon'ble Member must confine himself to the matter before the Council. "

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Very well, Sir. The only other matter then to which I wish to refer, is the undertaking which I gave in respect of this Resolution. It is important that I should make my position quite clear on the point, if I have not done so before. Mr. Sarma suggested that I have said I would bring this question before the Council; other Hon'ble Members seem to think I had promised it would be placed before the Secretary of State in England. These are undertakings which I have not given. What I did say, and I repeat it now, was that I would cause the papers of this debate to be put before His Excellency in order that he may decide what, if any, further action is necessary. That is in accordance with the practice. In the circumstances, I hope that the Council will not ask this Government which has frequently been reproached as bureaucratic, to exercise an arbitrary power in removing a capital much in the manner adopted by one of the old Pathan Emperors; and that they will not press us to do that which we do not consider in present circumstances consistent with our duty vis-a-vis His Majesty's Government."

[Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur.] 18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Patel's amendment was put and the Council divided as follows :—

The amendment was, therefore, negatived.

The original Resolution was then put and declared to be lost.

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur :—"I ask for a division".

[18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.] [The Vice-President.]

The Vice-President:—"The Council will divide by a show of hands."

A show of hands resulted in 5 being in favour of the Resolution.

The Vice-President:—"I do not think I need count those against the Resolution".

The Council then adjourned till Thursday, the 19th instant, at 11 o'clock.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Rainfall summary for the seven days ending at 8 hrs. on Thursday, the 26th February 1920, based on the Indian Daily Weather Reports of the period.

1. The disturbance which appeared in northwest India on the 16th February persisted till the morning of the 26th, but was, on the whole, feeble; it caused fairly heavy snow in Kashmir, but outside that area, the rain or snow due to the disturbance was mostly light, and was confined to Baluchistan, the North-West Frontier Province and the north Punjab. A few falls of rain occurred also in Lower Burma.

2. Burma.—There were moderate falls of rain at Victoria Point and Mergui during the period 22nd to 24th. There was no rain during the week in Upper Burma.

Northeast India, including Orissa.—Rain in this area was limited to a few light falls in Assam on the 20th.

The United Provinces, Central India and the Central Provinces.—Weather was dry.

Northwest India.—Rain or snow was nearly general in Kashmir on the 22nd and 23rd; it was local in Baluchistan on the 19th, in the North-West Frontier Province on the 22nd, and in Kashmir on the 24th and 25th. A few falls occurred in Kashmir on the 19th, in Baluchistan on the 20th and 22nd, in the north Punjab on the 22nd, and in the North-West Frontier Province on the 23rd.

The Peninsula.—Weather was dry except for a light fall at Negapatam on the 19th.

3. The chief amounts of rainfall reported were as follows :—

February	19th.	Sonamarg 0·20″ and Chaman 0·19″.
,,	20th.	Chaman 0·12″.
,,	22nd.	Victoria Point 0·73″, Mergui 0·32″, Murree 0·25″, Sonamarg 1·09″, Dras 0·72″, Chaman 0·24″ and Parachinar 0·65″.
,,	23rd.	Mergui 1·32″, Sonamarg 1·22″ and Dras 1·75″
,,	24th.	Dras 0·95″ and Sonamarg 0·58″.
,,	25th.	Sonamarg 1·02″.

4. The week's rainfall was 20 per cent or more in excess in the Bay Islands, Lower Burma and Kashmir, and was 20 per cent or more in defect in Upper Burma, Assam, Bengal, Orissa, Chota Nagpur, Bihar, the United Provinces, the Punjab, the North-West Frontier Province, Baluchistan, Sind, Rajputana East, Central India, the Central Provinces, Berar, Hyderabad, Malabar, Madras Southeast and the north Madras coast. No rain falls at this time of the year in Rajputana West, Gujarat, the Konkan, the Bombay and Madras Deccans and Mysore.

The rainfall from the 28th November to date is 20 per cent or more in defect in Assam, Orissa, Chota Nagpur, Bihar, the United Provinces, Baluchistan, Sind, Rajputana West, Central India East and the Central Provinces East, and is 20 per cent or more in excess in the Bay Islands, Burma, the Punjab Southwest, the North-West Frontier Province, Gujarat, Central India West, Berar, the Konkan, the Bombay Deccan, Hyderabad North, Mysore and Madras. It differs from the normal by less than 20 per cent in the remaining divisions.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 21st February 1920.

Burma.—The week was practically rainless. Threshing and winnowing of the main rice crop has been practically completed. In Upper Burma cultivation of spring rice and of other miscellaneous crops is proceeding normally. Harvesting of wheat, gram, peas and beans is progressing. Standing crops are generally satisfactory. Cattle are generally healthy. In the Amherst district the number of persons on relief works dropped to 1,200 and of those receiving gratuitous relief to 5. The price of unhusked rice in Rangoon remains unchanged at Rs. 180 which is the same as control price and much above normal. The market for white rice is steady at Rs. 445 for specials.

Assam.—The weather is seasonable. Harvesting of mustard and pulses has been nearly finished. Pressing of sugarcane, pruning of tea, transplantation of spring rice, ploughing for autumn rice and jute and preparation of land for jhuming continue. The outturn and prospects of crops are generally fair. Cattle disease is reported from five districts. The price of common rice continues to rise slightly.

Bengal.—The rainfall during the week was light and scattered. Preparation of lands for autumn crops and harvesting of spring crops continue. Sowings for jute and autumn paddy have commenced in some districts. Standing crops are doing well. The average price of common rice has fallen by 0·34 per cent.

Bihar and Orissa.—There was practically no rain during the week. Pressing of sugarcane still continues in some districts. Harvesting of oilseeds and preparation of lands are going on. Standing crops are doing well. The price of common rice has risen in four districts, fallen in five and remained stationary in the remaining districts as compared with that of the preceding week. The average price of local common rice at headquarters was 6·40 seers a rupee against 6·26 seers in the preceding week and that of maize was 7·72 seers against 7·64 seers in the preceding week. Cattle disease is reported from five districts.

United Provinces.—The week was practically rainless. Slight damage to crops by frost is reported from a few districts. Preparation of land for and sowing of sugarcane and extra crops, irrigation of spring crops and poppy and pressing of sugarcane continue. Standing crops are generally in good condition. Prospects are favourable. The condition of agricultural stock is satisfactory. Fodder, water and market supplies are sufficient. Prices are stationary with a tendency to fall.

Punjab.—Except for light showers in parts of a few western districts the weather remained dry. Pressing of sugarcane is in progress. The yield is normal to above normal. The condition of standing irrigated wheat and other spring crops is good and that of unirrigated crops average. Harvesting of torsa has been nearly completed. The yield is generally normal. Sowings of extra spring crops continue to a normal extent. Cattle are healthy. Fodder and water are generally sufficient. Prices have fallen slightly in some districts and are stationary in others. They are generally above scarcity rates. Price of wheat:—Rawalpindi 5¾, Ambala 6¼ and Ferozepore, Lahore and Lyallpur 7 seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—Slight rain fell in places. Harvesting of sugarcane is in progress with outturn average. The condition of standing crops is generally average. Wheat is selling in Peshawar at 7 7/8 and in Dera Ismail Khan at 6¼ seers per rupee.

Jammu.—No rain fell during the week. There was slight fall in prices. Fodder is sufficient.

Kashmir.—The weather was generally rainy and cold. Fodder is sufficient. Cattle disease is reported in Gurez. Prices are fluctuating.

Rajputana.—Except for showers in Bundi the weather was generally dim and cool. Spring crops are being irrigated. The condition of standing crops and their probable outturn are fair. Damage is reported from frost generally. The condition of agricultural stock is good except in parts of Kotah. Fodder and water are adequate. Prices are steady.

Central India.—Rainfall nil. Harvesting of autumn crops continues in Indore and Malwa. Picking of cotton continues in Gwalior. Spring crops are being irrigated in Bundelkhand and Malwa and harvested in the Southern States. Lands are being prepared for autumn crops in the Southern States. Standing crops and their probable outturn are fair to good. Damage is reported in Indore, Bhopal and Malwa. Agricultural stock is generally good except for cattle disease in Gwalior, Indore, Baghelkhand and the Southern States. Prices are high. Opium is being weeded in Indore.

Central Provinces.—The weather continued to be clear and occasionally cloudy. Days are becoming warm. The condition of spring crops is generally satisfactory and prospects are excellent. Harvesting of spring crops is in progress in parts of certain districts. Cattle are faring well but disease is reported in a sporadic form in places. There is no deficiency of fodder and water anywhere. Prices remained almost stationary but show a slight tendency to fall.

Feudatory States:—Reaping of spring crops continues.

Bombay.—Slight rain fell during the week in the Upper Sind Frontier. Standing crops have been slightly injured by frost in Sind and by insects in parts of Sholapur and Belgaum and are flourishing elsewhere. Harvesting is generally in progress. Cotton picking continues in parts of Gujarat, Satara, Belgaum, Kathiawar, Rewa Kantha and Kolhapur. Preparation of lands for the next season's crops is generally in progress. Fodder and water are generally adequate. Agricultural stock is generally sufficient and good. Prices of food-grains are high but generally steady.

Hyderabad.—No rain fell except in one taluka. Standing spring crops are generally fair but have been damaged by insects in parts of the Gulbarga, Raichur, Mahbubnagar, Nalgonda and Warangal districts. Harvesting is in general progress. The late rice crop is fair and is being weeded. Stocks of fodder are sufficient. The water supply is fair except in parts of the Parbhani and Nander districts. Cattle disease is prevalent in the Aurangabad, Raichur, Mahbubnagar, Nalgonda, Warangal, Adilabad and Karimnagar districts. Prices of grains continue to be high. Juar is selling at 4 seers per rupee in the Raichur, Mahbubnagar and Adilabad districts.

The weekly report on famine is as follows:—Distress is likely to spread in new parts of the Telingana districts. The number of persons on relief is fluctuating. Prices of grains show an upward tendency. Rice is selling at 8½ seers and juar at 6½ seers per rupee. Cheap grain shops have been opened in the Mahbubnagar and Karimnagar districts. Number on relief in thousands:—Works 6, gratuitous 4, total 10.

Mysore.—The week was rainless. Standing crops are in good condition. Cattle are generally healthy. Water and fodder are available. Prices of food-grains are high and fluctuating. Prospects of the season are good. Harvesting of rice, ragi and sugarcane is proceeding with outturn fair.

Coorg.—The weather is dry. Threshing of rice and picking of coffee continue. Cattle are generally healthy. Water and fodder for cattle are available. The public health is fair. Prices of food-grains are high. Considerable export to Malabar of paddy continues.

Madras.—The rainfall during the week was light to moderate in parts of the Circars. Standing crops are fair generally. The outturn of the harvested paddy and dry crops is generally fair. Fresh sowings of paddy and dry crops are progressing. The condition of cattle is good generally. Water is generally sufficient. Pasture and fodder are sufficient generally. Prices are generally steady. Prospects are fair generally.

The 24th February 1920.

No. 1711-D.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY.

INDUSTRIES.

Delhi, the 26th February 1920.

RECONSTITUTION OF THE INDIAN MUNITIONS BOARD AS A BOARD OF INDUSTRIES AND MUNITIONS.

RESOLUTION.

In accordance with the announcement made in Resolution No. 81-D., in the Department of Commerce and Industry, dated November 15th, 1919, the Government of India have now decided to reconstitute the Indian Munitions Board as a Board of Industries and Munitions. The new Board will be a temporary organisation, designed to close the war commitments of the Indian Munitions Board, to take over from the Commerce and Industry Department and the Public Works Department certain items of work, and to undertake the initial work of industrial organisation and in particular to frame detailed proposals for a new Department of Industries.

2. The new Board will come into existence on March 1st, 1920, and will consist of a President and two members. The following gentlemen have been appointed to these posts :—

President:

The Hon'ble Sir Thomas Holland, K.C.S.I., K.C.I.E., F.R.S.

Members:

Thomas Ryan, Esquire, C.I.E.
A. C. Chatterjee, Esquire, C.I.E., I.C.S.

As the Indian Munitions Board will be merged into the new Board all correspondence intended for the Indian Munitions Board should hereafter be addressed to the Secretary of the new Board. The Board of Industries and Munitions will take over at the same time the following heads of business :—

From the Public Works Department—

Electricity.

From the Department of Commerce and Industry—

1. Geology and Minerals, including the Geological Survey of India and the administration of the Indian Mines Act.
2. Salt.
3. The Indian Explosives Act and the Indian Petroleum Act.
4. Stationery and Printing.
5. Inventions and Designs.
6. The Indian Factories Act.
7. The administration of the various Acts relating to Steam Boilers.
8. Industries.

3. The control of Ordnance Factories, having been transferred to the Army Department, all correspondence relating to them and intended for the Government of India should be addressed to that Department instead of to the Indian Munitions Board as heretofore.

4. Upon the formation of the new Board the Government of India, Department of Commerce and Industry, will be known as the Department of Commerce.

ORDERED that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to all Local Governments and Administrations, to all Departments of the Government of India and the Indian Munitions Board, to the Financial Adviser (Military Finance), to the Central War Controller and the Military Accountant General, and to all Heads of Departments subordinate to this Department; also that the Resolution be published in Part I of the Gazette of India, for general information.

A. H. LEY,

Secretary to the Government of India.

TRADE AFTER THE WAR—IMPERIAL PREFERENCE.

Delhi, the 27th February 1920.

APPOINTMENT OF A COMMITTEE IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE RESOLUTION ON THE SUBJECT OF IMPERIAL PREFERENCE.

RESOLUTION.

In accordance with the resolution on the subject of Imperial Preference, moved by the Hon'ble Sir George Barnes in the Imperial Legislative Council on the 19th February 1920, and adopted with certain amendments by the Council, His Excellency the Governor General in Council is pleased to appoint a Committee consisting of—

The Hon'ble Sir George Stapylton Barnes, K.C.B
The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill, K.C.S.I., C.I.E.
The Hon'ble Mr. R. A. Mant, C.S.I., I.C.S.
The Hon'ble Mr. A. H. Ley, C.I.E., I.C.S.
The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma Garu.
The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Eduljee Wacha, Kt.
The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur.
The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy, Kt., C.B.E.
The Hon'ble Sir Zulfikar Ali Khan, Kt., C S.I.
The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis, K.C.I.E.
The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru.
The Hon'ble Mr. Nigel F. Paton.
The Hon'ble Mr. W. E. Crum, O.B.E.

2. The Committee will assemble at Delhi as soon as possible, and is requested to examine the trade statistics and to consider and report to the Governor General in Council whether or not it is advisable to apply to the Indian Customs Tariff a system of preference in favour of goods of Empire origin, and as to the best method of considering the future fiscal policy of India.

ORDERED that a copy of the resolution be forwarded to all members of the Committee.

Ordered, also, that the resolution be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India.

A. H. LEY,

Secretary to the Government of India.

The 8th November 1919.

On and after 15th November and until further notice, Parts I, IV, V and VI of the Gazette of India and the Weather and Crop Report will be published in Delhi, Parts II and III will continue to be published in Calcutta. All notifications and other matter intended for publication in those Parts should be addressed to the Publisher at Delhi and Calcutta, respectively.

Attention is invited to the following Circular Memorandum of the Government of India, Home Department, of August 1901:—

"It has been brought to the notice of this Department that matter for the Gazette of India is sometimes sent to the Press late on Friday evenings for publication in the next day's Gazette and that this involves considerable inconvenience to the Press and expense to Government. In the Circular Memorandum of this Department, No. 777—79, dated 9th February 1870, the Government of India directed that all notifications or other matter intended for insertion in the Gazette of India should be delivered at the Press not later than 2 P.M. on Friday, and that any papers sent thereafter must be certified to be extremely urgent in order to ensure their appearance in the next day's Gazette. The undersigned is directed to request that these orders may be more strictly observed in future, and that Departments will refrain from sending to the Press as extremely urgent any papers which can without harm or inconvenience be held over for the next Gazette.

J. P. HEWETT,

Secretary to the Government of India."

NOTICES.

THE PATENT OFFICE, 1, COUNCIL HOUSE STREET, CALCUTTA.

Public room, open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

1. All communications relating to applications for patents and for registration of designs under the Indian Patents and Designs Act (II of 1911), or in continuation of applications under the Inventions and Designs Act (V of 1888) must be made in English and addressed to the Controller of Patents and Designs, 1, Council House Street, Calcutta. Documents sent by post should be carefully packed and a full address given in all communications.

2. Directions for the guidance of inventors and others are given in the Patent Office Handbook (price one rupee) which contains the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, the Indian Patents and Designs Rules, 1912, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary Rules) Act, 1915, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1915, together with current regulations and instructions. These should be consulted before an application is made to the Controller.

3. Advice. The Patent Office cannot undertake (1) to give opinions on the interpretation of Patent Law, or on the advisability of protecting inventions and designs or on their infringement; (2) to make searches in respect of information available in the public room; (3) to recommend any particular agent; or (4) to assist in the disposal of inventions. Models are not required unless specially asked for. Drawings must be on tracing cloth and the Rules and Instructions for the preparation of drawings as given in the Handbook should be strictly followed. A provisional patent cannot be secured under the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911.

4. Applicants are warned that the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, is in force in British India only, and patents granted under it do not extend to the United Kingdom or any of the British possessions. The International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property does not include India. For information regarding patents in countries other than India application should be made to the patent offices in the countries concerned.

5. Fees are payable in cash and must be received in the Patent Office within the time allowed by the Acts. When cheques are offered in payment of fees, it must be clearly understood that the office cannot hold itself responsible for any delay that may occur in the collection of cash on the cheques; any cheque not payable in Calcutta is subject to commission for which due allowance should be made. In cases where it is not possible to have the fees handed in at the Patent Office, it is preferable to send them by money-order or postal order payable at Calcutta to the Controller of Patents and Designs, and to advise him that they have been so sent. Stamps will not be received in payment of fees.

6. Trade and property marks and names are not registered and medicines are not patented under the Indian Patents and Designs Act. There is no provision of Law in British India for their registration. Neither does this Act deal with pictures, photographs, etc., for which copyright is obtainable under the Indian Copyright Act, 1914.

7. Printed Specifications of applications, which have been accepted, are published within about three weeks after acceptance has been notified in the Gazette of India. These specifications can be purchased at the Patent Office at a uniform price of 8 annas per copy; and may be seen free of charge, together with other publications of the Patent Office, at the following places:—

The following is a list of the more important "General" and other Maps which are available for quarter ending 31st December 1919.

EXPLANATION.

All Maps from Surveys after 1905 called "Modern" are printed in 4 or 5 colours, i.e., water forms in blue, towns and roads in red, forests and jungle in green, cultivation in yellow, hill contours in brown with shading to emphasize the hills, and other details in black.

All Maps from Surveys prior to 1905 are printed in black only or in black with hills in brown.

All Maps on scales 1" = 4 miles, $\frac{1}{1,000,000}$ or nearly 1" = 16 miles and $\frac{1}{2,000,000}$ or nearly 1" = 32 miles are printed in either one or two of the following editions, except those marked "Provisional Issue" which are from old surveys:—

(1) Layered edition, printed in colours with contours and graduated layer tints to show altitudes and shading to emphasize the hills. (Colour ribands along boundaries cannot be added to this edition.)

(2) Political edition, printed in colours with colour ribands along boundaries, contours to show altitudes and shading to emphasize the hills.

(3) Provisional issue, generally printed in black or in black with hills in brown. Colour ribands along boundaries are added by hand when required at an extra cost of 2 annas per sheet.

* The figures under "Rice, husked" represent the prices of common rice.

† Figures have not so far been reported.

NOTE.—These statistics are compiled from the fortnightly returns furnished by District Officers to Local Governments and Administrations, etc. relate to the wholesale prices in the principal markets (not necessarily district headquarters) in each province on the last (or nearest mart) day of each night.

[The figures state prices in rupees per ten maunds]

IMPORTS INTO CHIEF PORTS DURING DECEMBER, 1919

RETURN SHOWING the QUANTITIES of the PRINCIPAL STAPLES OF AGRICULTURAL PRODUCE IMPORTED into CALCUTTA, BOMBAY, KARACHI, and MADRAS PORTS by RAIL, RIVER, and SEA during DECEMBER, 1919

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA
February 27, 1920

D. N. GHOSH,
Offg. Director of Statistics.

Published by order of the Governor-General in Council.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA.

TRADE FLUCTUATIONS IN SELECTED ARTICLES IN DECEMBER, 1919.

The object of the tables appended is to show the quantities of the principal staples of agricultural produce imported from the various provinces, etc., and from foreign countries into the ports of Calcutta, Bombay, and Karachi, and into the Madras ports during the month of December, 1919, and for the nine months, April to December, 1919, as compared with the corresponding periods of 1918. The statistics include sea-borne foreign and coasting trade as well as inland (rail and river-borne) trade. They have been furnished by Collectors of Customs, Steamer Companies, Railway Audit Officers, and the Commissioners for the Port of Calcutta.

TRADE FLUCTUATIONS IN DECEMBER, 1918 AND 1919.

It will be seen from Table I that the imports by rail, river, and sea in December, 1919, as against the corresponding month of 1918, show (in round numbers) an increase of—

117 per cent in tea
(37,007,400 lbs as against 17,056,200 lbs last year),

32 per cent in gram and pulse
(39,900 tons as against 30,300 tons last year),

27 per cent in jute
(614,200 bales as against 484,300 bales last year),

18 per cent in raw cotton
(375,000 bales as against 317,300 bales last year), and

5 per cent in wheat (excluding wheat flour)

The imports of linseed by rail, river, and sea into ports show a fall of 90 per cent (4,100 tons as against 40,000 tons last year), due mainly to smaller exports from Bihar and Orissa, the United Provinces, and Rajputana and Central India. The decrease of 60 per cent (5,000 tons as against 12,500 tons last year) in the imports of rape and mustard seed is accounted for by smaller receipts mainly from Bombay and the Punjab. The imports of rice (including paddy) represent a decrease of 11 per cent (77,300 tons as against 86,800 tons last year) owing to smaller exports mainly from Bengal and Madras.

It will be seen from Table IV (wheat, excluding wheat flour) that the principal sources of the imports in December, 1918, were the Punjab (56 per cent) the United Provinces (25 per cent), and Bihar and Orissa (12 per cent of the total). During December, 1919, the Punjab sent, 65 per cent, the United Provinces 12 per cent, and Bihar and Orissa 11 per cent of the total. Table XI shows the exports from India by sea of wheat (including wheat flour) month by month during the last six years, 1913-14 to 1918-19, and for the nine months, April to December, 1919.

NOTE.—(1) One bale of cotton or jute is equivalent to 400 lbs.
(2) One maund is equivalent to 82⅔ lbs.
(3) One maund of paddy is taken as equivalent to 25 seers of rice.

GENERAL RESULTS—NINE MONTHS' IMPORTS INTO THE PORTS BY RAIL, RIVER, AND SEA THIS YEAR AND LAST YEAR.

The nine months' figures in table I show (in round numbers) an increase of—

43 per cent in rice (including paddy)
(1,107,500 tons as against 777,000 tons last year),
11 per cent in raw cotton
(2,095,400 bales as against 1,884,100 bales last year),
7 per cent in tea
(228,701,300 lbs as against 213,557,700 lbs last year), and
5 per cent in jute

The imports of wheat (excluding wheat flour) by rail, river, and sea into ports show a decrease of 51 per cent (391,900 tons as against 806,500 tons last year) mainly on account of smaller exports from the Punjab, the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, Bihar and Orissa, and the Central Provinces and Berar. The decrease of 51 per cent (319,300 tons as against 646,700 tons last year) in the imports of gram and pulse is accounted for by smaller receipts chiefly from the Punjab and the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh. The fall of 35 per cent (189,200 tons as against 292,000 tons last year) in the imports of linseed into ports is due to smaller exports from Bihar and Orissa and the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh. There was a decrease of 18 per cent in the imports of rape and mustard seed (82,900 tons as against 101,100 tons last year) on account of smaller exports from the Punjab and Bombay.

TRADE FLUCTUATIONS IN DECEMBER, 1919, AS COMPARED WITH THE PREVIOUS MONTH.

As compared with November, 1919, the imports in December, 1919, into the ports referred to above show (in round numbers) an increase of—

53 per cent in raw cotton
(375,000 bales as against 244,700 bales previous month),
24 per cent in gram and pulse
(39,900 tons as against 32,300 tons previous month),
15 per cent in rice (including paddy)
(77,300 tons as against 67,200 tons previous month),
5 per cent in linseed
(4,100 tons as against 3,900 tons previous month), and
2 per cent in tea
(37,007,400 lbs as against 36,346,600 lbs previous month), and a decrease of—

6 per cent in jute
(614,200 bales as against 656,100 bales previous month),
6 per cent in rape and mustard seed
(5,000 tons as against 5,300 tons previous month), and
1 per cent in wheat (excluding wheat flour)
(37,500 tons as against 37,900 tons previous month).

The statistics for December, 1918 and 1919, as also for the nine months ending December, 1918 and 1919, together with those for November and December, 1919, are summarised below :—

CALCUTTA:
February 25, 1920.

D. N. GHOSH,
Offg. Director of Statistics.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA.

CALCUTTA, FEBRUARY 19, 1920.

Supplementary Memorandum on the WHEAT CROP of 1919-20 for the period ending 15th February.

Since the publication of the first wheat forecast on January 31, 1920, revised estimates of area have been received from the Central Provinces and Berar, Bihar and Orissa, the North-West Frontier Province, and Ajmer-Merwara. An estimate of area has also been received from the Mewar State in Rajputana, for which a provisional estimate was made in the first forecast. The total revised area for all-India now stands at 27,502,000 acres, as against 27,429,000 acres, reported in the first forecast.

The winter rains have greatly improved the prospects of the standing crop, although cloudy weather accompanied by heavy rains induced rust in parts of Bombay. The present condition of the crop is reported to be generally good. Slight local damage by hail, frost, cold wind and insects is reported from parts of a few provinces. More rain is wanted in the western districts of the United Provinces and in parts of the North-West Frontier Province.

The details for the provinces are as follows :—

The provincial reports are summarised below :—

Punjab.—There has been no appreciable increase in the area reported in the first forecast. Rains received in January and in the beginning of February have greatly benefited the standing crop; and prospects are reported to be normal to above normal. There has been no damage from rust, and more rain is not wanted at present.

United Provinces.—There has been no material change in the estimate of area since the issue of the first forecast. Prospects have improved considerably owing to rain in all but the western districts where more rain is wanted. Local damage by hail and wind is reported generally, while in Bundelkhand damage by insects is reported.

Central Provinces and Berar.—The area sown in the British districts is now estimated at 3,086,000 acres, as against 3,091,000 acres reported in the first forecast. The area in eight Feudatory States is now reported to be 130,000 acres, as compared with 137,000 acres for six States reported in the January forecast. The combined area comes to 3,216,000 acres, showing a decrease of 12,000 acres as compared with the first forecast. The weather has been clear and cool with occasional clouds since the issue of the first forecast. Light showers, nowhere exceeding an inch, were received in parts of a few districts. Hail also fell in three districts but there has been no damage. Winter showers, where received, have greatly improved the condition of the crop, which had suffered slightly from a dry season in places. The condition of the crop is generally reported to be satisfactory and prospects are unusually good.

Bombay and Sind.—No change has been reported in the area estimated in the first forecast. Cloudy weather accompanied by heavy rains in January and February, unprecedented in Gujarat, may bring on rust. In the Deccan, the same weather condition induced rust on the early sown unirrigated crop and some reduction in outturn is expected, except in the south where the crop is good. The irrigated crop is doing well. The early crop is about ready for harvesting and the late one will require a fortnight more. The irrigated crop is expected to mature a month hence. In the Karnatak, the crop suffered in the central tracts from cloudy weather in December, which brought on rust in places. In Bijapur, it has been greatly damaged by insects. Rain at the end of January benefited the crop in Sind, but subsequent cold and severe frost have done some damage to the standing crop in Upper Sind. The crop on the Jamrao canal suffered considerably for want of irrigation water, but was benefited by later rain, except where in grain-formation.

Bihar and Orissa.—The area under wheat is now estimated at 1,161,000 acres, as against 1,147,000 acres reported in the first forecast, or an increase of 14,000 acres. Prospects have much improved by recent rains; and the condition is reported to be generally good. Slight damage by hail is reported from parts of Shahabad and Saran.

North-West Frontier Province.—The total area sown is now estimated at 975,000 acres, as against 905,000 acres reported in the first forecast, an increase of 70,000 acres. The condition of the standing crop is reported to be generally good at present throughout the province, except in Dera Ismail Khan where recent cold winds have affected the crop. The standing crop has been greatly benefited by recent rains, but more rain is urgently required in the Dera Ismail Khan district.

Bengal.—There has been no change in the estimate of area since the issue of the first forecast. Want of rain in December and January affected the growth of the crop in some places. The recent rains, however, have greatly improved the prospects, and the present condition is reported to be fairly good in the important wheat-growing districts.

Delhi.—No change has been reported in the area sown. The general condition of both the irrigated and unirrigated crops is reported to be good. No damage has been done by frost.

Ajmer-Merwara.—The area so far sown amounts to 20,000 acres, as against 15,000 acres reported in the January forecast. Slight damage by frost is reported, and the present condition of the crop is fair.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

CALCUTTA, FEBRUARY 19, 1920.

Final General Memorandum on the SUGARCANE Crop of 1919-20.

This memorandum is based on reports received from provinces, which contain 99 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India. Of the Indian States, estimates are furnished by Baroda, and the States in the Bombay Presidency. Estimates for the Orissa and Chota Nagpur Feudatory States have for the first time been received this year.

The total area sown is estimated at 2,667,000 acres, as against 2,884,000 acres last year, or a decrease of 7 per cent. The total yield of raw sugar (gúr) is estimated at 3,001,000 tons, as against 2,370,000 tons last year, or an increase of 27 per cent. The season has, on the whole, been favourable for the crop.

Detailed figures for each province are noted below :—

In addition to the areas for which particulars are given above, the crop is grown on a very small scale in certain other tracts in British India, the average area of which for the last five years has been some 25,000 acres with an estimated production of 28,000 tons.

The provincial reports are summarised below :—

United Provinces (52·5 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area sown amounts to 1,414,000 acres, as against 1,544,000 acres last year, showing a decrease of 8 per cent. The total yield of gúr is estimated at 1,453,000 tons, as against 987,000 tons last year, or an increase of 47 per cent. Good rain was received in some of the eastern districts in the beginning of October. November was practically rainless except the third week during which light rain fell in the Meerut, Agra and the greater part of the Rohilkhand divisions. The yield was, in consequence, reduced to some extent as compared with the normal; and it is estimated at 90 per cent, as against 55 per cent last year.

Punjab (16·4 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The area is finally returned at 480,000 acres, which is 1 per cent above last year's area. The yield is estimated at 420,000 tons, which is 40 per cent above that of last year. The season has been generally favourable. The heavy rains in July and August benefited the crop, and very little damage was caused by the subsequent scarcity of rain. The yield is normal or above normal everywhere.

Bihar and Orissa (10·7 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area planted is estimated at 297,000 acres (22,000 acres being in the Orissa and Chota Nagpur Feudatory States which is almost the same as last year's area. The total yield is estimated at 330,000 tons (12,000 tons being in the Feudatory States), which is 17 per cent above that of last year. The weather conditions have been generally favourable. Some damage was done by excessive rain and floods in places. According to the estimates of District Officers, the average outturn for the province works out to 93 per cent of the normal, but the Provincial Director of Agriculture has raised it to 105 per cent on the ground that the reported favourable conditions in North Bihar do not justify the District Officers' estimates indicating a yield below normal in that important tract.

Bengal (8·8 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The area is estimated at 218,000 acres, as against 219,000 acres last year. The yield is estimated at 256,000 tons which is 15 per cent above the yield of last year. Insufficient rainfall at planting time retarded germination in places. Subsequently up till September the weather conditions were generally good, although some damage was caused by excessive rain in parts of a few districts. The cyclone in Eastern Bengal did some harm to the crop in places. Lack of rain since the beginning of October has also tended to affect what was otherwise a good season.

at 101,000 tons as against 98,000 tons (revised) last year. The total quantity of gúr in the province from all sources is thus estimated at 357,000 tons, as against 321,000 tons last year, or an increase of 11 per cent.

Madras (4 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The area planted is estimated at 91,000 acres, which is 26 per cent below last year's area. The decrease is fairly general and is attributed to shortage of water at the planting season owing to the abnormally low rainfall in 1918. The high price of oilcakes and the deficiency of indigo refuse, which are the two chief manures for sugarcane, also tended to discourage cultivators from raising it. The yield is estimated at 261,000 tons, which is 8 per cent above the yield of last year.

Bombay and Sind (2·9 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The area is estimated at 77,000 acres (27,000 acres being in the Indian States excluding Baroda), which is 37 per cent below last year's area. The decrease is due to the deficiency of water supply in wells and canals at the time of planting consequent on the drought of the previous year. The yield is estimated at 180,000 tons (57,000 tons being in the Indian States) which is 26 per cent below the yield of last year. In Gujarat and West Deccan the crop did well under favourable rains. In East Deccan it suffered from the prolonged break in the middle of the season, but later rains were favourable and the plants improved to some extent. The Karnatak crop also somewhat suffered from the drought of July-August, and in places from the attacks of the stem-borer, but it improved with the subsequent heavy rains. It was fair in parts of Belgaum and Dharwar and in Kolhapur, and good elsewhere. In the Konkan the crop did well, except in the low-lying fields in Kanara, where it was somewhat injured by excessive rains. The Sind crop is reported to be generally in good condition.

Assam (1·5 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The area is estimated at 31,000 acres, which is 6 per cent below the area of last year. The yield is estimated at 28,000 tons, the same as that of last year. The weather conditions continued favourable after the issue of the first forecast. The rainfall from September to November encouraged the growth of the crop, and the outturn is estimated to be normal.

North-West Frontier Province (1·3 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The area is estimated at 34,000 acres, which is 8 per cent below the area of last year. The decrease is due to the lack of rain and insufficient water in the canals. The yield is estimated at 43,000 tons, which is 43 per cent above last year's yield.

Central Provinces and Berar (0·9 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The area planted amounts to 22,000 acres (1,000 acres being in Berar), which is 27 per cent below last year's area. The shrinkage is due to the small supply of water in irrigation tanks and the early withdrawal of the monsoon in the previous year. The yield is estimated at 26,000 tons (2,000 tons being in Berar), which is 7 per cent below last year's yield. The seasonal conditions were, on the whole, generally favourable. The average outturn for the provinces as a whole is estimated at 109 per cent of the normal.

Baroda reports 3,000 acres under sugarcane as against 4,000 acres last year. The yield is reported to be 4,000 tons, as against 8,000 tons last year.

Imports.—The following figures show the amount of sugar imported by sea from the different foreign countries in the last three official years (April to March) and in the ten months April 1919 to January 1920, of the present financial year :—

Sugarcane crop in foreign countries.—From the latest available information published by the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, it appears that the area and yield of cane in the Union of South Africa for 1919-20 are estimated at 160,000 acres and 150,000 tons. In Guatemala, the area and yield for 1919 are estimated to be 40,000 acres and 22,000 tons.

The following are the unofficial estimates of the more important foreign sugarcane-producing countries in 1919-20, the figures in brackets being the production figures for 1918-19 :—Cuba 4,300,000 tons (3,972,000 tons) ; Java 1,3 6,000 tons (1,749,000 tons) ; Hawaiian islands 500,000 tons (535,000 tons) ; Porto Rico 427,000 tons (375,000 tons) ; Formosa and Japan 300,000 tons (416,000 tons) ; Australia 275,000 tons (226,000 tons) ; Peru 250,000 tons (250,000 tons) ; Argentine 250,000 tons (130,000 tons) ; Mauritius 242,000 tons (279,000 tons) ; Philippine Islands 225,000 tons (192,000 tons) ; Brazil 175,000 tons (260,000 tons) ; and the United States—Louisiana 116,000 tons (251,000 tons).

CALCUTTA, FEBRUARY 20, 1920

Final General Memorandum on the COTTON Crop of 1919-20.

This memorandum is based on reports furnished by provinces, and refers to the entire cotton area of India. It deals with the final reports on both the early and the late crops of the season.

The total area reported is 23,063,000 acres, which is 2,025,000 acres, or nearly 10 per cent, over the revised figure of last year. The total estimated yield is 5,845,000 bales of 400 lbs each, which is 47 per cent larger than the yield of last year. The present estimate of outturn, as compared with the sum of actual exports (net) abroad, mill consumption, and extra-factory consumption in 1918-19 (3,991,000 bales) shows an increase of 46 per cent. The detailed figures for the provinces and States are stated below (in thousands) :—

A statement showing the present estimates of area and yield according to the recognised trade descriptions of cotton, as compared with the preceding year, is given in the next column. Of the total yield Oomras represent 48 per cent, Bengal-Sind 23 per cent, Dholleras 9 per cent, Coompta-Dharwars and Broach 5 per cent each, Tinnevellys, Salems and Cambodias 4 per cent, and Northerns and Westerns 3 per cent.

Bombay (27 9 per cent of the total area under cotton in India) —The latest reports show the total area under both early and late cotton to be 5,704,000 acres (1,832,000 acres being in the Indian States), which is 3 per cent above the area of last year. The total yield is estimated at 1,503,000 bales (452,000 bales being in the Indian States), as against 641,000 bales last year. Since the publication of the December forecast, cloudy weather accompanied by heavy rains caused some shedding of bolls and flowers in places in Gujarat in the beginning of January and the outturn is likely to be affected thereby, especially in the south. In the Deccan picking has been almost finished, but owing to a fall in the price of cotton a lot of the crop was left in the fields undisposed of and spoiled by the January rains. In the Karnatak the crop has improved since December and has done fairly well in the eastern tracts; but that in the western tracts has suffered from excessive rain. The area and outturn of cotton by trade descriptions in the Bombay Presidency (excluding Sind) are :—

Central Provinces and Berar (19·7 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area sown is reported to be 4,494,000 acres (including 3,088,000 acres in Berar), which is 9 per cent above the area of last year. The yield is estimated at 1,285,000 bales (including 914,000 bales in Berar), which is 59 per cent above last year's yield. The condition of the crop was described in the third forecast published by this Department on the 23rd December, 1919, in which it was stated that the prospects of the crop were satisfactory.

Madras (10·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area sown is reported to be 2,332,000 acres, which is 27 per cent below the area of last year. The maximum area was sown last year under the stimulus of record prices. But the falling price of cotton, coupled with abnormally high prices of food crops and scarcity of fodder in the south, led to a general decrease in the area sown in the present season. The yield is estimated at 413,000 bales, which is 30 per cent below the yield of last year. The season has been unusually late. Rains in the beginning of January caused considerable shedding of flowers and gave rise in places to pessimistic reports but the rains have refreshed the plants, and although the season has been late, it is not likely that the crop has been permanently damaged anywhere. The yield is expected to be fully up to the average. The area and outturn according to trade descriptions are as follows :—

	Acres	Bales
Tinnevellys, Salems, Cambodias	894,000	231,000
Northerns and Westerns	1,260,000	146,000
Cocanadas	212,000	33,000
Others	26,000	3,000

Punjab (6·1 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area is reported to be 2,251,000 acres (199,000 acres being in the Indian States), which is 45 per cent above last year's area. The yield is estimated at 673,000 bales (including 62,000 bales in the Indian States), which is 36 per cent larger than last year's yield. As reported in the third forecast the season has not been generally favourable.

United Provinces (5·6 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area is now reported to be 1,284,000 acres (13,000 acres being in the Rampur State), which is 49 per cent above the area of last year. The yield is estimated at 442,000 bales (including 3,000 bales in the Rampur State), as against 174,000 bales last year. The season was on the whole favourable.

Sind (1·1 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area is reported to be 313,000 acres (7,000 acres being in the Khairpur State), which is 1 per cent below last year's area. The yield is estimated at 83,000 bales (including 1,000 bales in the Khairpur State), which is 27 per cent below the yield of last year. The crop was damaged by adverse winds in Nawabshah and by boll worms in the south.

Burma (1·1 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area is now reported to be 416,000 acres, which is 13 per cent above that of last year. The high price fetched by cotton in recent years accounts for the extension in cultivation. The yield is estimated at 76,000 bales, which is about 9 per cent larger than last year's yield. The crop is reported to be not so good as last year.

Bengal (0·3 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area sown with both early and late crops is estimated at 69,000 acres, which is 5 per cent below that of last year. The yield is estimated at 25,000 bales, which is 22 per cent less than the yield of last year. The dry weather, prevailing since the issue of the third forecast, has been generally favourable to the late crop; but excessive rain at the time of maturity damaged the early crop, which has fared badly, especially in the State of Hill Tippera, from rains in September and October. The area and outturn of cotton according to trade descriptions are :—

	Acres	Bales
Bengal-Sind	4,000	2,000
Commillas	65,000	23,000

Bihar and Orissa (0·3 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area under both early and late crops is estimated at 77,000 acres, which is 3 per cent below the area of last year. The yield is estimated at 21,000 bales, which is 5 per cent above last year's yield. Since the December forecast weather conditions have continued to be generally favourable for the growth of the crop.

North-West Frontier Province (0·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area is reported to be 51,000 acres, which is 31 per cent above that of last year. The yield is estimated at 6,000 bales, which is 14 per cent below that of last year.

Assam (0·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area reported is 33,000 acres, which is the same as that of last year. The yield is estimated at 14,000 bales, as against 12,000 bales last year. The weather conditions continued to be favourable since the issue of the third forecast and improved the outturn of the crop.

Ajmer-Merwara (0·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area sown is reported to be 44,000 acres, which is 47 per cent above that of last year. The yield is estimated at 24,000 bales, which is 71 per cent above last year's yield.

Hyderabad (14·7 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area sown is estimated at 3,095,000 acres, which is 29 per cent above last year's area. The estimate of the yield stands at 749,000 bales, which is 16 per cent above the yield of last year. Although rainfall was somewhat irregular, the season has been generally favourable to the crop, and the outturn is expected to be nearly normal. The detailed district figures are as follows:—

	Acres	Bales

Central India (6 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The yield is estimated at 291,000 bales on an area of 1,587,000 acres. These figures indicate an increase of 28 per cent in area and of 36 per cent in yield. The detailed figures of area and yield are:—

Rajputana (1·7 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area and yield are estimated at 374,000 acres and 95,000 bales, as against 250,000 acres and 55,000 bales last year. There is thus an increase of 50 per cent in area and 73 per cent in yield. The detailed figures of area and yield are:—

Chart.—The Chart below shows the present estimates of area and yield for all India as compared with the finally revised figures of the preceding nine years.

Cotton Crop in Foreign Countries.—From the latest reports it appears that the area and yield of the cotton crop in the United States of America for 1919-20 are 32,390,000 acres and 13,787,000 bales of 400 lbs. The estimates for the Egyptian cotton crop of 1919-20 are 1,629,000 acres and 1,434,000 bales.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

CALCUTTA, FEBRUARY 23, 1920.

Final General Memorandum on the RICE crop of 1919-20.

This memorandum is based upon reports received from provinces which contain 99 per cent of the total area under rice in British India. The statistics of acreage, outturn, etc., refer to all crops of rice, both early and late, in all the reporting provinces.

The total area reported is 81,548,000 acres, as compared with 79,508,000 acres, the revised final area of last year. The present figure, therefore, shows an increase of 3 per cent as compared with last year. The total yield is estimated at 35,746,000 tons of cleaned rice, as against 24,672,000 tons, the finally revised estimate of last year, or an increase of 45 per cent.

Weather conditions were, on the whole, favourable and the condition of the crop is reported to be generally good, except in Burma where late rains were deficient.

Final Estimate.

The average yield per acre works out to 982 lbs, as against 695 lbs in 1918-19, 1,013 lbs. in 1917-18, 978 lbs. in 1916-17, 941 lbs in 1915-16, 796 lbs in 1914-15, 855 lbs in 1913-14, 891 lbs in 1912-13, 1,041 lbs in 1911-12, and 1,077 lbs in 1910-11.

In addition to the areas for which particulars are given above, rice is also grown in certain other tracts* in British India, and the average area so grown for the five years ending 1917-18 has been some 924,000 acres with an estimated yield of 405,000 tons. This outturn is excluded from the grand total 35,746,000 tons, since recent estimates have not been received from these areas.

The provincial reports are summarised below :—

Bengal (26·1 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The area under winter rice

* Punjab, North-West Frontier Province, Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara.

is reported to be 15,606,000 acres, which is 2 per cent below last year's area. The yield is estimated at 6,450,000 tons, as against 5,255,000 tons last year, or an increase of 23 per cent. The rainfall in the middle of November, though somewhat retarding the harvesting of the early crop, proved beneficial to the late transplanted paddy. The subsequent dry weather has been favourable for harvesting. The average outturn for the province is estimated at 90 per cent of the normal.

If the figures for the summer and autumn crops given in the second forecast issued in December last, and reproduced in the appended table, be added, the total area and yield of all kinds of rice in Bengal amount to 20,938,000 acres and 8,255,000 tons, as against 21,333,000 acres and 6,901,000 tons last year.

Bihar and Orissa (20·3 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The area under winter rice is estimated at 11,336,000 acres, which is 1 per cent more than the area of last year. The yield is estimated at 7,183,000 tons, which is 94 per cent more than last year's yield. Since the publication of the second forecast weather continued to be generally favourable. The late rain was very beneficial to the crop in most districts. The average outturn of the winter rice crop is estimated at 115 per cent of the normal, and on this basis the yield stated above has been estimated.

Adding to the above figures those for the summer and autumn crops, given in the second forecast issued in December last and reproduced in the appended table, and 3,154,000 acres and 1,547,000 tons for Feudatory States for which estimates have for the first time been received this year, the total area and yield of all kinds of rice in the province amount to 18,409,000 acres and 10,453,000 tons, as against 17,564,000 acres and 5,227,000 tons last year.

Madras (14·2 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The area is estimated at 11,797,000 acres, which is 13 per cent more than the area of last year. The yield is estimated at 5,935,000 tons, as against 4,203,000 tons last year, or an increase of 41 per cent. The crop is below average only in the Circars; elsewhere good yields are reported, while a bumper crop is expected on the west coast. The average outturn is estimated at 108 per cent of the normal, and on this basis the yield stated above has been estimated.

Burma (13·4 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The area is estimated at 10,407,000 acres, which is almost the same as last year's area. The yield is estimated at 3,550,000 tons, as against 4,000,000 tons last year, or a decrease of 11 per cent. Owing to deficient late rains the crop is reported to be threshing out light in several districts. The average outturn for the province is estimated at 77 per cent of the normal, as against 85 per cent last year. The surplus available for export is now estimated at 1,700,000 tons of cargo rice, equivalent to 1,441,000 tons of cleaned rice.

United Provinces (8·4 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The area under both early (autumn) and late (winter) crops is now reported to be 6,522,000 acres, which is 2 per cent below last year's area. The yield is estimated at 2,245,000 tons, which is 57 per cent above the yield of last year. The season was, on the whole, favourable for the early rice crop, of which the outturn is estimated at 90 per cent of the normal. The late rice was affected in parts of the province by want of rain during the latter half of October. Its outturn is estimated at 85 per cent of the normal. Taking both the crops together the average outturn for the province is estimated at 88 per cent of the normal, against 55 per cent last year.

Adding to the above figures, those for the hot weather crop, given in the second forecast issued in December last, the total area and yield of all kinds of rice in the province amount to 6,539,000 acres and 2,248,000 tons, as against 6,705,000 acres and 1,441,000 tons last year.

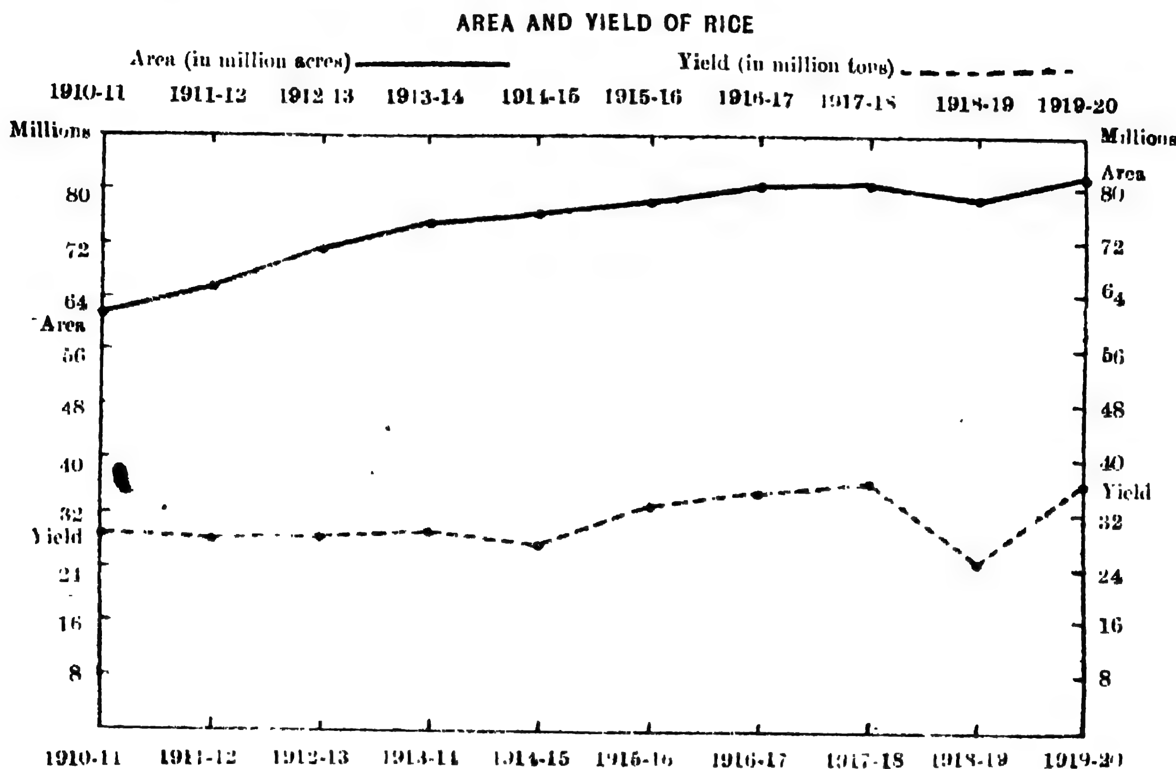
Central Provinces and Berar (6·4 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—As reported in December last, the area is estimated at 5,762,000 acres (including 636,000 acres in the Feudatory States) as against 5,307,000 acres last year. The yield is estimated at 1,889,000 tons (183,000 tons being in the Feudatory States) which is 154 per cent above last year's yield. The season was favourable, and the condition of the crop was reported to be good.

Assam (6 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The area under winter rice is estimated at 3,158,000 acres, which is 7 per cent less than the area of last year. The yield is estimated at 1,248,000 tons, which is 18 per cent more than the yield of last year. The season opened unfavourably, but conditions improved by the beginning of October and continued to be favourable up to the harvest. The average outturn for the province is estimated at 93 per cent of the normal, as against 73 per cent last year.

If the figures for the summer and autumn crops, given in the second forecast and reproduced in the appended table, are added to the above estimates, the total area and yield of all kinds of rice in Assam amount to 4,114,000 acres and 1,494,000 tons, as against 4,404,000 acres and 1,308,000 tons last year.

Bombay (2·4 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The area and yield of late (spring or rabi) rice are estimated at 40,000 acres and 21,000 tons, as against 10,000 acres and 3,000 tons last year. The crop was helped by irrigation and is expected to yield a full normal outturn.

With the figures for the autumn rice, given in the December forecast and reproduced in the appended table, the total area and yield of both kinds of rice in Bombay (including Indian States but excluding Baroda) amount to 2,175,000 acres and 1,225,000 tons, as against 2,100,000 acres and 482,000 tons last year.



Sind (1·5 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—As stated in the December forecast, the area sown is 1,100,000 acres (10,000 acres being in the Khairpur State), which is 9 per cent above the estimate of last year. The total yield is estimated at 570,000 tons (3,000 tons being in the Khairpur State), which is 93 per cent more than that of last year. Owing to good water supply this year, the crop generally did well except in parts of the Hyderabad district where it suffered from floods.

Coorg (0·1 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The area and yield are estimated at 83,000 acres and 54,000 tons, as against 80,000 acres and 39,000 tons last year, showing an increase of 4 per cent in area and 38 per cent in yield.

Baroda reports 224,000 acres under rice, as compared with 151,000 acres last year. The yield is estimated at 73,000 tons, as against 32,000 tons last year.

Chart.—The chart below illustrates the present estimates of area and yield as compared with those of the preceding nine years.

Rice crop in foreign countries.—Information, specially obtained for this forecast through the Consulate at Saigon, shows the estimates of area and yield of rice in Cochin-China in 1919-20 to be 11,762,000 acres and 4,543,000 tons, as compared with 12,033,000 acres and 3,408,000 tons last year. The Consulate at Bangkok reports that the estimates of area and yield of rice in Siam in 1919-20 are 6,262,000 acres (of which 2,800,000 acres were destroyed) and 2,600,000 tons of paddy, compared with 6,000,000 acres and 4,000,000 tons of paddy in 1918-19. Exports for the year ending December 1919 were 881,000 tons of rice. Exports in 1920 are prohibited.

The latest information published by the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, may be summarised as follows :—In Japan the total area and yield are estimated at 7,619,000 acres and 10,772,000 tons, as against 7,577,000 acres and 9,715,000 tons last year. In the United States of America the total area and yield are estimated at 1,091,000 acres and 887,000 tons, as compared with 1,112,000 acres and 810,000 tons last year. In Italy the estimates are 346,000 acres and 491,000 tons, as against 342,000 acres and 514,000 tons last year.

SUPPLEMENT TO

The Gazette of India.

No. 8. } CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1920.

OFFICIAL PAPERS.

A Supplement to the Gazette of India will be published from time to time containing such official papers and information as the Government of India may deem to be of interest to the Public, and such as may usefully be made known. The debates of the Legislative Council of His Excellency the Governor General will in future be published in Part VI of the Gazette.

Non-Subscribers to the Gazette may receive the Supplement separately on a payment of Rupees five per annum if delivered in Calcutta, or Rupees eight if sent by post. The Supplement and Part VI of the Gazette can also be subscribed for separately on a payment of Rupees six per annum if delivered in Calcutta, or Rupees nine if sent by post.

No Official Orders or Notifications, the Publication of which in the Gazette of India is required by Law or which it has been customary to publish in the Calcutta Gazette, will be included in the Supplement. For such Orders and Notifications the body of the Gazette must be looked to.

COTTON PRESS RETURN.

No. 9 of 1919-20.

PREFATORY NOTE.

The Cotton Season, 1919-20.

The provisional estimate of the cotton crop of 1919-20 is 5,670,000 bales* on an area of 22,199,000 acres,* as compared with 3,671,000 bales on an area of 20,497,000 acres, the final estimates of last year. There is an increase of 54 per cent in the outturn. The estimate for British provinces (including Indian States within provincial boundaries) is 4,347,000 bales, an increase of 56 per cent over last year's figures. There were 1,082,000 bales of cotton pressed in the pressing factories, and 176,000 bales of unpressed cotton received in the spinning mills in British provinces, from 1st September, 1919, to 15th January, 1920, as against 718,000 bales and 160,000 bales, respectively, during the corresponding period of last year, showing an increase of 51 per cent in the case of presses, and of 10 per cent in the case of mills. Too much stress, however, should not be laid on the accuracy of these returns as a means of checking the forecast estimates of outturn, as there is at present no system in vogue of furnishing complete returns from all presses and mills.

* Revised after the issue of the Third Cotton Forecast, 1919-20, on the 23rd December 1919.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

CALCUTTA, FEBRUARY 17, 1920.

Final General Memorandum on the GROUNDNUT crop of the season 1919-20.

This memorandum is based upon reports received from the three provinces of Madras, Burma, and Bombay, which comprise 99 per cent of the entire groundnut area of British India.

The total area returned is 1,570,000 acres, as compared with 1,407,000 acres in 1918-19, or an increase of 12 per cent. The total yield is estimated at 884,000 tons of nuts in shell, as against 626,000 tons, the final figure of last year, or an increase of 41 per cent. The season has, on the whole, been favourable for the crop.

The details for the provinces are given below :—

Final Estimate

Province	Estimated total yield		Area		Average yield per acre
	1919-20	1918-19	1919-20	1918-19	1919-20	1918-19
	Tons	Tons	Acres	Acres	lbs	lbs
Madras . .	653,000	442,000	1,159,000	1,001,000	1,262	989
Burma . .	102,000	99,000	273,000	249,000	837	891
Bombay (including Indian States) . .	129,000	85,000	138,000	157,000	2,094	1,213
Total .	884,000	626,000	1,570,000	1,407,000	1,261	997

The provincial reports are summarised below :—

Madras (75·9 per cent of the total area under groundnut in British India).—The area under the crop is estimated at 1,159,000 acres, as against 1,001,000 acres, the final area of last year, or an increase of 16 per cent. The average outturn is estimated at 113 per cent of the normal, and on this basis the total yield is estimated at 653,000 tons, which is 48 per cent above the final estimate of last year.

Burma (12·6 per cent of the total area under groundnut in British India).—The area under the crop is reported to be 273,000 acres, which is 10 per cent above the final estimate of last year. The total yield is estimated at 102,000 tons, as against 99,000 tons last year, or an increase of 3 per cent. Harvesting was generally normal. The rainfall in November came too late to benefit the crop which had suffered from drought.

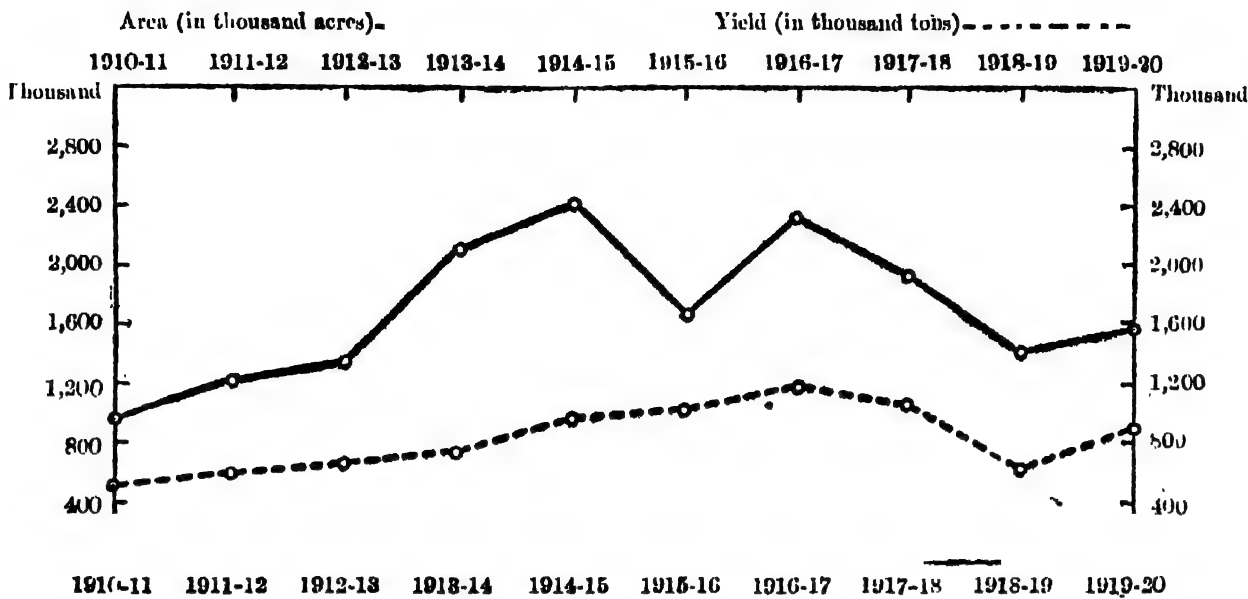
Bombay (10·5 per cent of the total area under groundnut in British India).—The area is estimated at 138,000 acres (26,000 acres being in the Indian States), which is 12 per cent below the area of last year. The total yield is estimated at 129,000 tons (18,000 tons being in the Indian States), which is 52 per cent above last year's yield. The decrease in the area sown is generally due to the dearth of seed and want of sufficient water in wells. In Gujarat and Khandesh the crop has done well. Elsewhere in the Deccan the crop, especially the unirrigated one, suffered from the prolonged break of July-August which has somewhat affected the outturn. The irrigated crop has done well.

Exports.—The quantities exported by sea to foreign countries during the ten months (April to January) of the official years 1918-19 and 1919-20, and during the whole of the preceding five official years have been as follows :—

	From Madras	From Bombay	From Burma	From other Provinces	Total
	Tons	Tons	Tons	Tons	Tons
1914-15 . .	115,200	21,100	1,000	100	138,300
1915-16 . .	151,200	24,100	...	100	175,400
1916-17 . .	66,900	78,100	2,200	300	147,500
1917-18 . .	63,300	43,000	1,000	8,000	115,300
1918-19 . .	8,400	5,800	300	2,700	17,200
1918-19 (ten months)	8,300	3,300	200	2,700	14,500
1919-20 (ten months)	36,300	32,100	600	3,100	72,100

Prices and Freights—The figures below show the prices (per cwt) of groundnut at the end of January, 1920, and at the same date in the six preceding years. Prices ruled unusually high during the year and were in fact double the rates that prevailed in the pre-war year.

I.—PRICES



End of January	Madras per cwt			Bombay per cwt			Rangoon per cwt
	Rs.	A.	P.	Rs.	A.	P.	Rs.	A.	P.

1919	13	5	5	19	12	0	12	12	3
1920	18	13	6	19	8	0	12	5	1

II.—FREIGHTS

Freights per ton from Madras to Marseilles (which receives nearly four-fifths of the total exports) were £8-5-0 in January, 1920, against £16-0-0, £12-5-0, and £8-0-0 in the same month of 1918, 1917 and 1916, respectively. The quotations in January, 1919, were nominal owing to the scarcity of tonnage.

Chart.—The chart below shows the present figures of area and yield, as compared with the finally revised figures of the preceding nine years.

FINANCE DEPARTMENT.

NARRATIVE OF THE FINANCE MEMBER INTRODUCING THE FINANCIAL STATEMENT FOR 1920-21.

Narrative of the Finance Member

INTRODUCING THE FINANCIAL STATEMENT FOR 1920-21.

Introductory.

The procedure for dealing in Council with the Financial Statement will be the same as in the past two years. A general debate upon it will take place on the 8th instant; the detailed discussion will follow, ending on the 13th and I hope that the Budget will be presented in its final form on the 22nd. In this narrative describing the financial events of the current year, and our proposals for the next year, I cannot do better than follow the general sequence and arrangement adopted by my distinguished predecessor. A full explanation of the details of revenue and expenditure under the various heads will be found in the Secretary's Memorandum which will as usual be laid before Hon'ble Members.

SECTION I.—THE YEAR 1919-20.

A.—General characteristics.

General character of the year 1919-20.

2. In dealing with the financial year 1918-19 Lord Meston pointed out that the year fell into two sharply divided periods, and described the change which came over business and financial conditions generally on the sudden collapse of the German resistance in November 1918. The financial year with which we have now to deal has witnessed the conclusion of the major peace negotiations, the ratification of the peace treaties with Germany and Austria, and the inauguration of that great conception, the League of Nations, on the success or failure of which so much of the future of civilisation depends. But, while the other partner nations of our Empire have been able to demobilise their armies, and to make some beginning on the uphill task of repairing the industrial and economic havoc caused by four years of war, here in India, though happily spared from many of the consequences which the war has brought to the nations of Europe, we have nevertheless had to face troubles peculiarly our own. The peace, which for a generation has existed on our borders, has been broken; and the armies of India returned home from France, Mesopotamia and Palestine only to find laid upon them the further task of defending the soil of India from a threatened invasion from Afghanistan. That peril averted, they have had to face a prolonged campaign, and in the most arduous conditions, in reducing the Mahsud and Wazir tribes. Nor need I add that the effect of these operations is written large over the financial history of the year, and has roughly disturbed the anticipations which Lord Meston felt justified in making.

The 1919 monsoon.

3. But for this, my task to-day would have been limited to recording the history of a year, not indeed uneventful, but of fair harvests, of growing revenues, and, save for the continuance of high prices, of general prosperity. It fell to Lord Meston to record the failure of the 1918 monsoon, with the resulting scarcity which, although happily less intense than had been known on many previous occasions of drought, nevertheless affected an unusually wide area. This year we are fortunately able to look back on a monsoon such as India has not enjoyed for many years past. It was, it is true, late in declaring itself. The Arabian Sea current appeared in the Peninsula at about the normal date, while the Bay current arrived in Northern India about a week before the usual time. But up to the middle of July, both currents were fitful and were deflected to an unusual extent to the Central Provinces and the adjoining districts to the east; north-western India accordingly suffered, and in that part of the country, as those who followed the movements of our troops on the frontier know only too well, intense hot weather conditions prevailed. By the end of the second week in July, however, the monsoon began to penetrate into Northern India and before the end of the month had spread over practically the whole area. Throughout August, it was well above its average strength, and although it weakened considerably in September, it returned at the end of the month with a force which caused great destruction of life and property in Eastern Bengal. It was somewhat fitful in October, but gave good rain in November and December. Altogether the total monsoon rainfall of the year was 9 per cent. in excess of the normal.

Agricultural conditions.

4. The failure of the 1918 monsoon, and the widespread epidemic of the autumn, had their effect on the spring harvest of 1919, and scarcity conditions continued till late in the summer. In 1918 famine had been recognized as prevailing in certain parts of the country; the early months of 1919 saw famine declared in four districts in the Bombay Presidency, three districts in Bihar and Orissa, three districts in the Central Provinces, one district in each of the Bengal and Madras Presidencies, three districts in Hyderabad, and in certain parts of Central India and Rajputana. The number of persons on relief of all kinds rose to a maximum in June of 589,535. This figure is less than one-tenth of the maximum number on relief in 1900, although the failure of the monsoon of 1918 was certainly no less widespread than that of 1899. Scarcity of fodder continued during the greater part of the year in the United Provinces, the Punjab, Bombay, Rajputana and Bengal, and the special concession rates for its carriage by rail remained in force in the affected tracts during this period. Apart from large grants for distribution in affected areas in the shape of agricultural loans and advances, a sum of R1,00,000 was given to the Punjab Branch of the Imperial Indian Relief Fund to assist the opening of cheap grain shops in that Province, and grants in relief of local distress aggregating R7,30,500 were made to various provinces by the Indian People's Famine Trust. As the monsoon declared itself conditions improved rapidly towards the end of the year, and at its conclusion all relief operations had practically ceased. Fortunately, the gradual cessation of famine conditions was not accompanied by any general recrudescence of the epidemic of influenza which ravaged India in the autumn of 1918. In certain cities sporadic outbreaks occurred, but they were confined to specific localities, and the epidemic had none of that devastating effect on the rural economy of the country which marked its course in 1918.

High prices.

5. I wish it were possible for me to record that the monsoon of 1919 had resulted in a marked reduction in the high prices which have brought so much distress upon the labouring classes and those with fixed incomes. The autumn harvest was good, yet the price of millets, which form the staple food of the people in many parts of India, remained abnormally high; while in spite of the prospect of a good wheat crop, and of the fact that exports are rigorously restricted, the price of wheat is still in the neighbourhood of 6 seers to the rupee. The Council is already aware of the remedial measures which we have taken in this respect, and which from time to time have been described by my Hon'ble Colleagues in the Revenue and Commerce Departments. I will only offer three brief reflections upon this subject, at once the most difficult and the most anxious of the problems which we have now to face. The first consideration is an obvious one—the effect upon the public expenditure. The burden of high prices has been felt in a special degree by the large number of low-paid Government servants, and both the Central and Provincial Governments, in common with other employers of labour, have been obliged to give large increases of pay, either in the form of allowances or of a general revision of emoluments. The process of revising the pay of our establishments still continues and will be responsible for a heavy increase of expenditure in the coming year. Secondly, it must be remembered, as was pointed out by the Hon'ble Mr. Mant in the interesting debate on prices which we had at the September session, that after a serious failure of the monsoon it generally takes several years of good harvests before prices approach their former level. Thirdly, and most important of all, there are factors in existence, external to this country, which have operated and are still operating to keep prices high, and it is questionable whether, even if there had been no failure of the monsoon in 1918, the prices of many commodities would not have risen almost to their present height. I refer to the enormous increase in world prices, which is the most striking economic effect of the great war, and has been caused, partly by the inflation of credit and consequent depreciation of money in the belligerent countries, and partly by the decrease in productive output resulting from the war. I need not weary the Council with what, after all, are only economic truisms. It is sufficient to say that, unless India were shut off from all commercial intercourse with foreign countries, prices here must have been affected by the enormous enhancement experienced in the rest of the world. Sooner or later, it was inevitable that the general decrease in the purchasing power of money elsewhere should react upon the purchasing power of the rupee. I shall return to this subject later when discussing the recently published recommendations of the Indian Exchange and Currency Committee, whose report bears witness to the high importance which they attached to the necessity for mitigating for the people of India the economic evils which have fallen upon most of the nations of Europe.

6. General trade conditions have been somewhat unsettled. The upward tendency of exchange during the whole of the year induced caution among merchants engaged in foreign trade, while the shortage of tonnage during the first half was, generally speaking, adverse to business. The net result, however, has been a well-marked increase in the value of imports and exports of private merchandise, although it is of course necessary to remember that a steady rise in prices of commodities imported and exported frequently obscures an actual falling off in the volume of trade. The total value of imports during the first nine months of the year showed an increase of over R16 crores, or 13 per cent., as compared with the corresponding period of 1918, and the total exports, including re-exports, increased by R53 crores, or 28 per cent. The balance of trade, so far as is shown by the statistics of merchandise, treasure, Council Bills and similar remittances was R64,20 lakhs in favour of India as against R35,03 lakhs in 1918, while in the same period of 1917, the balance was against India to the extent of R5,00 lakhs. In imports, the principal increases in the first nine months of the financial year were in sugar, iron and steel, mineral oils, machinery and millworks, railway plant and rolling stock, all of which show a rise of over R2 crores in value. A heavy decrease occurred in the import from April to December of cotton manufactures, amounting to nearly R11 crores. This may be partly explained by difficulties in the export of goods from Lancashire and partly by reduction in demand arising from the height of prices. Conditions have however altered in the last few months, which have witnessed a very marked revival. In the export trade, there has been an increase in the shipment of all staple articles, with the exception of rice and wheat which have been rigidly controlled in view of the shortage of foodstuffs in India. The increase of exports has been particularly marked in the case of raw and manufactured cotton, hides and skins, both raw and tanned, raw jute, oilseeds and tea. The tonnage available for India's trade increased gradually throughout the year The first indication that the available tonnage was sufficient to cope with the cargoes that offered occurred about October last. During the nine months April to December 1919, the net tonnage of vessels entering ports in British India with cargoes from foreign countries and British possessions amounted to 3,62,440 tons, as against 2,70,937 tons during the corresponding period in 1918, and the tonnage cleared during the same period amounted to 4,373,975 tons, as against 3,734,651. Freight rates, which had dropped as a result of the Armistice, steadied at the opening of the year and rose gradually until December, since when they have been somewhat easier. Trade and Commerce.

7. During the year it has been found possible to free trade of a number of the restrictions imposed during the war; and in July and August last all special restrictions on trade with ex-enemy countries were removed. All restrictions on the export of hides and skins, raw jute, oils and oilseeds and a number of other articles have also been removed. On the other hand, it has been found necessary, owing to the general shortage of foodstuffs, to prohibit the export of a number of food-grains from India. Restrictions on trade.

8. An outstanding feature of the year has been the continuance and expansion of company-promotions. During the eight months April to November 1919, 535 Company promotion.

new companies, with an aggregate authorised capital of nearly R166½ crores, were registered in British India and Mysore. The number of companies floated during the corresponding period of the previous year amounted only to 158, with an authorised capital of about R6¾ crores. Widely different views have been expressed regarding this remarkable increase in company flotations. Many people regard it as evidence of our financial strength and of hopeful augury for a great industrial expansion. Others of more cautious temperament are inclined to shake their heads at what they would describe as the prevalent investment mania and predict a severe reaction, accompanied by financial crises, crashes in the share markets and widespread loss. There is, I think, room for both optimism and caution. The war has indicated numerous directions in which India can profitably extend her industrial activity. Our industries generally have made large profits during the last four years and so long as war conditions continued, there was little outlet for their investment; while the difficulty of obtaining new machinery or expert labour made it practically impossible either to start new or to extend enterprises. It is only natural therefore that the conclusion of the war should have been followed by an extension of capital issues, and most people will agree that the readiness with which these have been subscribed affords encouraging evidence of India's ability to finance an era of industrial expansion. There is of course another side to the picture, although I would deprecate this side being given undue prominence. As in the case of all such booms, there is always the danger that, along with a large number of thoroughly sound and well managed concerns, others are brought into existence which are of doubtful soundness. That is inevitable; and sooner or later there will no doubt be what Americans call a "shake-out"; it would require a greater power of prophecy than I can pretend to command to estimate its direction or extent; but there is at present no evidence to show that it is likely to be such as to embarrass the banks or to shake credit generally. Another disturbing sign is the tendency to inflate the shares of perfectly sound and well managed companies to an extent which is not justified by their dividend-earning capacity. In part of course, this is justifiable by the increase in the actual capital value of the plant, which could not now be replaced at pre-war prices; for the rest, it is a speculative movement the adjustment of which need not necessarily involve any widespread crisis It is not a sound or productive process; but its net result is a transfer of money rather than a destruction of capital.

B.—Currency and Exchange.

9. I now turn to those particular problems with which it is my special function to deal. We fortunately have not to record a currency crisis such as that graphically described by Lord Meston last year. In 1918-19 the total absorption of silver coin by the public amounted to no less than R45 crores; in the current year the absorption up to the middle of February has been about R22 crores. September last was the first month for two years during which, taking the whole of India together, there was not an actual outgoing of rupees. The Madras and Rangoon currency circles alone have shown an aggregate net return up to date, but there has been a marked curtailment in the absorption in the Lahore and Bombay circles. I hesitate to draw the conclusion that this result indicates an approach to saturation, though we may regard with satisfaction this substantial slackening in India's demand for silver, coupled as it has been with a very decided diminution in the discount at which currency notes have circulated in the districts. As a result of the lower absorption, our stocks of rupees steadily increased, until at the end of October they reached their maximum of R35½ crores, the highest since 1915. Here, again, it would be premature to argue that this decreased absorption indicates that we have turned the corner and that our currency troubles are over. The increase in our stocks of rupees has been due to the fact that the output of the mints was at last able to overtake the issues. This has been effected, however, at the expense of using up a great deal of our stock of bullion. As the Council knows, in 1918 we were only saved from inconvertibility by the passing of the Pittman Act, which enabled us to procure 200 million ounces of silver from the United States. The last consignment of that silver arrived in India last summer, and until we can see before us the prospect of a regular replenishment of our stocks of silver whenever necessary, the position will not be safe. It is out of the question therefore to contemplate at present any return to the free and unrestricted issue of rupees at district treasuries throughout the country. That is a conclusion which no one will regret more than Government. Sir William Meyer had done much to extend the facilities for the encashment of our notes; the maintenance and increase of those facilities is a cardinal principle of our currency policy: and nothing but the practical impossibility of obtaining ready supplies of silver in the present condition of the world's markets would justify our maintaining the existing restrictions.

Rise in exchange during 1919.

10. While, however, there has been nothing sensational to record regarding the currency events of the year, exchange presents a different story. The history of Indian exchange and the establishment of the gold exchange standard, subsequent to the closing of the mints, has always had a fascination for economic writers and students. It seems likely that, when future text-books are written or present ones are brought up to date, the year 1919 will, like 1893, stand out as marking the close of one well-defined period and the commencement of another. At this time last year the rate for Council drafts stood at 1*s*. 6*d*. per rupee for immediate telegraphic transfers. The era of a stable exchange had, temporarily at least, passed away, but the rise of exchange in its earlier stages gave little indication of the rapidity with which exchange was to soar away from its old standards during the year. Lord Meston explained last year how the rise in exchange followed the breaking away of silver from its pre-war level. That process has continued, and the further changes which have been made in the rates for Council drafts have as before been dictated by the threat of a heavy loss on coinage and the danger to our silver currency caused by the premium on the export of rupees.

Depreciation of sterling.

11. The closing fortnight of the last financial year introduced a new factor into the problem, which few people, and certainly not we in India, had had reason to foresee, and which has rapidly grown to dominate every other feature. On March the 21st, 1919, official support of the American exchange with England, originally introduced as a war measure, was withdrawn, and the dollar exchange, weighted down by the indebtedness of Europe and the balance of trade against her, commenced to fall. England had ceased to be a free gold market and the pound sterling no longer fetched in exchange the 4 dollars and 86 cents which represent the equivalent of the gold sovereign. From 486 the dollar sterling exchange dropped to a level of about 450 at the end of June, and then steadily declined in succeeding months until now it stands in the neighbourhood of 340. The American price of silver ceased therefore to be the one dominating factor in determining the rupee sterling exchange. The rate at which India could acquire silver for coinage no longer depended solely on the price of silver in dollars, but was adversely affected by the smaller number of dollars that could be obtained for the pound sterling. Moreover, the rising price of silver itself received a new impetus early in the current year, through the removal in May of control in America. The price of silver, which then stood in the neighbourhood of 101 cents per fine ounce, at once rose by some 10 cents and, stimulated by the firm and long drawn demand of China, continued to rise until it passed the melting point of the dollar and stands now at about 130. The lower exchange value in America of the pound sterling, and the rapid rise in the price of silver in American currency, necessarily entailed the raising of the exchange value of the rupee, if we were not to see our silver coins smuggled out of the country and our currency notes made inconvertible. In May the rate for Council drafts, which had remained stationary at 1*s*. 6*d*. for over a year, advanced to 1*s*. 8*d*. and this was followed by further rises of 2*d*. each in August, September, November and December till the rate stood at 2*s*. 4*d*.

Rise in price of silver.

Effect on Exch markets.

12. These briefly are the causes leading to the changes made in the rates for Council drafts up to the time of the issue of the Currency Committee's report. I will turn for a moment to the effects these changes have had upon trade. The rate for Council drafts necessarily has a considerable determining influence on the rates at which export and import transactions are financed. The purchase of Councils enables the Exchange Banks to transfer back to India the funds which otherwise would accumulate in England owing to the heavy excess in normal years of exports over imports. An alternative method of so transferring funds is afforded by the import of gold and silver. During the greater part of the current year the embargo on the import of silver has remained in force. The import of gold has, however, been permitted, subject to acquisition by Government at rates notified from time to time, which were ultimately based on the rates adopted for Council drafts; and since June last, when the embargo on the export of gold from America was removed, the banks have to some extent availed themselves of this method of putting themselves in funds in India. But, whether funds are transferred by the purchase of Council drafts or by the import of gold, the rate at which money can be laid down in India, and consequently the rate at which export bills can be bought and outward remittances sold, has been largely governed by the rate for Council drafts. The variations in these rates, and speculation as to further probable variations, have accordingly introduced an element of instability into exchange which has at times hampered the freedom of business operations. Banks were naturally shy both of remitting to London, by the purchase of export bills in excess of their sales of sterling, funds which they might have to re-transfer to India at a higher rate of exchange, and also, on the other hand, of drawing on their balances in London, by their sales of sterling in excess of their purchases, to an extent which might necessitate their remitting funds home at a loss, should exchange fall. Throughout the year therefore their policy has been largely that of the "even keel"; when indications seemed to point to a rise in the Council rate, they were bad buyers of export bills, and when the opposite condition held, bad sellers of sterling.

13. To counteract as far as possible inconvenience to trade on this account, Council and sterling drafts have been offered for sale as freely as our resources in India or at home, as the case may be, have permitted. In April last the sale of Council drafts, which had for some months been suspended, was re-introduced to meet the demand arising from the fact that the export bills calling for finance were more than could be covered by the demand for outward remittance. During the first nine months of the year the demand for Councils persisted with varying degrees of urgency. In general, throughout the year a rise in exchange tempted out remittances and checked bills, thus reducing the demand for Councils, until the gradual decline of the dollar sterling exchange and the rise in the price of silver (suggesting that a further raising of the rate for Councils was due) had the reverse effect, and made the demand for Councils more insistent. This see-saw motion continued until January when a complete reversal of the position occurred. The Currency Committee had just completed their sittings and their conclusions were awaited. The export trade at the time was not urgently calling for finance, and the uncertainty as to the future led a number of remitters to take advantage of the 2*s.* 4*d.* rate then prevailing. A demand for sterling drafts arose and during January Reverse Councils to the extent of £5·4 million were sold.

[Th]e Currency Com[mi]ttee's Report.

14. The above recital of the great changes which the year 1919 has witnessed in the exchange value of the rupee brings me to a consideration of the new orientation which has recently been given to our policy, with the acceptance by the Secretary of State of the recommendations of the Indian Currency Committee. The Committee's report, and the announcement of policy made by the Secretary of State thereon, have been in the hands of the public for the past month. I shall not attempt here any repetition or paraphrase of that portion of the Report which describes with admirable lucidity the issues involved in the problem before the Committee or the considerations which led them to formulate their recommendations. The Government of India have accepted without qualification the Committee's conclusions, which are substantially on the lines which we ourselves recommended in October last, after considering the events of the preceding few months. It is possible that the Secretary of State's decisions on certain of the Committee's recommendations may be the subject of discussion or legislation in this Council. For the present, I will merely indicate the two outstanding features of the Committee's recommendations and suggest to the Council a few brief reflections thereon. These are, firstly, the linking of the rupee to gold, and, secondly, the adoption of a ratio therefor equivalent to one-tenth of the gold contents of the sovereign.

15. On the first point, I think it may fairly be said that there is a strong body of opinion that the Committee's conclusion was inevitable. The Indian currency system has hitherto been based on the axiom that the unit of British currency, namely, the pound sterling, could at all times purchase the amount of gold contained in the sovereign. But the unfortunate divergence between the pound sterling and the amount of gold contained in the sovereign, which became so marked during last summer and has subsequently still further increased, gave rise to a set of conditions which, in the opinion of most people, has rendered it imperative to give to the rupee some foundation less shifting than the sterling to which it had hitherto been linked. Otherwise, by inexorable natural laws, results of serious consequence to this country might ensue. Linked to sterling, the rupee would share with the latter all its fluctuations of fortune. Every rise of prices in sterling-using countries would inevitably, by the mechanical linking of the rupee to the pound, communicate to this country the same shrinkage in the purchasing power of money, and until sterling regained its parity with gold, India would be saddled with an unstable and fluctuating standard of value. We should continue to share with the United Kingdom all the evils of inflated prices. It would be impossible to give any definite gold value to the rupee, or to say what amount of silver a rupee could purchase in America; while restrictions on the movements of the precious metals would have to be continued indefinitely. There is no policy that is without its disadvantages, and it must of course be admitted that the result of linking the rupee to gold is that the rupee-sterling exchange must fluctuate in the same manner as does the dollar-sterling exchange; it cannot be denied that this introduces an uncertain element into that large portion of the trade of India which is with sterling-using countries. Nevertheless, we have to look to the interests of the country as a whole rather than to those of the smaller, though highly important, section which is engaged in foreign trade; and we think that there can be no doubt that the economic interests of India's huge population will be better served by giving the rupee an absolute stability in gold—the ultimate standard of value—than by assigning to it a stability relative to a standard which is itself markedly unstable.

16. As regards the actual rate to be adopted for the ratio between the rupee and gold, fears have been expressed in some quarters that the rate of R10 to the gold content of the sovereign is too high, and may inflict injury upon our export trade. I will not repeat here the reasons, given in the Committee's Report, which decided them not to yield to the influence of such fears. I will only emphasise two considerations, bearing on the choice between a high and a low rate, which seem to me to outweigh all others. The first is that, if the high prices now prevailing in most foreign countries are to be brought into relation with Indian prices on an exchange basis for the rupee at anything approaching the old level of 1*s*. 4*d*. then the consequences to the people of this country would be little short of disastrous; the present level of internal prices would be stereotyped, or, as is more probable, would advance to heights even now unthought of. The interests of the many millions of consumers in India, whose margin of subsistence is at the best none too large, must come before those of any other class. Secondly, a return to a low exchange would very seriously imperil all chance of maintaining the convertibility of the note issue. If the rupee were linked on to gold at a rate of 15 rupees to the gold content of a sovereign, it would be impossible to maintain our silver currency unless the price of silver in America remained below 92 cents; if the rate were 12 rupees to the sovereign, the corresponding silver parity would be 115 cents. At 10 rupees to the sovereign we can purchase silver and coin rupees therefrom up to an American price of 138 cents, which is well above the melting point of the currency of almost every other country. I need not point the obvious moral of this important fact. Only one alternative has been suggested for staving off inconvertibility—the debasement of the rupee or the issue of a debased two rupee piece. In all the press comments on the Committee's report I have seen nowhere any support of a proposition fraught with such obvious political and economic dangers.

Rate adopted.

17. Unfortunately, at about the time that the Currency Committee's Report was published and the announcement made of the Secretary of State's acceptance of the main principles underlying the Committee's recommendations, the dollar-sterling exchange, which had already fallen heavily, took a further downward plunge. In these circumstances, the linking of the rupee to gold necessarily caused its exchange value as expressed in sterling to rise by several pence. The much greater amount of sterling that could be purchased by a given number of rupees naturally provided a great incentive to people, with accumulated funds in India, to remit these to England. The demand for reverse Councils became unprecedentedly great and the exchange markets could have absorbed considerably more than the £11 million of reverse

Further depreciation of sterling and rush for remittances to London.

Councils which we sold during February. This fact resulted in a considerable divergence between the gold rate at which, following the Currency Committee's policy, we have been selling reverse Councils and the actual market rate. Speculators and profiteers have not been slow to take advantage of the situation. The effect of the heavy remittances made, accompanied by a sudden attempt to realise assets, was sensibly to tighten money. I ought to point out to the Council that such monetary stringency as has existed has not been due to any withdrawal by Government of funds from the market, since the proceeds of our sales of reverse Councils have up to date remained in the balances of the Presidency Banks. At the same time a word of caution is called for. The extent to which the Secretary of State's ordinary cash balances can be drawn on to meet reverse Council payments necessarily has a limit, and for the time being that limit has been reached. Further sales will be effected through the medium of the Paper Currency Reserve, but this process would, in the absence of special measures, ordinarily involve some locking up of funds withdrawn from the market. Inflation of currency and credit, as most belligerent countries are now finding to their cost, brings serious consequences in its train, but the evils of an unduly rapid deflation may quite easily be no less serious. The present situation is one that requires caution in handling, and we have been in continuous communication with the Secretary of State in the matter. The general lines of the legislative measures which with the sanction of this Council we propose to take, have been explained in a public announcement made on February the 23rd. The object of these measures is to provide for the continued sale of reverse Councils with the minimum embarrassment to the market through the withdrawal of funds, and I do not think I need say any more on the subject on the present occasion, except to give a warning that a prolonged continuance of the present conditions would inevitably react upon our whole ways and means programme for next year, which, as the Council will gather when I come to speak of our financial operations in the current year, is now, by reason of its very magnitude, far more dependent than formerly upon Indian money conditions.

C.—Gain by Exchange.

Retention of accounts on 1s. 4d. basis.

Cu[illegible] [illegible]ee's

18. The foregoing account of the course of exchange, and of the measures which have now been taken to adjust our policy to the changed conditions of the time, brings me to a matter which is of considerable importance in dealing with our revised estimates and our budget anticipations, and to which I must devote some explanation, if my subsequent remarks regarding the estimates are to be intelligible. Lord Meston mentioned last year the large credit from gain by exchange which arose from the fact that our accounts were still prepared on the basis of 1*s*. 4*d*. to the rupee. That was at a time when the actual exchange rate was no more than 1*s*. 6*d*. Our accounts have throughout the year continued to be kept on a 1*s*. 4*d*. basis and the Secretary of State has decided that, for the purpose of this Financial Statement, the conversion of rupees into sterling and vice versâ should be effected at the old level. This results in a number of complications, particularly as regards our capital and remittance transactions, to which I shall refer in due course. There is, however, this advantage in still retaining the 1*s*. 4*d*. basis for the purpose of our revised estimates, namely, that it is possible to compare the actual results with the anticipations made last year. In order that the Council may judge of the aspect of our budget on the 2*s*. basis, which the Secretary of State has decided to adopt for all our accounts and statistics with effect from the 1st April next, I have had a separate statement prepared (Appendix I) showing the budget estimates of revenue and expenditure for the next year as recast on the new basis.

Treatment of gains [illegible]xchange.

19. The matter with which I am more immediately concerned is the method by which we propose in the revised and budget estimates to treat our gain by exchange. We estimate that during the current year the gross gain, without taking account of certain deductions which I will explain presently, will amount to no less than R22½ crores, as compared with R13¾ crores realised in 1918-19. Two months ago indeed it looked as if the figure would be very much higher, but the large sales of reverse Councils which have been and are being made have considerably reduced the total anticipated for the year.

From the gross gain of R22½ crores have to be deducted certain losses which arise from the same causes that have contributed to the higher exchange value of the rupee, viz., a loss of 4½ crores on rupee coinage and another of 6¼ crores on gold purchases, acquisition and sales, the latter arising from the premium over sterling parity at which the Secretary of State's purchases of gold have been made. After making these deductions, the exchange gain in the current year will stand at 11¾ crores.

20. The first question that arises about these gains is how they actually accrue, what they actually consist of, and how far they represent a real windfall which we can devote to such objects as we think desirable. Putting the matter very broadly, the gain arises over our remittance transactions, and its unprecedented amount at the present time is due to the fact that we are still keeping our accounts on a basis which is now out of accordance with actual facts. This will be clear from a simple example. Every time that the Secretary of State draws on us, through his sales of Council Bills, to the extent of a million pounds, our accounts shew that we have paid out in India R150 lakhs, although, in point of fact, with the rupee-sterling exchange at, say, 2*s.* 8*d.*, we have actually paid out only R75 lakhs; the remaining R75 lakhs accordingly appears in our accounts as gain by exchange. Per contra, when we are selling reverse Councils, our accounts will show a credit of R150 lakhs for every million sterling we have sold, whereas the actual payments made to us by the purchasers of the reverse drafts only amount to R75 lakhs, the difference being debited as loss on exchange. In a similar way a gain or loss, as the case may be, accrues on every other transaction which effects a transfer of funds from or to India, such as the expenditure which we incur in India on behalf of His Majesty's Government and is repaid to us in London, on which there is a gain, or the issue of sterling money orders on London, on which our accounts will show a loss.

Gains from exchange on capital outlay

21. It will be obvious therefore to Hon'ble Members that in these "gains" there is a great element of artificiality, and that it would not be correct to assume that whenever our accounts show a gain on exchange, this represents a real accretion to our resources, for the so-called gain we obtain every time we transfer a million pounds to the Home Treasury is liable to be turned into a loss if the amount has to be retransferred to India. In illustration of this statement, I need only point to our experience in the last two months. Up to the end of December, the Secretary of State sold £29 million of Council Bills on India, on which we realised a gain of 11½ crores; during January and February, we expect to have sold £16½ million of reverse Councils on which we will incur a loss of 12 crores. There are, however, certain of our operations, the exchange gain in respect of which we are entitled to regard as real and permanent. Most of our capital outlay on railways consists of the purchase of machinery and stores in Europe or America. For every million pounds expended on such purchases the actual cost to the Indian taxpayer is now very considerably less than previously, and it would clearly not be right to charge the capital accounts of our railways with amounts which are fictitiously inflated, and have not actually been spent thereon. We have decided therefore, in view of the large sums involved, that our capital accounts should properly get the benefit of the higher rate of exchange prevailing. Accordingly, out of our total gains by exchange of R11¾ crores, in the current year R7¼ crores will be credited to the railway, irrigation and Delhi capital accounts.

Deficiency in Paper Currency Reserve.

22. There remains, then, R4½ crores to be dealt with, and when considering how this should be treated we are met by another fact of capital importance. The definite abandonment for accounts purposes of the 1*s.* 4*d.* rate, and the adoption therefor of a rate of 2*s.* to the rupee, will result in our accounts showing, what after all is merely an accomplished fact, a serious capital loss on our sterling holdings, more particularly on those which form the sterling portion of the Paper Currency Reserve. We hold in our Paper Currency Reserve British securities, mostly consisting of British Treasury Bills, to the value of about £55 million. Up to the present, in the shifting exchange conditions and general uncertainty of the past year, and pending the completion of the Currency Committee's enquiry, our paper currency accounts have remained on a 1*s.* 4*d.* basis and have continued to show these sterling securities as representing 82½ crores of rupees, whereas, when valued on a 2*s.* basis, they are only worth R55 crores and the loss thereon will therefore be 27½ crores. We expect however that if the demand for reverse Councils continues, £13 million of securities will have been withdrawn by the Secretary of State before the close of this year for meeting reverse drafts, leaving still a holding of £42 million of sterling securities in the Reserve, the loss on revaluation of which will amount to 21 crores. There will also be in due course a substantial loss in respect of the gold held in the Reserve, seeing that this is at present held at the rate of R15 to the sovereign and will in future be held at the rate of R10. Altogether, the deficiency in our Paper Currency Reserve, assuming a revaluation on a 2*s.* basis, may ultimately amount to nearly R40 crores.

Importance of making up this deficiency.

23. I wish to emphasize very strongly that the making up of this deficiency is not a matter which can be postponed indefinitely, or can be regarded as of theoretical rather than of practical importance. Quite apart from any question as to our legal responsibilities under the Paper Currency Act, the circulation of our currency notes rests ultimately upon public confidence, and we cannot contemplate with equanimity a position in which the amount of the securities held in the Reserve is patently insufficient to cover the circulation Nor is this by any means entirely a matter of sentiment. These sterling securities consist, as I have said, mainly of British Treasury Bills, which are continually maturing and being renewed. It is on these that the Secretary of State, when he is once more able to resume purchases of silver, or has to meet from the Currency Reserve his purchases of gold or his payments of reverse Councils, will have to depend, and it is clear therefore that any serious deficiency in the amount of securities forming part of the Currency Reserve must be a matter of great concern when looked at from the point of view of the available backing to our currency notes. Ultimately the home portion of our Paper Currency Reserve must be brought back to India in the form of gold or silver, or utilised, through the medium of reverse Councils, to retire notes in India. Whenever that is done, the capital loss at once becomes apparent, since the sterling part of the Reserve turns into fewer rupees than the amount at which it is held in the accounts.

24. The importance of adopting speedy measures to supply this deficiency is obvious; it is equally obvious that this object should have the first call upon the gain by exchange, seeing that they are both due to one and the same cause. After consultation with the Secretary of State, we have decided to appropriate the residue of the current year's exchange gain, amounting to R4½ crores, for meeting this deficiency, and we are accordingly opening a suspense head in our accounts to which this amount will be credited. For next year, as I shall mention later, we may reasonably expect a higher exchange gain seeing that the rupee sterling exchange will probably stand at a much higher average than in the current year; we estimate the residue of the gain, after credit to the capital account, at 18 crores, of which we allocate 6 crores to revenue and 12 crores to suspense for application in due course to meeting the deficiency referred to above I need not remind the Council that as soon as this deficiency in our Currency Reserve has been made up, our revenues will obtain the full benefit of the very substantial savings in our annual home charges resulting from the higher level of exchange. Such savings may not improbably amount to R11 or 12 crores a year, and it is solely because of this prospective accrual to our revenues that, as I shall mention later, we have felt justified, not only in making a very large reduction in the amount of the contribution to be taken from the provinces under the Reforms Scheme, but in contemplating its entire extinction within a measurable time.

D.—Revised Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure, 1919-20.

25. I have now cleared the way for the consideration of our actual incomings and outgoings. The Council will realise of course, from what I have said, that when I speak of a revenue or expenditure of so many millions, rupees have been converted into sterling at the old ratio of R15=£1, though whenever I can do so without inaccuracy, that is, whenever the figures relate to revenue or expenditure raised or incurred wholly in India, I shall speak only of rupees. I might further explain that I do not propose to discuss the details of the revenue and expenditure of the provinces which, as Lord Meston pointed out, are now-a-days more properly the subject of discussion and criticism in the provincial Councils, and I shall accordingly confine my remarks to the revenue and expenditure of the Central Government.

26. I will first deal with the ordinary heads of revenue and expenditure. In framing his estimate of revenue for the current year Lord Meston was faced with a very obscure situation, since it was impossible to forecast the rate at which our main heads of revenue would recover from the traffic and other restrictions consequent on the war. He took, however, an optimistic view. Many must have felt that he had been somewhat sanguine in anticipating a Customs revenue of R20 crores in 1919-20 against a revised estimate of R18½ crores in 1918-19, and a gross traffic receipt from Railways of R80 crores, which was no less than R3½ crores in excess of that anticipated in the revised estimates for the previous year. But events have justified his optimism. At one time it looked as though the revenue from both Customs and Railways would fall materially short of anticipations; railway receipts in particular showed a distinct set-back, mainly on the North-Western Railway as a result of the Punjab disturbances. During the last few months, however, there has been a remarkable recovery, so much so that we now expect that the gross traffic receipts will fall short of the estimate of R80 crores by only R75 lakhs; and this small decrease in estimated receipts is more than counterbalanced by a reduction in working expenses, due to the fact that the home stores issued for expenditure on revenue account have been less than anticipated owing to slow arrivals and have also cost less in consequence of the rise in exchange. The result on the balance is that the net railway receipts will be about R45 lakhs over the estimate. We expect a much larger increase under Customs; the estimate of R20 crores will be actually exceeded by R2⅔ crores. There is likely to be an increase in respect of all the more important tariff heads, particularly the import duties on piece-goods and petroleum, and the export duty on jute, the only head which shows any material falling off from the figure taken in the Budget being sugar. The new export duty on hides is anticipated to bring in just under R1 crore.

Railways.

Customs.

In regard to direct taxation, we now expect that the ordinary income tax will bring us in R1,59 lakhs more than the budget figure, and the Excess Profits Duty just over the budget estimate of R9 crores, of which however R62 lakhs will actually be collected in 1920-21.

Income Tax.

The heads which at present we share with the provinces show smaller variation; we estimate that Stamps will bring Imperial revenues R85 lakhs and Excise about R42 lakhs more than we expected.

Stamps and Excise.

The budget estimate anticipated a receipt of R1½ crores under exchange, but as I have already stated, it is now proposed to credit under a suspense head the net gain in the current year estimated at R4½ crores.

Exchange.

27. The net result will be that our Imperial revenue will be R1,35½ crores against an estimated total of R1,29½ crores. Our ordinary heads of expenditure (excluding for the moment the Military Services) will show a nearly corresponding excess, the largest increases occurring under interest charges on debt and refunds and drawbacks. On the other hand, Famine Relief, for which a provision of R1,62 lakhs was made, has fortunately cost us 64 lakhs less. Taking the whole ordinary expenditure (excluding Military) the total will amount to R69 crores against an anticipated total of R64⅓ crores: and the position as between revenue and expenditure is a great tribute to the accuracy of the estimates prepared last year by Lord Meston and Mr. Howard. It is when we come to take count of the figures of Military expenditure that the result assumes an aspect entirely contrary to their anticipations. They expected a surplus of about £600,000; I have to announce a deficit of £14⅓ million. I shall subsequently devote a special section of this narrative to the revised and budget estimates for Military expenditure, and I need only mention here the broad results as regards the current year. The budget provided for a total expenditure of £41¼ million, made up of £32½ million for ordinary expenditure and £8¾ million representing the current year's instalment of the additional war contribution. In respect of this last item we will actually pay only £1½ million, so that there is a saving on this account of £7¼ million. On the other hand, the Afghan war and the frontier operations are estimated to have cost us £14¾ million, while the ordinary military expenditure shows an excess of £8¼ million, the net result being an excess of no less than £15·8 million.

Military expenditure.

Provincial revenues.

28. All that I need say as regards the provincial estimates is that the provinces, taking them all together, had budgeted for a deficit of nearly R3 crores. In the result, the total provincial revenues are likely to coincide almost exactly with the provincial expenditure. The provinces have had to incur very large additional charges in the shape of allowances or increases of pay to their establishments to meet the present high scale of prices, but this has been more than counterbalanced by the continued growth in their revenues.

E.—Ways and Means, 1919-20.

Removal of previous difficulty due to locale of resources.

29. The Financial Statements of the last few years brought out clearly the problems which we had then to face in order to find money for our disbursements in India, and both Sir William Meyer and Lord Meston explained the great difficulties caused, not so much by the shortness of our total cash resources, as by the fact that much of these were locked up in London. We had accordingly the result that, although at certain times the Secretary of State held very high resources at home, we in India were hard put to it to find the funds necessary to meet not only our own outgoings and the Secretary of State's Council drawings, but also the very heavy disbursements which we had to make during the war on behalf of His Majesty's Government, and for which we received payment in London. As Hon'ble Members know, we were forced, in order to keep our Indian treasuries in funds, to make successive increases in the fiduciary portion of the Currency Reserve and from time to time to finance ourselves by taking large advances from the Presidency Banks and by raising large sums by the issue of Indian treasury bills. With the cessation of military operations in Europe and the gradual removal of war restrictions, it has now become possible for the Secretary of State to re-transfer his surplus balances to us by means of remittances of gold, and that particular aspect of our difficulties which arose from the lock up of our resources in England is I think now at an end. The difficulties of the future are likely to arise, as I shall show when dealing with our ways and means outlook for next year, not from the locale of our balances, but from their total amount.

Liabilities and assets in England and India combined.

30. I will first explain briefly the liabilities we have had to meet and the resources from which we have met them, taking our sterling and rupee resources combined; and for this purpose of course our various remittance transactions, which represent a transference of our cash balances from India to England or from England to India (such as Councils and reverse Councils) will cancel each other. The following statement shows our liabilities and assets in a condensed form :—

Liabilities.		(£ million.)	Assets.	(£ million.)
Capital outlay—			Reduction of cash balances	4·6
Railways . . .	10·2		Rupee loan	14·2
Irrigation . . .	·3		Net receipts from Treasury Bills . .	·2
Delhi	·3		Withdrawal from Special Reserve . .	6·9
	——	10·8	Silver paid for in last year brought to account in current year	11·2
Discharge of debt (including Railway debentures)		2 0	Net gain on exchange and gold operations held in suspense for meeting deficiency in Paper Currency Reserve . .	3·0
Imperial and Provincial loans . . .		·9	Miscellaneous items
Payment of balance of war loan proceeds to Home Government in reduction of £100 million contribution . . .		8·5
Imperial deficit		14·4
Refund to War Office of amount recovered in excess in previous year .		3·0
		39·9		39·9

I will discuss the more important of the above items very shortly when I come to speak of our financial operations in India; I need here, in connection with our combined position, only point out that our total cash balances, in India and England together, were £26 million at the beginning of the year, and we expect to close the year with balances of £21¼ million. The Council will observe that the special reserve of £20 million, which we had built up during the war when our balances were locked up in London, is expected by the end of this year to have been completely used up, £7 million having been used in the current year and £13 million in 1918-19.

31. As regards the operations at the home treasury in London, it is sufficient for me to say that, excluding the Gold Standard Reserve, the Secretary of State started the year with an ordinary cash balance of £8·7 million, together with £6·9 million in the special reserve. We expect that at the end of the year his ordinary balance will have been reduced to £7½ million and that the special reserve will, as I have said, have been entirely used up. The outgoings which he has had to meet have amounted to about £113½ million, inclusive of £32 million paid for gold purchased for shipment to India and £24¾ million for payment of reverse Councils sold in India. These he has met by drawing Councils to the extent of £31¼ million, by his large recoveries from the War Office of £61 million in respect of payments made by us in rupees on their behalf, by using £8 million from his cash balances and the special reserve, and by disposing of investments in British Treasury Bills made on behalf of the Paper Currency Reserve during the war period to the extent of £13 million. His operations are shown very briefly as follows :—

Liabilities.		Assets.	(In millions of £.)
Net expenditure chargeable to revenue	23·3	Reduction of cash balances . . .	1·2
Capital outlay	12·9	Withdrawal from special reserve . .	6·9
Payments for silver	6·9	Transfer to Home treasury from investments on behalf of Paper Currency Reserve	13·1
,, gold	32·1	Recoveries from War Office . .	61·0
Payment of war loan proceeds to Home Government . . .	8 8	Council Bills	31·2
Sterling transfers on London . .	24·7
Miscellaneous items . . .	4·7
	113·4		113·4

32. For ourselves the main interest naturally lies in the position in India, i.e., the various calls on our rupee resources and the various financial operations in which we have been engaged in order to keep ourselves in funds. The nature of these transactions will be apparent from the following summary which shows the actual rupee transactions in India after eliminating adjustments for exchange as far as possible :—

(In crores of rupees.)

Liabilities.		Assets.
Recoverable war expenditure . .	67·3	Reduction of cash balances	5·0
Council Bills	34·5	Credits from silver purchased by the Secretary of State . . .	22·7
Transfers to Currency against withdrawals by the Secretary of State of British Treasury bills held in Reserve	19·7	Credits from gold purchased by the Secretary of State . . .	38·8
Net discharge of Cash Certificates .	2·3	Sterling drafts on London . .	18·4
Capital outlay	3·1	Excess of revenue over expenditure .	13·6
Discharge of debt	2·2	Proceeds of rupee loan . . .	21·3
Imperial and Provincial loans . .	1·3	Net receipts from treasury bills .	3
		Savings Bank, etc , deposits . .	3·6
		Miscellaneous deposit and remittance transactions	6·7
	130·4		130·4

It will be seen that the amount of funds which we have had to find during the year has been R130 crores, of which 67 crores represent expenditure on behalf of the Home Government incurred in India and repaid at home, 34½ crores were for payment of the Secretary of State's Council drawings and 19¾ crores for transfers to the Currency Reserve in India against withdrawals of British treasury bills from the Reserve by the Secretary of State in order to enable him to meet our sales of reverse Councils. One way in which these liabilities have been financed has been by remittances of gold and silver, amounting to 61½ crores, which the Secretary of State has sent to India, while R18½ crores will have been received by us in payment for reverse Councils. To the extent of 80 crores, therefore, our needs in India have been met by drawings against our home balances. I now turn to the means adopted to provide the further 50 crores required.

F.—Government's Financial Operations.

33. The financial operations undertaken by us in India illustrate at once the strength which the Indian money markets have attained, and the difficulty of the problems which we have had, and shall have, to face. Foremost among these operations was the rupee loan. In our estimates framed last year, we provided for the raising of a loan in India of R15 crores. During July and August we opened for subscription a 5 per cent. income-tax free loan, without limit of amount and repayable in 1945-55. The receipts amounted to R21¼ crores, of which R61½ lakhs were received through the Post Office, while over R2 crores of the total amount was tendered in the form of War Bonds which we had agreed to accept in payment for the loan. We made no attempt on this occasion to repeat the special propaganda associated with the two war loans; we had in 1917 and 1918 dipped heavily into the pockets of the investing public; and in the present year we had, competing with us, a very large number of new Company issues. The result of our loan therefore, exceeding as it did the forecast which Lord Meston felt justified in framing this time last year, is of hopeful augury for the future.

Rupee loan.

Cash Certificates.

34. These figures do not include Cash Certificates. In the absence of any special loan propaganda this form of investment has not received a stimulus similar to that administered in 1918-19 by the Second Indian War Loan. Against the net payment of R69 lakhs last year, we estimate a net payment of about R225 lakhs in the current year. The monthly figure for new investments, which during the earlier months of the year stood at from 8 to 9 lakhs, may now be taken at about 6 lakhs, but that for withdrawals has shown a progressive fall during the year and we may now hope to count on these being on a smaller scale. The number of weak holders has been reduced, and investors have a greater inducement to hold their certificates, in order to reap the benefit of the gradually improving interest earned as a certificate approaches maturity.

Savings Banks deposits.

In the last three months of the previous financial year there had been a very marked increase in the net deposits in the Post Office savings banks. This improvement continued until the end of November last, since when there has been some excess of withdrawals over deposits, possibly due to European depositors taking advantage of the high rate of exchange to remit their deposits home. We anticipate that on the balance the net deposits during the year will amount to R1,70 lakhs, the same as last year, against the R2½ crore budget estimate for this year.

Treasury Bills.

35. Lord Meston entertained the hope of being able, during the course of 1919-20, to reduce our treasury bill outstandings by about R22 crores. These hopes were defeated by the large outgoings due to the Afghan war and the frontier operations, which had to be financed mainly by fresh sales of bills; the extent to which this was necessary will be gathered from the fact that at one period in October our outstandings had grown from 49¾ crores on April 1st to no less than 68 crores. During April, May and June our sales had been slightly in excess of the discharges, and during July and August, while the 5 per cent. loan was open to subscription, they were of course discontinued, so that by the end of August our outstandings had been reduced to about 44 crores. In September, however, our treasury position was one of very considerable difficulty. There were heavy maturities of bills to meet, and very high military issues, while the Secretary of State was drawing on us for Councils at the rate of about a crore a week. In consequence, the receipts from the loan were used up soon after it had closed, and at the beginning of September we were obliged to re-introduce the sale of treasury bills and to give what, considering the time of the year, were very tempting rates. Even so, our balances remained so low that all possible sources of assistance had to be exploited. In the first place, as in the preceding year, the Presidency Banks were able to come to our help, and, all told, their advances amounted to 18½ crores. Secondly, we were obliged to obtain from the Council legal authority to increase our fiduciary issue of notes by 20 crores. This method of keeping ourselves in funds was admittedly undesirable, but there seemed every likelihood that we should have to resort to it.

36. Altogether, throughout the first nine months of the year, the treasury position was a difficult one, and from August onwards of continual anxiety. Our payments of Council Bills during those nine months amounted to 30 crores, and the net military expenditure to over 96 crores. The treasury bills sold in excess of those discharged came to about 5 crores only, and the result of our being forced to issue 3 months' Bills in September at favourable rates was that in December (a month in which little revenue is collected and when our treasury balances are at the best of times always low) we had no less than 26½ crores of treasury bill maturities to meet. During December it seemed from day to day that we should have to fall back on our increased powers of note issue, but events happily took a more favourable turn, and with the help of large shipments of gold made to us by the Secretary of State, we managed to turn the corner till, at the beginning of January, our revenue began to come in. Since then our position has been one of comparative ease; and we anticipate that we shall be able to reduce our treasury bill outstandings by the end of the year to the figure at which they stood at the beginning of April last, while the whole of the ways and means advances will have been repaid to the Presidency Banks. Difficulty of keeping Trea[sury] in funds.

37. But we have been sailing very near the wind, and the moral is obvious. Anything approaching 50 crores of treasury bill outstandings, to say nothing of the 68 crores reached in October last, is a dangerous amount of floating debt for India to carry. We have learnt much during the war; in particular we have learnt to finance ourselves in ways that previously would have been thought impossible. But the experience of the last two years has taught us that we must not count on being able throughout the year to keep "floating" an amount of treasury bills so large as has been outstanding during the current year. The slightest tightness in the money markets results in our maturities running off without being replaced by fresh sales, and we have lived continually under the apprehension that we may at any time have to inflate the currency by increasing the fiduciary issue of notes in order to repay our treasury bill maturities. It is imperative, therefore, that we should now do all in our power to reduce our floating debt to more manageable proportions. In so far as this is not effected by funding in our long term loans, we must aim at utilising any surplus, arising from our ordinary revenues, to strengthen our ways and means position and to make us less dependent on the particular form of finance with which I have been dealing. I desire to apply the same remarks to the large ways and means advances which we have from time to time been obliged to take from the Presidency Banks. The financing of public expenditure by means of bank advances is, when made use of to any large extent, no less to be deprecated than a large amount of floating debt, seeing that it is represented merely by an entry in the Banks' books and is therefore in effect a direct inflation of credit. And we have a particular responsibility as regards these ways and means advances, since, unless promptly repaid, they handicap the Presidency Banks' ability to meet demands for money from the business public at a time of busy trade; we have in consequence to be prepared to repay these rapidly whenever a strong demand for money arises, as has been the case during the last few weeks. Lord Meston on March 1st last warned Council of the necessity for regularizing our position in respect of our floating debt and temporary advances; the events of the year have justified that warning; and if we are to be in a position to finance the more rapid development of the country, both moral and material, and to meet the many calls on our resources to which the quickening pulse of the nation will give rise, we must endeavour to safeguard ourselves against a recurrence of the embarrassments which I have described. Necessity for reducing floating debt.

SECTION II.—THE YEAR 1920-21.

A.—Budget Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure.

Budget anticipations.

38. This is the last occasion on which the budget will be framed on the existing division of revenue and expenditure between the Central and the Provincial Governments. The inauguration of the Reforms Scheme involves the abolition of the present divided heads of revenue and expenditure; and under the new financial arrangements the revenue and expenditure pertaining to each particular subject of administration will follow the administrative division. I shall deal subsequently with the broad effect which the new arrangements will have on the respective resources of the Government of India and the provinces. Meanwhile, our budget anticipations are of some importance as affording the latest available information on the manner in which the new arrangements will affect the finances of the Central and Provincial Governments. I do not propose to trouble the Council with many details of our anticipations under the various heads of revenue and expenditure. Broadly speaking, these are based upon the belief that there will be no set back in general prosperity and that our revenues will continue to show that same expansion which has been exhibited in the current year.

Customs.

39. Customs.—I have already mentioned that during the current year we expect to realize a total Customs revenue of about R22⅓ crores. We may reasonably expect that next year freight difficulties will have largely disappeared; on the other hand, we cannot expect that the producing power of European countries will reach anything like the pre-war level, and we can hardly count on that heavy inrush of commodities which might otherwise be expected with the full return of peace conditions. Nevertheless, there seems no reason to anticipate that the steady growth shown in our Customs returns of the current year will not continue, and we are consequently budgeting for R25½ crores, representing an increase of over R3 crores on the expected revenue of the current year. This figure assumes no change in our Customs tariff other than the recently announced abolition of the import duty on silver.

Railways.

Railways.—Under Railways we are budgeting for a continuance of that steady growth in traffic receipts which has been so marked for some years, and we have taken an increase of R4 crores over the R80 crores budgeted for the current year. On the other hand, we anticipate a considerable rise in working expenses in order to continue the renewals and replacements necessitated by the forced neglect during the war, and altogether we expect that the net receipts will be R34 crores or the same as in the current year.

Exchange.

Exchange.—I have already explained the complications arising from the large credit which we get in our accounts from gains by exchange. I will confess at once that it is difficult to frame a reliable estimate of what this figure is likely to be next year. No one can predict the extent to which the pound sterling may depreciate or appreciate during the next twelve months, and it is impossible to say what variations may take place in the rupee sterling exchange which, under the policy recently inaugurated, must rise or fall according as the pound sterling falls or recovers in terms of gold. And apart from the question of the actual rate, it is equally impossible to forecast the actual volume of our remittance transactions in either direction. From the remarks I have already made on this matter earlier in this narrative, it will be clear that a few millions more or less of Councils or Reverse Councils will make a very large difference in the total of the so-called gain. We have assumed that the average rate for the rupee sterling exchange will not be below 2*s.* 6*d.*; on the best estimate we are able to frame, our total gain during the year will amount to about R30¾ crores. Of this amount R12¾ crores will, for the reason which I have already given, be credited to our Railway, Irrigation and Delhi capital accounts. We propose to earmark R12 crores (as against R4½ crores in the current year) towards meeting the deficiency in the Paper Currency Reserve, leaving R6 crores to be credited to our revenue account.

If these anticipations be realised, our total Imperial revenue will be £92½ million (R1,38¾ crores). The estimate assumes the discontinuance of the Excess Profits Duty which was imposed as a temporary measure in March last.

Expenditure.

40. On the expenditure side, the only marked variations which we anticipate under the ordinary heads are—(1) An increase of over £1⅓ million over the current year's expenditure on Posts and Telegraphs, due to the inclusion of large provisions for increases of pay to subordinates and for outlay on stores. (2) Payments of civil furlough and superannuation allowances are expected to rise by £¾ million. (3) Under the 'Miscellaneous' head there is an increase of about £¼ million representing the provision which we have entered for expenditure in connection with the visit of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales; and (4) Under Public Works there is an increase of £318,000 due to the necessity for a somewhat heavier programme of works as the result of enforced economy during the war period. Set off against these are savings of—(1) £263,000 which we anticipate under Interest due to a reduction in our liability to the Home Government in respect of the £100 million contribution, and (2) of £275,000 under Political mainly in respect of special political expenditure incurred in Persia. Altogether, our expenditure under the ordinary heads is expected in the aggregate to exceed that of the current year by £3 million. The most important item, however, is of course our military expenditure. This I am dealing with separately, and merely mention here that we are entering a total figure of £40 million, as against £41¼ million in the current year's budget and the £57 million which we are expecting will actually be incurred. The net result is that we anticipate a total expenditure of £90½ million (R1,35¾ crores), resulting in a surplus of £2 million. This is somewhat higher than that for which we usually budget, but if I have carried the Council with me in the remarks I made just now regarding the grave necessity for keeping down our floating debt, it will appreciate our reason for going somewhat beyond the usual figure. And I hope that I shall make this still further apparent when I come to deal with the heavy ways and means liabilities which lie before us.

Provincial Budgets.

41. During the war we were obliged to ask the provinces not to draw on their balances and to keep their expenditure strictly within the income of the year. This restriction was relaxed for the current year, and the provinces were allowed to budget for deficits aggregating nearly R3 crores, although as I have already mentioned, their revenues have on the whole actually been equal to their expenditure. For next year, although budgeting for revenues materially larger than those of the present year, they anticipate drawing on their balances to the extent of no less than R5¾ crores. A great part of these deficits is accounted for by large schemes of non-recurring expenditure which were necessarily held up during the war, but there is also a striking increase in the budgeted recurring expenditure, due to the very large revisions of the pay of subordinate establishments necessitated by the present scale of prices.

Alterations in super-tax.

42. We hope to attain the results outlined in the preceding forecast without any substantial addition to our Imperial taxation. In only one direction do we propose to modify our present scale of taxes. The present super-tax on the undivided profits of companies and firms has been the subject of considerable criticism on grounds of principle. It is urged that the tax is an incentive to companies to distribute more in dividends than is justified by their real financial position, and penalises those concerns which desire to strengthen their reserves. We have been told that Government would have done better to have levied a tax at a moderate rate on the whole income of companies, instead of applying the ordinary super-tax to companies' undivided profits. In the speech which he made last year on the Excess Profits Duty Bill Lord Meston gave on behalf of Government an undertaking that the question of so readjusting our taxation on incomes as to meet these objections would be considered as soon as the excess profits duty ceased to be levied. That time has now arrived. On the best estimate we have been able to frame we conclude that, if we relieve the undivided profits of companies and firms of the super-tax at present imposed, which runs up to 3 annas in the rupee, we shall lose about R1,76 lakhs. We propose to replace this by a new form of super-tax, similar to the "corporation" or "companies" tax levied in certain other countries, which will be assessed at the flat rate of 1 anna in the rupee upon the total income of each company in excess of R50,000. This will, of course, like the present super-tax, be in addition to the ordinary income-tax, and there will be no refunds. The present super-tax on individuals will remain as at present. The new super-tax on companies is estimated to bring us in about R2,20 lakhs a year, i.e., R44 lakhs more than we lose. We should have been glad to have utilized this surplus in regrading the lower stages of the ordinary income tax in order to relieve the poorer taxpayer and to make the stages more symmetrical. But we have felt it unsafe to do so at present in view of the necessity, to which I have referred, of making provision for meeting our temporary debt and short term liabilities. We shall in any case have relieved industry of the present burden of the Excess Profits duty, and this is as far as we are justified in going at present.

India's further contribution to the war.

13. I have one more explanation to give in connection with the estimates of revenue and expenditure, and it is an important one. The Council will notice, from the detailed information given in a later section that, in both our revised and budget estimates of military expenditure, provision has been made for the payment of certain portions of India's further contribution towards the cost of the war offered to His Majesty's Government in pursuance of the Resolution passed in this Council in September 1918. I would explain that these entries have been made provisionally; their retention will depend on the view which the Council takes as to India's liability in this matter. The Resolution contained a reservation that the offer of this further contribution should be subject to the conditions and safeguards indicated in Sir William Meyer's speech. Those conditions were that the payment would be reconsidered in the event of two contingencies occurring,—firstly, our having to fight on our own frontiers and to incur large expenditure in that connection, and secondly, our being faced with serious financial burdens in other respects, such as a famine or a great currency crisis. The Council will probably agree with me that the second contingency has not arisen. It cannot be said that there has been a grave currency crisis since the Resolution was passed. It is true that there was a serious failure of the monsoon in 1918, but the account which I have given of our revenue and expenditure during the current year will have shown that any loss which we have sustained on this account has been counterbalanced by our prosperity in other directions. But the expenditure of about £15 million involved by the Afghan war and frontier operations of 1919 clearly makes the first condition operative. Whether we should stand on that condition, or should agree to waive it, wholly or in part, is a matter which must be left to the verdict of the non-official Members of the Council. There are considerations of weight on both sides. I will not attempt to balance these here, but in order to provide Hon'ble Members with the facts regarding the amount of the additional contribution and with other material necessary for forming an opinion on the merits of the case, I have appended to this Financial Statement a note on the subject (Appendix II); in that note I have not attempted to draw any conclusions, but have merely endeavoured to set forth what appear to me to be the financial issues involved. Should the Council decide to withdraw, either wholly or partially, from the offer made to His Majesty's Government in September 1918, the necessary corrections will be made in the estimates before the Budget is finally presented.

B.—Ways and Means, 1920-21.

Capital outlay.

14. I will now deal with the demands which we anticipate will fall on our cash resources during the coming year. The most important item is our capital outlay on railways, irrigation and Delhi. We hope to continue the progressive policy initiated last year in the matter of developing our great and profitable railway estate, and are budgeting for a railway capital expenditure of £18 million in England and $4\frac{1}{2}$ crores in India as compared with the £18 million in England and nil in India budgeted for the current year. For irrigation we are budgeting for £580,000, which is all that the Public Works Department can spend until some of the large new projects now begun or under contemplation reach a more developed stage. For Delhi we are entering £800,000, which is however reduced to £736,000 by a credit for gain by exchange. I shall give a further explanation shortly of our capital programme under these three heads. Meanwhile, I must draw attention to the fact that we have here one of those awkward complications which arise from the conversion of rupees into sterling at 1*s.* 4*d.* In the statutory statements appended hereto the figure for railways totals £14·6 million only, in spite of the fact that we anticipate an outlay in England alone of nearly £18 million. This is one of those anomalies which are inevitable with the figures prepared on a basis which is now obsolete, the reason being, as I have already explained when dealing with the treatment of the gain by exchange, that the capital account has to receive a credit which in the case of Railways amounts to nearly 10 crores. When the rupee and sterling figures are then combined upon a 1*s.* 4*d.* basis, the result is £14·6 million. The best way of comparing the railway capital budgets for the current and next years is to say that, while the former was calculated to cost the Indian tax payer 24 crores, the latter will cost him about 19 crores at the rate of exchange of 2*s.* 6*d.* the rupee.

Repayment of War Bonds.

45. Another very important item is the entry of £12·9 million for discharge of debt. From 1920 onwards our various series of War Bonds, issued in 1917 and 1918, will mature, and for some years their repayment will make a severe call on our resources; on August 15th next we have to find over 19 crores for this purpose. I may mention that we are doing what we can to work out such administrative measures as will enable the holders of these War Bonds, many of whom are quite small people living in remote towns and villages, to get repayment with the minimum of formality and inconvenience to themselves, and for this purpose the Securities Bill now before the Council will, when passed into law, be of great assistance in enabling us to waive many of the formalities necessitated under the existing law.

Making up of ciency in P Currency Reser

46. I have already mentioned that in the current and next year we are placing in suspense 4½ and 12 crores, respectively, towards meeting the deficiency in the Paper Currency Reserve. These amounts are, of course, for the time being held in our general balances, but we hope during the course of next year actually to apply 9 crores or £6 million in making up that deficiency.

Finally, we have to meet heavy drawings by the provinces on their balances amounting to over 5½ crores. Altogether, then, we have to meet liabilities amountllion.

Assets.

47. These are heavy liabilities, and our ability to incur the capital outlay proposed will depend to a large extent on the measure to which we can count on obtaining money through our rupee loan. We assume, however, that the Indian money market and the investing public generally will be prepared to take up our loan with something of the freedom shown in the current year. Should this not prove to be the case, we shall be obliged, however reluctantly, to curtail our capital programme. I now turn to the steps by which we propose to meet the liability of £38·6 million. We have, to start with, an anticipated Imperial surplus of £2 million, while we propose to reduce our cash balances during the course of the year by £3·2 million. Next, we assume a loan of 15 crores or £10 million. We hope to receive credits, in respect of stores charged to the War Stores Suspense account, to the extent of £7 million, and to recover £2·7 million from the War Office in respect of cash balances in Mesopotamia which will be transferred to the new administration of that country. As already stated, we hope to obtain a credit of £8 million from exchange gain, and the balance of our requirements will be found from Savings Bank deposits and other miscellaneous transactions. These transactions are summarised in the statement below :—

48. I have already tried to explain the difficulty of making a reliable estimate of our probable remittance transactions between England and India during the coming year, and I do not think therefore that it will serve any useful purpose for me to go into any details here as to the probable ways and means positions in England and India separately. All I will mention is that we expect that the Secretary of State's disbursements will amount to about £46 million, and that he will be able to meet these from the recoveries which he will make from the War Office in respect of payments made by us in India on their behalf and by selling Council Bills for £8⅓ million.

SECTION III.—NOTES ON CERTAIN SPECIAL HEADS.

A.—Military Services.

inancial results the year.

49. The net military expenditure (i.e., deducting receipts) was £14½ million in 1918-19. The budget estimate for 1919-20 was £41,195,000. This figure included a provision for the payment to His Majesty's Government of an additional war contribution of £8,695,000. In the Revised estimate a sum of £1,541,700 has been included provisionally on account of this additional war contribution, the amount being made up as follows:—£246,700 for the effective charges of the additional body of Indian troops, being the equivalent at £1=R15 of an instalment of £500,000 of the special contribution; £995,000 for war pensionary charges of Indian troops and their British officers; £300,000 for war pensionary charges of British troops. The grounds for the reduction of the contribution for effective charges to a payment on account of £500,000 are explained in paragraph 6 of the Appendix dealing with this special contribution. Omitting these special payments, the net expenditure in 1919-20 is now expected to amount to £55,475,000 against a Budget estimate of £32,500,000. The increase over the Budget estimate thus amounts to £22,975,000. The Budget, however, also included a reserve of £871,000 under the Army head to meet unforeseen expenditure. The excess over the specific provision is therefore £23,846,000. Of this, £14,736,000 represents the cost of the operations against Afghanistan and the tribes on the North-West Frontier.

ature of the war penditure in the rrent year.

50. In presenting the military estimates for the current year, it was assumed that the year 1919-20 would be one of demobilisation. Unfortunately, as the Council are well aware, this anticipation has not been realised. The details of the campaigns on our frontier are known to the Council and I need not dilate on them, other than to emphasize the fact that the crisis arose at a time when the resources of India, both in men and material, had been sorely taxed by the Great War. Owing partly to deficiencies due to this cause and partly to the insistence, by present day public opinion, on a higher standard of efficiency in the military organisation, and of comfort for the fighting personnel, expenditure on a scale hitherto unprecedented in India had to be undertaken immediately. We were compelled not only to postpone the disbandment of considerable bodies of additional troops which were raised in India in 1918, but also to adopt every expedient which economises human life at the expense of mechanical contrivances and which makes life more comfortable on field service. Our total bill of £14¾ million includes special rations and special clothing for the effective personnel of the army; special hospital equipment and diet; the provision of ice plants, electric fans and lights, mobile water filtration plants, and pure water supply; the provision of huts for troops where in previous campaigns tents sufficed; the provision of mechanical transport and their workshops, motor ambulance convoys, additional animal transport required to carry the special war material entailed by modern requirements; the construction of roads, in localities where construction is specially expensive; the provision of ambulance trains and special rolling stock for troop movements; the survey and construction of special railways; the installation of ropeways; the provision of lethal munitions of modern character, heavy guns, machine guns approximating to the scale adopted in the Western theatres of war, armoured motor batteries, aeroplanes and their fighting equipment; improved equipment for defences involving heavy expenditure on barbed wire and defensive posts. The cost of all this has been higher than it might otherwise have been. We were at the end of 5 years of war ; high prices ruled everywhere and these affected not only the cost of material but the cost of our Indian recruits, including followers. But the expenditure was unavoidable ; when it is a question of war, purely financial considerations must necessarily give way.

Excess of ordinary military expenditure.

51. Apart from special war contributions and the cost of the operations on the Frontier, the expenditure in the current year is estimated to exceed the specific provision in the budget by £9,110,000. The occurrence of this excess expenditure, in addition to the direct liabilities of the Frontier operations, has engaged our anxious attention for some time past, and in November last a Sub-Committee of the Executive Council was appointed to investigate the causes contributing to the excess demand. In the result, while steps were taken to enforce every practicable economy, extra expenditure to the amount now stated has been found to be inevitable. It is due in the main to two well-defined causes. Firstly, a very large proportion, amounting to over 7 crores of rupees, consists of items which can best be described as residuary obligations arising out of the great war. Secondly, the operations on the North-West Frontier reacted directly or indirectly on the ordinary heads of expenditure. The clearest example of the former category is an item of £2,800,000, which is required to pay the war gratuity admissible under the Royal Warrant to our permanent complement of regular British officers and soldiers for service in India during the period of the war. This represents an element in the contribution which we make to His Majesty's Government under the arrangement whereby we undertook to bear the cost of the normal garrison in India. It is a non-recurring charge, the liability for which was not known at the time of the preparation of the budget for 1919-20. The gratuity payable to our Indian soldiers for their service overseas in the great war has been provided for, but it does not appear in the present account, since the cost is chargeable to His Majesty's Government. Then, again, we had to face an all round increase in the pay of the personnel of the army. The process was initiated by His Majesty's Government at home with effect from 1st July 1919, and we, as a necessary consequence, have conceded a similar increase in the pay and furlough pay of British officers and soldiers serving in India. The cost of this will amount to about £2 million inclusive of medical services and miscellaneous British personnel. As a corollary to this, we have found it necessary to continue the grant to Indian troops of the increase of pay represented by the six-monthly bonus sanctioned in 1918. For the present, the increase is a temporary measure, which will require to be reconsidered in the light of the proposals which may be put forward by the Army in India Committee for the future organisation of our Indian Army. So long as the six-monthly bonus was paid for the specific purpose for which it was first granted, namely, the stimulation of recruitment for overseas forces, its cost was chargeable to His Majesty's Government, but its continuance in the circumstances which I have stated will now involve an expenditure of £270,000 from Indian revenues. We have also granted rewards consisting of cash grants and grants of land to Indian officers and men who have rendered distinguished service during the war, and have sanctioned increases of pay to various Indian establishments including followers. The cost of these measures will amount to £130,000. We have also had to meet obligations entailed by the higher standard of military equipment necessitated by the experience gained during the great war. We have added permanently to our establishment 6 Ford Van companies, together with workshops for repairing motor vehicles. It has been necessary to provide more animal transport units, and to make certain additions to the cadre of the Supply and Transport Corps, consequential on the grant of free rations to Indian troops and the development of transport services, and in the Army Veterinary Services and other administrative establishments. These various undertakings are estimated to cost about £460,000. Food charges account for an increase of £550,000 owing to continued high prices ; the cost of the Aden Operations will exceed the budget estimates by £110,000 ; the expenditure on certain services, e.g., Port defences, Coastal patrol service, etc., by £150,000 ; the railway charges for military traffic and the hire of bullock transport by £280,000 ; and the expenditure on the purchase of stores in India for the Royal Air Force and for mechanical transport by £70,000. An additional sum of £600,000 will also have to be paid to the War Office in respect of the non-effective charges of British troops serving in India, partly owing to a rise in the rates of pensions and partly in connection with the settlement of certain claims which the War Office has against us on account of the ordinary charges of British troops with previous Indian service whose ordinary pensions did not mature owing to death or disability in the Great War.

52. The expenditure on Military Works will exceed the budget estimates by £1,315,300. The excess consists very largely of items which, though adjustable for accounting reasons against the ordinary estimates, are more or less directly attributable to the Afghan war. Thus, the increase of Air Force establishment involved the provision of buildings for the accommodation of the extra personnel and for housing the valuable equipment which an Air Force requires. The works will, however, be of permanent utility and accordingly it would not be correct to charge their cost to the operations. The same is the case with the expenditure on Frontier roads (£180,000) and mechanical transport workshops (£133,000). Apart from this quasi-war expenditure, we have been compelled to provide accommodation on an enhanced scale for families of British units arriving from England at a cost of £140,000. This measure has been taken under the direct advice of His Majesty's Government. At the same time considerable expenditure has been incurred on reconstructing and improving the lines of Indian troops and on providing the buildings necessitated by the provision by Government of free rations for Indian troops.

et, 1920-21. 53. The budget provision for next year has been taken at £40 million. Out of this sum £1·45 million has been provisionally earmarked for payment of instalments of the additional contribution to His Majesty's Government, namely, £·25 million being the equivalent at R15=£1 of a second instalment of £·5 million for effective charges and £1·2 million for non-effective charges and the balance of £38·55 million will be available for the services of the army. The detailed grants working up to this figure have not yet been definitely settled, the reason for this being that the disturbed conditions which still prevail in India and the Middle East have rendered it equally impossible to obtain any clear assessment of our normal military liabilities in the future or to guarantee immediate reduction to any peace standard it may be decided to adopt. This matter also is being specially examined by the Sub-Committee of His Excellency the Viceroy's Council, to which reference has previously been made, and the problem with which they have to deal is one of unusual difficulty. But I may say at once that, if India is to maintain in an efficient state an army of the strength required for the adequate defence of her frontiers, the cost of the military services will in future be much in excess of the sum which we have been accustomed to allot in our budget for this purpose. In dealing with the revised estimates I have mentioned a number of the new permanent liabilities which have been brought upon us by the European war and the only point which I desire once more to emphasize is that we obviously cannot revert to the pre-war standard of equipment, since it would be neither right nor humane to deny to our soldiers the advantage which an improved equipment ensures: and the new equipment of which aeroplanes, improved artillery and mechanical transport may be taken as the most conspicuous examples, is extremely expensive both in initial cost and cost of maintenance. It is recognised, on the other hand, that the extended employment of up-to-date weapons and war material generally should render feasible certain reductions of personnel and every possible economy of this kind is being carefully studied. The object in view will be the possession of an army of the minimum strength compatible with safety, but fully mobile and equipped with all the requisites of war, well paid, well housed, and well clothed. But much still remains to be done to establish our army on this basis and in the ensuing year our expenditure will be specially high owing to the fact that we must incur a certain amount of initial outlay on the purchase of new equipment of various kinds, on the construction of hospitals and barracks and other important military requirements. Initial outlay of this character will so far as possible be spread over more than one year, but the extent of this process is limited by certain vital considerations, and it will be clear that until we can feel greater confidence in regard to possible dangers threatening us from the Middle East, our military expenditure will necessarily represent more than the cost of the army we hope to maintain in settled peace conditions. The very full data collected by the Army authorities have been exhaustively scrutinised; every feasible economy has been effected, and the provision of £40 million is the least which can safely be inserted in the budget. And I must warn the Council that if the operations on the frontier should continue into the ensuing year, even the provision now proposed will not suffice.

B.—Railways (Capital Outlay).

54. The Railway Capital expenditure on State-owned lines included within the Railway Programme, including both open lines and lines under construction, amounted to £1,978,700 in 1916-17, £2,529,300 in 1917-18 and £4,154,500 in 1918-19. In the Budget for the current year provision was made for £17·7 millions which, owing to failure of English supplies, it has not been possible to utilize fully. The latest estimate of expenditure is placed at £11·5 millions, which will be reduced to £10,211,000 by gains on exchange.

55 I have already mentioned that next year it is proposed to raise the provision to £18 millions for home and 4½ crores for Indian expenditure. The major portion of this sum will be devoted to works of improvement on existing lines and especially to provision of traffic facilities to enable railways to meet the increased demand on their resources which has followed the revival of trade. It is also hoped to make a beginning in replacement of the lines which it was necessary to dismantle during the war, and a sum of £212,000 has been allotted for this purpose. Progress in this respect is, however, directly dependent on the supply of materials, unfortunately still limited. In view of the pressing necessities of open lines it is not possible to provide at present for any considerable amount of new construction, but a sum of £630,000 has been allotted to enable a start to be made on some of the more urgent projects held in abeyance during the war.

56. Detailed figures showing the Capital outlay on all State lines up to the end of each year from 1916-17, and the net return obtained after deducting working expenses and interest charges will be found in the Secretary's memorandum. The return on railway capital (excluding interest charges) was estimated in the current year's Budget at 5·51 per cent. We now estimate it at 5·68 per cent. in consequence of the small increase in net railway earnings resulting from the gain by exchange creditable to the railway revenue account. For next year we put it at 5·51 per cent. The charges for interest in the current and ensuing years work out to 3·82 and 3·85 per cent. respectively on the capital outlay, so that the final net profit on railways is 1·86 and 1·66 per cent. respectively. These interest charges include certain annuity and sinking fund payments which really go towards the discharge of debt

C.—Irrigation (Capital Outlay).

57. Details regarding the financial position of our great irrigation undertakings will be given in the Secretary's memorandum, which will bring up to date the information given in connection with previous Financial Statements. The percentage of net profit on productive works was 6·08 in 1918-19, and is calculated at 7 in 1919-20. In the coming year we calculate it as 7·17.

58. The total length of main and branch canals and distributaries of State irrigation works of all classes in operation during the year 1918-19 was 66,120 miles which was 644 miles greater than the mileage in operation in 1917-18. It is expected that an additional length of 425 miles will have come into operation before the close of the year 1919-20. The total culturable area commanded by these canals amounted to nearly 52 million acres of which nearly 25 million acres were irrigated in 1918-19, and it is anticipated that during the current year the canal irrigated area will aggregate 26¼ million acres. During 1918-19 no new works of any importance were opened for irrigation. Irrigation on the Punjab triple canal system, i.e., the Upper Jhelum, Upper Chenab and Lower Bari Doab canals has developed satisfactorily. The area irrigated during the current year is estimated at 1·7 million acres which is 363,000 acres in excess of that irrigated in 1918-19. The total irrigable area contemplated in the project estimate is 1¾ million acres, and it will thus be seen that this acreage has practically been attained. Besides the canals actually in operation, there are 35 schemes which are either under construction, awaiting sanction or being examined by the technical experts. It is estimated that if all schemes under consideration or projected are eventually carried out, they will extend the benefits of canal irrigation to an additional area of about 10 million acres; their estimated cost amounts approximately to £40 millions sterling, from which a return of about 7 per cent. is anticipated.

59. Progress of work on canals under construction has been maintained satisfactorily, though it has been limited by shortage of officers, large numbers of whom were absent on military duty and have only recently returned. It is anticipated that the new permanent headworks of the Ganges Canal will be completed during the ensuing year. Of the more important schemes, that for the Sarda Kichha Feeder has received the sanction of the Secretary of State, and the local Government is now making arrangements for the execution of the work. A modified project for the Sarda canal for Oudh, of which the Sarda Kichha Feeder forms a part, is under preparation by the local Government. The Grand Trunk canal project in Bengal which is designed to connect Calcutta with Eastern Bengal and Assam has recently been submitted to the Secretary of State for sanction. It is proposed to finance this work, which is estimated to cost R3,09 lakhs, from capital funds. A detailed project for the irrigation of the Sind Sagar Doab is now under consideration; as now designed, the scheme will provide for an annual irrigation of about 2 million acres; the total cost of the project is estimated at 9,28 lakhs and the net revenue, after deducting working expenses, is estimated at R91½ lakhs a year. This scheme, if carried out, will bring prosperity to a desert tract with a very low rainfall, and it is believed that it will at the same time bring in a return of nearly 10 per cent. to the State. Of the other large schemes described last year as under investigation, those for the Sukkur barrage and the Bhakra dam are still under investigation and projects are being framed by the Governments of Bombay and the Punjab. The Sutlej Valley project referred to last year has moved a stage forward; the scheme was discussed by representatives of all parties concerned in December last, and a detailed project is now being prepared.

D.—New Delhi.

60. The outlay for the year 1919-20 under this head, after allowing for a credit of R1 lakh for gain by exchange, is expected to amount to R50 lakhs as compared with a budget grant of R45 lakhs, an additional sum of 6 lakhs having been allotted in order to push on with the preparation for next year's work. It was pointed out last year that the recurring expenses of the present make-shifts were adding appreciably to the cost of the New Capital of India. Fortunately it is now possible to contemplate a programme which will enable the main buildings in the New City to be completed by the end of 1924, and in pursuance of this programme the grant for 1920-21 has been fixed at R1,10 lakhs, after allowing for a credit of R10 lakhs for gain by exchange. Sir E. Lutyens and Mr. H. Baker came out from England towards the end of 1919 and have been busy in connection with the scheme. Among the more prominent projects on which they have been employed are the chambers for the new Legislative Councils, the Medical Research Institute, the War Museum and the proposed memorial arch to the soldiers of the Indian Army who fell in the Great War.

Conclusion.

61. As I have said before, this is the last occasion on which we shall present a budget based on the combined accounts of the Provincial and Central Governments; and next year will see the introduction to the new Legislative Assembly of a purely Imperial budget. We are now engaged in working out the many changes in rule which will be required in order to give the provinces the financial independence which the new order of things demands. If the supervision of finance and the control of expenditure by the Central Government have seemed at times to have been unduly rigid, too careful of the established rule and canon, I would ask our critics to cast their memory back to the days, not so long past, when our resources were inelastic, when a single season's scarcity could produce a financial crisis, when Indian capital came forth with reluctance to support our loans. We have succeeded to days of gradually swelling revenues, of somewhat easier ways and means; but I think that the Standing Committees of the new Councils and their new Finance Members will do well if they exercise their powers with something of the caution which has marked our expenditure control of the past. There is no truer canon of finance than the old axiom, sanctified by the experience of ages, magnum vectigal est parsimonia. The extent of the finances which will be at the disposal of the reformed governments is, I know, a subject of live interest to this Council. The Joint Report of 1918 anticipated an Imperial deficit of 13½ crores, that deficit being made up by contributions from the provinces. This would have left the provinces in the aggregate with a net surplus of about 2 crores. We have reconsidered the position in the light of the probable gains from exchange, and have done so in only one spirit, the genuine desire to reduce the contributions to the lowest possible figure consistent with safeguarding the requirements of the country as a whole. There is no question of Government of India finance against provincial finance; the provinces are no less interested than is the Central Government in the maintenance of our great Imperial services; the Central Government is equally concerned that provincial reform and provincial development should not be strangled by inadequate finance. After considering the effect of the present budget as arranged on a 2 shilling basis, we think that we are justified in assuming for the present a reduction of the Imperial deficit to 6 crores, and we have provisionally indicated this figure to Lord Meston's Committee on Financial Relations as the basis of their inquiry into the apportionment of contributions. We have further indicated that we propose to assume the liability for extinguishing these contributions within a measurable time. The result will be that, adopting the figures of the provincial budgets for next year, as at present known to us, the Local Governments will be 1[illegible] crores a year better off than under the present division of revenues between the Government of India and themselves.

62. It would indeed have been a grateful task had I been able, in presenting to the Council the revised estimates of the present year, to exhibit a result more in keeping with the anticipations expressed by Lord Meston on the 1st March last year. He looked forward to a moderate surplus, and to the extinction of some 22 crores of temporary debt. The Afghan war has involved us in a heavy deficit, and our Treasury Bill liability shows no reduction on the figure outstanding at the beginning of the year. But the picture is not entirely devoid of brighter features. Our revenue has more than fulfilled the expectations formed last March; our silver reserves stand reasonably high; and we have managed to finance ourselves up to the present without utilizing the power taken last September to increase the fiduciary note issue. For the coming year we take, and experience shows that we are justified in taking, an optimistic view of the growth of our major revenue heads. Our expenditure will be swollen by the provision which we have had to make for the revision of establishments due to the continued prevalence of high prices; but the dominant feature on the expenditure side of our budget is the high figure which we have been obliged to insert on the Military account. I have already explained at length the circumstances under which we have made this provision. I do not desire to base it on any defined threat or menace from the Middle East; but no one cognisant of the facts can be free from apprehension of the consequences which may ensue to the peace of India from the sinister movements now on foot in that quarter; and it would be little short of criminal if, in the circumstances, we failed to provide during the coming year the finance essential to keep our Army up to the necessary standard of efficiency. The sum we have provided is, I am persuaded, the bare minimum required. But apart from the special requirements of the coming year, I would again remind the Council that modern armies, with their demands for latter day equipment, for mechanical contrivances and technical establishments, are bound to be more expensive than the armies of the pre-war era. It is unnecessary to quote European analogies; but the Council will be interested to know that Japan has made a provision for its military expenditure in 1920 which is more than three times that of 1918. We hope, however, to finance these increased demands on our resources, both civil and military, without any additional burden to the country other than that involved in the rearrangement of the super-tax to which I have already alluded. On the capital side we contemplate a railway programme which will, we hope, satisfy those who are interested in the development of this great asset that we are not failing in our duty to repair the deficiencies of the years of war; and we look forward to meeting the first of the heavy liabilities involved by our short-term loans, namely, the repayment of the 19 crores of War Bonds which fall due in August next. As I have already reminded the Council this programme can only be realised if India gives a liberal response to our rupee loan in the coming year.

Summary; The current year.

The year 1920-21.

63. As for the future, the revenues of India are steadily and surely expanding; and their expansion affords a guarantee of their adequacy to meet such problems of development as immediately confront the administration of the country. Our pre-occupations lie rather in the provision of ways and means to meet our capital liabilities. The provinces will be drawing on their accumulated balances; and they will before long be asking for a share in the Imperial loans, or raising loans themselves Our outstanding liabilities are not light. We have to meet twenty-five crores of war bonds in 1921, eleven crores in 1922, over two in 1923, and our terminable loan of five crores also falls due in that year. We have a breathing space in 1924; but in 1925 we have further payments to make of four crores and in 1928 we have to face a heavy maturity of twenty-five crores. Meanwhile our railways will not cease to demand fresh provision of capital money, and we have heavy irrigation projects in view The solution of the problems of the future depends therefore on the growing accumulation of capital wealth in India, and the interest which the Indian money market evinces in our loan issues. We had evidence during the war of what India could invest under the inspiration of patriotic motives; the response to our last year's issue afforded a proof that business India accepted our loan as a sound and profitable security. With such proofs before us, and in the belief that the social and material development of the country will carry with it an increased sense of responsibility for the economic use of its expanding resources, we need not hesitate to look on the future with a full measure of confidence and trust.

* The entry against this head represents that portion of the saving in Home charges arising from the adoption of the 2s. rate in lieu of the 1s. 4d. rate which, under the proposals in the Financial Statement, will be credited to a suspense head for meeting the deficiency in the Paper Currency Reserve. Full credit for the saving having indirectly been taken in this statement by the adoption of the 2s. rate for conversion, it is necessary to show the transfer to the suspense head as an item of expenditure.

APPENDIX II.

India's additional contribution to the war, 1918.

(Referred to in paragraph 43 of the Narrative.)

On the 10th September 1918 the Council passed a resolution offering a further contribution to His Majesty's Government towards the cost of the European War. The resolution ran as follows:—

"That this Council recognises that the prolongation of the war justifies India's taking a larger share than she does at present in respect of the cost of the military forces raised, or to be raised, in this country, and recommends that such larger share be to the extent and under the conditions and safeguards indicated in the speech of the Hon'ble the Finance Member in moving this resolution."

The extent of the contribution is briefly as follows. In the first place, the Government of India offered to pay certain sums in respect of effective charges, made up of the normal cost of certain numbers of additional troops which had been raised in India during the war to maintain the forces in the various theatres of operations; the increased emoluments sanctioned in 1918 for the Indian troops whose normal charges were to be met from Indian revenues; the outlay on the provision of temporary accommodation for additional Indian troops raised during the war; and the cost of the European section of the Indian Defence Force. In the next place, the Government of India offered to take over the liability for certain non-effective charges arising out of the war. The conditions and safeguards referred to in the resolution were that the payments would be reconsidered if we should have to fight on the frontiers of India and to incur large expenditure in that connection, or if we were faced with grave financial burdens in other respects, e.g., in consequence of a famine, or a great currency crisis.

2. Sir William Meyer estimated the amount of the proposed contribution for effective charges at about £33½ million, on the assumption that the European War would terminate about the end of 1919-1920. He estimated the liability for non-effective charges roughly at £11½ million, the payments being spread over a number of years. Owing to the earlier cessation of hostilities, the amount of the additional contribution for effective charges was recalculated in the Budget for 1919-20 at £19·4 million, viz., £12·2 million payable in 1918-19 and £7·2 million payable in 1919-20. It was intended to meet £4 million of the first instalment of this obligation from cash balances, and £6 million of the second instalment from the proceeds of the excess profits duty imposed last year; and it was anticipated that it would be possible to meet the balance of the contribution for effective charges, as well as the annual payments towards non-effective charges, from the yield of the revenues of India on the existing basis of taxation.

3. The present position is that one of the contingencies mentioned by Sir William Meyer, namely, a war on the frontiers of India, has been realised. The operations on the frontier will cost according to the latest estimates £14¾ million in the current year. The details of this war expenditure are explained elsewhere; the object of this paper is to give Hon'ble Members material to enable them to come to a conclusion whether in view of the facts just stated they will decide to maintain, withdraw from or modify the undertaking to assist His Majesty's Government by making a certain contribution towards the expenses of the European War. The financial issues involved are complicated, and it will be necessary to enter into some detail. The two portions of the contribution, which relate respectively to effective and non-effective charges, are dealt with separately.

4. The precise nature of the liability which the Government of India proposed to take over in respect of non-effective charges was explained by Sir William Meyer in his speech on the 9th September 1918. It was agreed to meet the cost of all extraordinary pensions (i.e., wound, injury and family pensions) which had been, or might be, awarded for casualties occasioned by the war among Indian troops and followers and British officers of the Indian army. It was also agreed to meet the cost of the "service share" of similar charges relating to British troops including both those who belonged to the Indian establishment at the outbreak of the war and those who had served in India at some previous time. The obligation in either case was to be in lieu of that assumed in 1914, with the approval of the Legislative Council and the consent of the Houses of Parliament, namely, to pay to His Majesty's Government the cost of the ordinary pensions, or the service share of ordinary pensions, which might be saved to Indian revenues owing to war casualties.

5. The new contribution in respect of non-effective charges was estimated in 1918, on rough data then available, to involve an aggregate expenditure of £11½ million. Actuarial calculations recently made in England have, however, revealed that if the terms of the original offer are strictly adhered to, the aggregate payments to be made in this connection will amount to at least £33 million, the very large rise over the previous estimate being due partly to heavier casualties and partly to an increase in the rates of extraordinary pensions of British soldiers. As soon as the result of the calculations was notified to the Government of India, it was represented by them to His Majesty's Government that the liability in respect of the net cost of extraordinary pensions of British troops should be limited to a sum which would not largely exceed the figure included on this account in the original calculations. It was also stipulated that the payment of the donation should liquidate any claim which His Majesty's Government might have on Indian revenues in respect of the service share of extraordinary pensions of British troops who fought in the war and had previous Indian service but had ceased to belong to the Indian establishment before the war began. The precise terms of India's offer in respect of non-effective charges now stand as follows. India would bear the cost of the extraordinary pensions relating to Indian troops and followers and to British officers of the Indian army. The net cost of this is equivalent to an immediate or capital payment of about £5 million. In respect of the net cost of the extraordinary pensions of British troops, India would contribute a capital sum of £4 million, and this contribution would be in full settlement of any claims which His Majesty's Government may have against India in respect of troops who fought in the war and had previous Indian service but had ceased to belong to the Indian establishment before the war. It may be mentioned that it has been a long standing practice, dating from 1870, for India to bear the Indian service share, if any, of all pensions of British troops employed in British campaigns, while His Majesty's Government do the same in the case of Indian campaigns. Apart, therefore, from the larger question which now comes before the Council, the Government of India have, in the matter of the contribution for non-effective charges, formulated a settlement which, judged in the light of the previous proposals, must be regarded as satisfactory to Indian revenues and if the matter is to be re-opened, it may result in new claims being pressed against India which it would be difficult to resist. The contribution, if it stands, would not of course be paid in one lump sum of £9 million: it would be proposed to spread the payment over a number of years.

6. To turn next to the additional contribution for effective charges, the various items have been mentioned in paragraph 1 of this paper, and they were also fully explained in Sir William Meyer's speech of the 9th September 1918. In respect of this additional contribution, a provisional credit of £13·1 million has already been afforded to His Majesty's Government in our war accounts of 1919. In the budget estimates for the current year, there was provided a similar credit to His Majesty's Government of the sterling equivalent of rupee expenditure aggregating R10·8 crores. This figure on a recent reassessment now stands at R7·65 crores, the reduction being due to the correction of an over-estimate in respect of the item of accommodation, but mainly to the fact that in our revised calculation it is proposed to exclude, with effect from 1st April 1919, any payments on account of the strengths of Indian troops definitely earmarked for the post-bellum overseas garrisons and actually serving overseas during 1919-20. It is necessary, however, to mention that if this sum of R7·65 crores were to be paid, it would cover the normal cost of certain Indian troops in excess of our ordinary peace establishments which have been actually utilised for the Afghanistan operations. Finally, it is proposed that if the decision to pay the contribution for effective charges is maintained, this sum also will be liquidated by instalments spread over a number of years, and it is for this reason that a provisional insertion of £500,000 has been made both in the revised estimates for 1919-20 and in the budget for 1920-21.

7. The financial issues involved in the proposition which is now placed before Hon'ble Members may be summarised as follows. The contribution for non-effective charges would involve an aggregate payment from Indian revenues of £13·5 million, spread over a period of 20 years and corresponding to a capital sum of £9 million.

The contribution for effective charges would aggregate £18·2 million. The total payment for effective and non-effective charges would thus stand at £31·7 million, of which £13·6 million have already been paid to His Majesty's Government in 1918-19.

8. One of the conditions attached to the guarantee having become operative, namely, the occurrence of war on the frontier, it might on the one hand be justly urged that the cost of the frontier operations (£11$\frac{3}{4}$ million) should be deducted from the contribution promised. On the other hand, it might be pointed out that, even if the cost of the Afghan war be added to the cost of the further contribution as now estimated, the net result (£46$\frac{1}{2}$ million) would exceed by very little the original estimate of £45 million framed by Sir William Meyer in 1918, which was accepted by India as the amount of her liability. Secondly, there is the important consideration that the excess profits duty, which is expected to bring in 9 crores, was specially imposed to pay for the portion of the contribution falling due in 1919-20. Also, as shown in paragraph 6 above, a certain sum, calculated at £1 million, would, if the offer be withdrawn, fall on our revenues on account of troops utilized for the Afghanistan operations. Finally, there are strong grounds for holding that any reconsideration of the case should not in any case extend to the non-effective charges, in view of the nature of the settlement referred to in paragraph 5 above, since to do so might involve India in liabilities which cannot now be definitely stated.

NOTICES.

THE PATENT OFFICE, 1, COUNCIL HOUSE STREET, CALCUTTA.

Public room, open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

1. All communications relating to applications for patents and for registration of designs under the Indian Patents and Designs Act (II of 1911), or in continuation of applications under the Inventions and Designs Act (V of 1888) must be made in English and addressed to the Controller of Patents and Designs, 1, Council House Street, Calcutta. Documents sent by post should be carefully packed and a full address given in all communications.

2. Directions for the guidance of inventors and others are given in the Patent Office Handbook (price one rupee) which contains the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, the Indian Patents and Designs Rules, 1912, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary Rules) Act, 1915, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1915, together with current regulations and instructions. These should be consulted before an application is made to the Controller.

3. Advice. The Patent Office cannot undertake (1) to give opinions on the interpretation of Patent Law, or on the advisability of protecting inventions and designs or on their infringement; (2) to make searches in respect of information available in the public room; (3) to recommend any particular agent; or (4) to assist in the disposal of inventions. Models are not required unless specially asked for. Drawings must be on tracing cloth and the Rules and Instructions for the preparation of drawings as given in the Handbook should be strictly followed. A provisional patent cannot be secured under the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911.

4. Applicants are warned that the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, is in force in British India only, and patents granted under it do not extend to the United Kingdom or any of the British possessions. The International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property does not include India. For information regarding patents in countries other than India application should be made to the patent offices in the countries concerned.

5. Fees are payable in cash and must be received in the Patent Office within the time allowed by the Acts. When cheques are offered in payment of fees, it must be clearly understood that the office cannot hold itself responsible for any delay that may occur in the collection of cash on the cheques; any cheque not payable in Calcutta is subject to commission for which due allowance should be made. In cases where it is not possible to have the fees handed in at the Patent Office, it is preferable to send them by money-order or postal order payable at Calcutta to the Controller of Patents and Designs, and to advise him that they have been so sent. Stamps will not be received in payment of fees.

6. Trade and property marks and names are not registered and medicines are not patented under the Indian Patents and Designs Act. There is no provision of Law in British India for their registration. Neither does this Act deal with pictures, photographs, etc., for which copyright is obtainable under the Indian Copyright Act, 1914.

7. Printed Specifications of applications, which have been accepted, are published within about three weeks after acceptance has been notified in the Gazette of India. These specifications can be purchased at the Patent Office at a uniform price of 8 annas

FOREIGN SEA-BORNE TRADE DURING JANUARY, 1920.

REVIEW of the Sea-borne Trade of British India for the month of January, 1920, and for the ten months ended January, 1920.

FOREIGN COMMERCE.

JANUARY AND THE TEN MONTHS ENDED JANUARY, 1920.

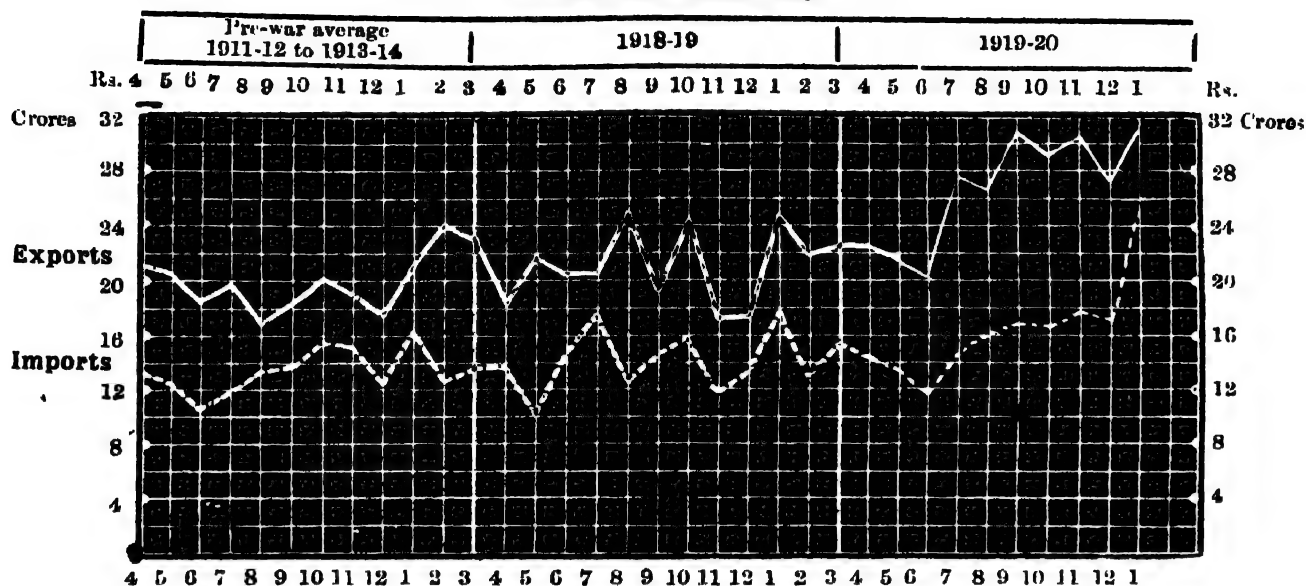
A new high record for imports and for exports (including re-exports), large imports of piecegoods and metals and exports of cotton.

Large favourable balance of trade.

The trade returns of British India for January, 1920, as compared with those of its immediate predecessor, showed increases in the value of the import, export, and re-export trade. The total imports of merchandise in January, 1920, were valued at R25,08 lakhs, which surpassed all previous records, as against R17,31 lakhs in the preceding month, and the value of the exports was R29,63 lakhs, as against R25,71 lakhs, and of the re-exports R1,44 lakhs, as against R 1,30 lakhs. Imports increased by about 45 per cent, exports by 15 per cent, and re-exports by 11 per cent. As compared with January, 1919, imports and exports showed increases of 40 per cent and 27 per cent respectively, while re-exports showed a decrease of 2 per cent. A review of the trade of the ten months ended January, 1920, will be found on page 7.

The most interesting features of the month, as compared with the corresponding month of the previous year, were (1) a large decrease in the exports of rice, linseed, and tanned hides and skins, (2) a considerable increase in the shipments of lac, raw cotton, cotton twist and yarn, and jute gunny bags and cloth, (3) a large increase in the imports of kerosene oil, cotton piecegoods, motor cars and motor cycles, and sheets and plates (iron or steel), and (4) a large decrease in the imports of cotton twist and yarn.

The quantity of wheat shipped in January, 1920, was only 760 tons as against 1,363 tons in January, 1919. The shipments were made mainly to Arabia, Asiatic Turkey, and Persia. Shipments of rice not in the husk decreased to 75,095 tons from 164,868 tons in January, 1919. The imports of kerosene oil in January, 1920, amounted to nearly 5 million gallons, as against nil, and cotton piecegoods to 159 million yards, as against 107 million yards, in the corresponding month of the previous year.



The following statement shows the monthly imports and exports of merchandise during April, 1919, to January, 1920, as compared with the corresponding months of the preceding year :—

In the ten months ended January, 1920, the excess of exports over imports of private merchandise was R 1,03,79 lakhs, as against R68,34 lakhs in the corresponding period of 1918-19, and the net imports of treasure on private account (excluding transactions which do not enter into the balance of trade) were R4,79 lakhs, as against R8 lakhs in the preceding year. The net exports (merchandise and treasure) were thus R 99,00 lakhs, as against R68,26 lakhs in 1918-19. The balance of trade, so far as shown by the statistics of merchandise, treasure, Council Bills and Enfaced Rupee paper, was R66,58 lakhs in favour of India in the ten months, April to January, 1919-20, as compared with R42,07 lakhs in the corresponding period of 1918-19.

* Exclusive of Government transactions.
(a) Demand rate.

The amount of Council Bills and Telegraphic Transfers paid in India in the ten months ended January, 1920, was R33,81 lakhs, all of which were paid through the Treasuries, except R15,000 which were paid through the Paper Currency Reserve, but Reverse Council Bills were sold to the extent of R4,84 lakhs during the period, the net imports of funds by Council Bills thus amounting to R28,97 lakhs. In the ten months ended January, 1919, the amount of Council Bills and Telegraphic Transfers was R30,91 lakhs, of which R21,52 lakhs were paid through the Paper Currency Reserve and R9,39 lakhs through the Treasuries. In the ten months ended January, 1918, the amount paid was R44,01 lakhs. As regards Enfaced Rupee paper, R3 lakhs represented the amount of paper enfaced to London and R96 lakhs the amount re-transferred from London in the ten months, April to January, 1919-20, while in the corresponding period of 1918-19, R30 lakhs represented the amount of paper enfaced to London and R24 lakhs the amount re-transferred from London.

Movements of Gold and Silver (Private and Government).

In the month of January, 1920, the imports of gold were valued at R7,40 lakhs (R6,89 lakhs being in the form of bullion and R51 lakhs in sovereigns and other gold coin), as against R5,37 lakhs in December, 1919. There were no exports of gold in January, 1920, as in the preceding month.

The imports of silver during the month under report were valued at about R5 lakhs, of which nearly R4 lakhs were on Government account, as against over R1 lakh entirely on private account in December, 1919. The exports of silver in January, 1920, were valued at R3 lakhs, mainly on private account, as against about R24 lakhs, both on private and Government account, in the preceding month.

The customs duty figures are an index to the volume of the import trade only, since under exports hides and skins (raw), jute, rice, and tea only are subject to duty. In the ten months ended January, 1920, the import duties increased to nearly R12,14 lakhs from over R10,54 lakhs in the same period of 1918-19, while the export duties rose to nearly R3,93 lakhs from over R3,12 lakhs. The grand total of gross Indian sea and land customs revenue (excluding salt revenue) in the ten months, April to January, 1919-20, amounted to about R17,87 lakhs, as compared with R15,42 lakhs in the corresponding period of the preceding year.

SHIPPING.

The following table shows the number and tonnage (net register tonnage) of vessels which entered and cleared with cargoes at ports in British India during January, 1920, as compared with December, 1919, and January, 1919 and 1914:—

Entered with cargoes.

* The Indian Tariff (Amendment) Act, IV of 1916, took effect from 1st March, 1916.
† Subject to duty from the 11th September, 1919.
(a) Excludes the 7½ per cent duty on explosives.
(c) ,, ,, ,, confectionery.

The total tonnage entered and cleared with cargoes in January, 1920, as compared with that in the preceding month (December, 1919) and in the corresponding month of 1914 and 1919, is shown in the last column of the table above. In the month of January, 1920, there were 298 arrivals* and 463 sailings† with cargoes in and from India. As regards tonnage, if a comparison be made with January, 1914, the corresponding pre-war month, it will be seen that there was a decrease in the tonnage of vessels cleared with cargoes of 75,919 tons or 11 per cent. The decrease in the entries (with cargoes) amounted to 99,693 tons or 16 per cent.

The shipping clearances with cargoes in the foreign trade from the ports of British India in the ten months, April to January, 1919-20, as compared with the corresponding period of 1913-14, i.e., before the war broke out, were as follows:—

	Tonnage (net register tonnage) clearances in the ten months, April to January
	1913-14 (Pre-war period)	1919-20
British ships (including British Indian)	5,150,734	4,164,176
Foreign ships	1,559,247	799,798
Total	6,709,981	4,963,974

In 1919-20, as against 1913-14, the total tonnage clearances with cargoes declined 26 per cent. In 1913-14 the British (including British Indian) tonnage was 77 per cent and foreign tonnage 23 per cent of the total, while in 1919-20 the British (including British Indian) tonnage was 84 per cent and foreign tonnage 16 per cent.

Railway Statistics.

Railway statistics, like the import and export statistics above, are a valuable index to the general movement of trade throughout the country, and show that the earnings from 1st April, 1919, to 31st January, 1920, were R71,85 lakhs, as against R70,57 lakhs in the corresponding period of 1918-19, or an increase of R1,28 lakhs.

Trade of Aden in January, 1920.

The grand total value of the imports and exports of merchandise, by sea, into and from the port of Aden amounted to R1,88 lakhs in the month of January, 1920, and R16,30 lakhs in the ten months ended January, 1920. The value of the principal articles of import and export was as follows:—

SAMPLES.

An Open General Licence has been issued which permits the free export of all bona-fide samples of prohibited goods to all destinations with which trade is now permitted. Samples exported under this licence may be used only for genuine sample purposes, i.e., for obtaining orders from foreign buyers, and may not be sold except with the written consent of the Export Licence Department, but such consent may be dispensed with when it is desired to sell the articles in the country of destination after they have fulfilled their purpose as samples. Exporters will be required to satisfy the Customs Authorities that the goods presented for export under this licence are bona-fide samples, and to make a declaration to that effect on the relative shipping documents.

This notice only applies to samples of goods which require licences for export to the particular destination concerned.

In addition, the consent of the Export Licence Department is not required for the sale of samples which, though within this scheme at the actual time they were exported, could be exported outside the scheme at the actual time of the proposed sale.

OPEN GENERAL LICENCE FOR COAL EXPORTS.

An Open General Licence has been issued, with effect from Thursday, 1st January, 1920, permitting the export of coal, coke and manufactured fuel to all destinations abroad except Russia, Germany, Hungary, Austria, Turkey and Bulgaria, subject always to the approval, previously obtained, of the Controller of Coal Mines or his duly authorised representative, and subject to shipment being made in a vessel approved by the Commissioners of Customs and Excise or their Officers.

The Customs Authorities will require pre-entry to be made in all cases; and at ports where there is a duly authorised local representative of the Controller of Coal Mines (see list below) the approval referred to above will be signified by his endorsement on the pre-entry form, which must be presented to him for the purpose before shipment.

Where shipment is proposed to be made from a port not included in the list given below, it will be necessary for application for the Controller's approval to be made to the Export Branch of the Coal Mines Department in London. Shipments from all ports in the United Kingdom to the destinations excluded from the purview of the general licence must still be covered by an export licence from the Coal Mines Department.

The following are the ports shipments from which will be covered by the local representative's endorsement on pre-entry :—

District.	Controller's Representative.
All Scottish ports . . .	Mr. W. D. Fuller, 4, Dunlop Street, Glasgow.
From Amble to Middlesbrough inclusive.	Mr. W. R. Fisher, Guildhall Chambers, Quayside, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

United States of America.
South America.
Japan and Korea.
Asiatic Russia.

France, Belgium, Spain, Portugal, Greece, Italy, Serbia, Roumania, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, Switzerland and Iceland.

In accordance with Article 6, Chapter 2, of the "Arms Convention," all destinations in the prohibited areas set out in Article 6 are excepted from this Open General Licence and will still require a specific export licence for all arms and ammunition.

OPEN GENERAL LICENCE FOR THE EXPORT OF AIRCRAFT, &c.

An Open General Licence has been issued for the export of the undermentioned goods to all destinations except Russia, Germany, Hungary, Austria, Turkey and Bulgaria. Applications are no longer to be made to the Export Licence Department in respect of the export of these goods to countries other than those mentioned :—" Aeroplane engines and their component parts. Aircraft, other than balloons of all kinds, and their component parts, together with accessories and articles suitable for use in connection with aircraft."

OPEN GENERAL LICENCE FOR THE EXPORT OF PARCELS CONTAINING MISCELLANEOUS FOODSTUFFS.

An Open General Licence has been issued for the export by parcel post of parcels containing one or more varieties of foodstuffs (for the personal use of the addressee and not for trading purposes) to all destinations with which trading is allowed, provided that any such parcel may not contain more than two pounds of sugar or more than one pound of butter. Applications need, therefore, no longer be submitted to the Import and Export Licensing Section in respect of the export of such parcels by parcel post.

URGENT ORDERS.

The Board of Trade, Import and Export Licensing Section, announces that, in collaboration with the Department of Overseas Trade, an arrangement has been made whereby firms receiving orders which require immediate acceptance may telegraph details of any such order to the Department of Overseas Trade in order to ascertain whether a licence will be granted for the export of the goods if the order is accepted.

In the event of an applicant being promised a licence he will be enabled to deal with the order straightaway with the knowledge that upon application being made in the proper form to the Export Licence Department the licence will be granted.

The telegrams should be addressed to "Orders, c/o Advantage, Stock, London." They should give in each case in addition to the name and postal or telegraphic address of the applicant the quantity and description of the goods comprised in the order and the name and address of the ultimate consignee if the goods are destined for a neutral country. In the case of orders from Allied or British Territory or from Territory in the occupation of troops of the Associated Governments, the consignee need not be stated; and it will be sufficient merely to give the country of destination. A reply of 24 words (1/3) must be prepaid.

Applicants are requested in their own interest to confine their enquiries to orders needing a very urgent decision, since the fewer the enquiries the more promptly can answers be given.

Any subsequent correspondence that is necessary in connection with the telegraphic enquiries should be addressed to the Comptroller General, Department of Overseas Trade (Export Facilities Section), 35, Old Queen Street, Westminster, S.W. 1.

TRANSHIPMENT IN THE UNITED KINGDOM.

The provisional approval of the Import and Export Section, Board of Trade, should be obtained before the following goods are brought to this country for transhipment:—

Bills introduced in the Indian Legislative Council, Reports of Select Committees presented to the Council and Bills published under Rule 23.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 1st March 1920:—

No. 10 of 1920.

A Bill further to amend the Presidency-towns Insolvency Act, 1909.

III of 1909. WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the Presidency-towns Insolvency Act, 1909; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title. 1. This Act may be called the Presidency-towns Insolvency (Amendment) Act, 1920.

III of 1909. Insertion of new section 103-A in Act III of 1909. 2. After section 103 of the Presidency-towns Insolvency Act, 1909, the following section shall be inserted, namely:—

Disqualifications of insolvent. "103-A (1) Where a debtor is adjudged or re-adjudged insolvent under this Act, he shall, subject to the provisions of this section, be disqualified from—

(a) being appointed or acting as a Magistrate;

(b) being elected to any office of any local authority where the appointment to such office is by election, or holding or exercising any such office to which no salary is attached; and

(c) being elected or sitting or voting as a member of any local authority.

(2) The disqualifications which an insolvent is subject to under this section shall be removed, and shall cease if—

(a) the order of adjudication is annulled under sub-section (1) of section 21, or

(b) he obtains from the Court an order of discharge, whether absolute or conditional, with a certificate that his insolvency was caused by misfortune without any misconduct on his part.

(3) The Court may grant or refuse such certificate as it thinks fit."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

By section 73 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920 (V of 1920), provision has been made for the disqualification of a person who has been adjudged insolvent under that Act from holding office as a Magistrate or member of a local authority, unless he has obtained a discharge with a certificate that the insolvency was due to misfortune without misconduct. This provision, which is founded on section 32 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict., C. 52), gives universal application to a principle which has already received recognition in a number of municipal and similar enactments. It is proposed by this Bill, which is merely consequential on the amendment of the law of insolvency outside the Presidency-towns and Rangoon, to impose similar disabilities on persons adjudged insolvent under the Presidency-towns Insolvency Act, 1909 (III of 1909).

(k) "special local resolution" means a resolution passed at a special local meeting;

(l) "special meeting" means a meeting of shareholders convened for the transaction of some particular business specified in the notice convening the meeting; and

(m) "special resolution" means a resolution passed at a special meeting.

CHAPTER I.

Establishment and incorporation of the Imperial Bank of India.

Establishment of the Imperial Bank.

3. (1) A Bank to be called the Imperial Bank of India and in this Act referred to as "the Bank" shall be constituted for the purpose of taking over the undertakings of the Presidency Banks and to carry on the business of banking in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

(2) Every person who, immediately before the appointed day, was registered as a shareholder or as a holder of stock in any of the Presidency Banks, together with such other persons as may from time to time become shareholders in the Bank in accordance with the provisions of this Act, shall, as long as they are shareholders in the Bank, constitute a body corporate with perpetual succession and a common seal under the name of the Imperial Bank of India and shall sue and be sued in that name.

(3) Subject to the provisions of this Act, the capital of the Bank shall consist of one hundred and twelve millions and five hundred thousand rupees, divided into shares of five hundred rupees each.

(4) The liability of the shareholders of the Bank shall be limited to the amount not fully paid up on their shares.

CHAPTER II.

Transfer of the undertakings of Presidency Banks to the Imperial Bank.

Transfer of assets and liabilities.

4. (1) Subject to the provisions of this Act, as from the appointed day, the undertakings of each of the Presidency Banks shall be transferred to and shall vest in the Bank.

(2) The undertaking of a Presidency Bank shall be deemed to include all rights, powers, authorities and privileges and all moveable or immoveable property, including cash balances, reserve funds, investments and all other interests and rights in or arising out of such property as may be in the possession of that Bank immediately before the appointed day, and all books, accounts and documents relating thereto, and shall also be deemed to include all assets, liabilities and obligations of whatever kind then existing of that Bank.

(3) If, on the appointed day, any suit, appeal or legal proceeding of whatever nature is pending by or against any Presidency Bank, the same shall not abate, be discontinued or be in any way prejudicially affected by reason of the transfer to the Bank of the undertaking of such Presidency Bank or of anything in this Act, but the suit, appeal or proceeding may be continued, prosecuted and enforced by or against the Bank.

(4) All contracts, deeds, bonds, agreements and other instruments of whatever nature subsisting or having effect immediately before the appointed day and to which any Presidency Bank is a party shall be of as full force and effect against or in favour of the Bank, as the case may be, and may be enforced as fully and effectually as if instead of the Presidency Bank the Bank has been a party thereto.

Terms of transfer as regards shareholders in the Presidency Banks.

5. (1) The name of every person who immediately before the appointed day was registered as a shareholder in any of the Presidency Banks shall be registered in accordance with the provisions of this Act hereinafter appearing as holding the same number of shares in the Bank as stood in his name in the register of such Presidency Bank:

Provided that, for the purposes of this section, two half-shares standing in the name of any such person in the register of any Presidency Bank shall be taken as the equivalent of one share, and odd half-shares shall be dealt with as hereinafter provided.

(2) The name of every person who immediately before the appointed day was registered as a holder of stock in any of the Presidency Banks shall be registered in accordance with the provisions of this Act hereinafter appearing as holding one share in the Bank for every Rs. 500 of stock of which he was the registered holder in such Presidency Bank, and odd amounts of stock not amounting to Rs. 500 shall be dealt with as hereinafter provided.

(3) The Bank shall issue fractional certificates to the holders of odd half-shares and of odd amounts of stock, not amounting to Rs. 500, certifying, as the case may be, that the holder is entitled to one-half of one fully paid share or such fraction of a share as the odd amount of stock is of Rs. 500.

(4) Holders of fractional certificates shall, within two months from the date of the certificate, either—

(i) surrender their fractional certificates with other similar fractional certificates representing in all one fully paid share, in which case the surrenderor shall be entitled to be registered as a shareholder and to have a fresh certificate for a fully paid share in the Bank issued to him and be entitled to an allotment of new shares in the same way as if he had been the holder of one fully paid share, or

(ii) at their option surrender the fractional certificates for cancellation by the Bank, in which case the surrenderor shall be entitled to receive from the Bank such proportionate cash payment as may be notified by the Bank with the approval of the Governor General in Council in respect of a whole share. In the case of certificates surrendered in accordance with this provision, the capital of the Bank shall be reduced by the nominal amount of such fractional certificates so surrendered.

(5) Every shareholder of the Bank whose name has been registered in accordance with the provisions of this section shall be entitled in respect of every share of which he is so registered as the holder to an allotment to himself or to his nominee (provided that such nominee is approved by the Bank) of two shares in the Bank with the sum of Rs. 125 credited as paid up on payment in respect of each share in the case of a former shareholder or stockholder of the Bank of Bengal or the Bank of Bombay of Rs. 125, and of the Bank of Madras of Rs. 225.

(6) The Bank shall cause notice to be published in the Gazette of India and shall also send by post to every person whose name immediately before the appointed day was entered in the register of shareholders or stockholders of any of the Presidency Banks, a notice giving particulars of the terms hereinbefore set out as to the allotment of new shares and the surrender of fractional certificates, and as to the manner and form in which application for the allotment of new shares and the surrender of fractional certificates is to be made.

(7) If within a period of three months from the date of publication in the Gazette of India of the notice referred to in sub-section (6), any shareholder has not made an application for the allotment of new shares to which he is entitled, the Bank may offer such shares for public subscription and allot them to any person applying therefor:

Provided that the Bank in the case of shareholders whose addresses are out of British India may, either generally or in any particular instance, fix an extended period for the admission of applications, but in no case shall that period be later than six months from the date of the publication of the notice in the Gazette of India.

Existing officers and servants of Presidency Banks.

6. (1) Subject to the provisions of this Act, every officer and servant employed immediately before the appointed day by a Presidency Bank shall, from the appointed day, become an officer or servant of the Bank, and shall hold his office or service therein by the same tenure and upon the same terms and conditions and with the same rights and privileges as to pension or gratuity as he would have held the same under the Presidency Bank if this Act had not been passed.

(2) Any person who, on the appointed day, is in receipt of a pension or other superannuation allowance from a Presidency Bank shall continue to receive from the Bank the same pension or allowance, so long as he observes the conditions on which the pension or allowance was granted. Any question whether he has so observed such conditions shall, in case of any difference arising, be determined by the Governor General in Council.

Dissolution of Presidency Banks.

7. As from the appointed day the Presidency Banks shall be dissolved, and thereafter no person shall make, assert or take any claims, demands or proceedings against the said Banks or against a director or officer thereof, in his capacity as such director or officer, except in so far as may be necessary for enforcing the provisions of this Act.

CHAPTER III.

Business of the Bank.

Business which Bank may transact.

8. Subject to the provisions of this Act, the business which the Bank is authorised to carry on and transact shall be the several kinds of business specified in Schedule 1, subject to the limitations therein mentioned.

Business of London office.

9. Notwithstanding anything contained in the First Schedule, the Bank shall not, at its London office, open cash credits or keep cash accounts for or receive deposits from any person who is not a customer of the Bank at any of its branches in India or Ceylon.

Bank may do Government business.

10. (1) It shall also be lawful for the Bank under any agreement with the Secretary of State for India in Council—

(i) to act as banker for, and to pay, receive, collect and remit money, bullion and securities on behalf of the Government;

(ii) to undertake and transact any other business which the Government may from time to time entrust to the Bank.

(2) Every such agreement shall provide :—

(a) that the Governor General in Council shall have power to issue instructions to the Bank in respect of any matter which, in his opinion, vitally affects his financial policy or the safety of Government balances, and that, in the event of the Bank disregarding such instructions, the Governor General in Council may declare such agreement to be terminated; and

(b) that within five years from the commencement of this Act, the Bank shall establish and maintain not less than one hundred new branches, the location of at least one-fourth of which shall be decided by the Governor General in Council.

Acquisition of business premises.

11. For the purpose of providing buildings and places in and at which to carry on and manage the business of the Bank, and proper residences for its agents, the Bank may—

(a) acquire any interest in immoveable property, and

(b) sell, buy, re-sell, exchange, let, furnish, repair, insure against fire and other risks, deal with all or any part of the same as it may consider most conducive to the interests of the Bank.

Establishment of branches and agencies.

12. Subject to the provisions of this Act the Bank may—

(a) maintain, as branches or agencies of the Bank, any branches or agencies of the Presidency Banks which were in existence immediately before the appointed day, and may establish branches or agencies at such places as it deems advantageous for the interests of the Bank; and (b) discontinue any branch or agency maintained or established under this section.

Power of Bank to take over business of certain other Banks and for that purpose to increase its capital.

13. (1) With the sanction of the Governor General in Council, the Bank may enter into negotiations for and purchase and take over the business, including the capital, assets and liabilities, of any banking company carrying on business in India of which the capital is divided into shares, and may pay the consideration for such purchase either in cash or by the allotment of shares in the capital of the Bank, or partly in one and partly in the other of these ways, and may (subject to the provisions of this Act relating to the increase of capital), for the purpose of any such allotment of shares, increase the capital of the Bank by the issue of such number of shares as may be determined on by the Bank.

(2) Any business so purchased shall after the purchase be carried on by the Bank subject to the provisions of this Act.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section "banking company" means any company formed for the purpose of carrying on the business of banking and registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1913, or the law relating to companies VII of 1913 for the time being in force in British India.

CHAPTER IV.

Shares.

Nature of shares.

14. (1) The shares of the Bank shall be moveable property.

Certificate of shares.

15. A certificate under the common or official seal of the Bank specifying the shares held by any shareholder shall be primâ facie evidence of the title of the shareholder to the shares therein specified.

Principal register of shareholders

16. The Bank shall keep in one or more books a register of its shareholders (in this Act referred to as the principal register), and shall enter therein the following particulars so far as they may be available—

(i) the names and addresses and occupations, if any, of the shareholders and a statement of the shares held by each shareholder, distinguishing each share by its number, and of the amount paid on the shares of each shareholder;

(ii) the date on which each person is so entered as a shareholder; and

(iii) the date on which any person ceases to be a shareholder.

Branch registers.

17. (1) The Bank shall cause to be kept at the offices of the Bank in Calcutta, Madras and Bombay branch registers which shall be deemed to be part of the principal register, and may do so at any other office which may hereafter be established under this Act.

(2) There shall be entered in the branch register to be kept in Calcutta the name of every person who having been registered as a shareholder or stockholder in the Bank of Bengal is entitled under the provisions of section 5 to be registered as a shareholder in the branch with the same particulars appended thereto as are required in the case of the principal register, and the same provisions shall apply mutatis mutandis to the branch registers to be kept in Madras and Bombay.

(3) Any shareholder may apply to the Bank to have his name transferred from one branch register to another in respect of either the whole or any part of the shares standing in his name, and the Bank shall, subject to such conditions as may be prescribed, cause the registers to be amended accordingly.

(4) Subject to the provisions of sub-section (3), no transaction with respect to any share registered in one branch register shall be registered in any other branch register.

Trusts not to be entered on the register.

18. No notice of any trust, express, implied or constructive, shall be entered on the principal or any branch register or be receivable by the Bank.

Power to close register.

19. The Bank may close the principal register or any branch register for any time or times, not exceeding in the whole thirty days in each year.

Inspection of register of shareholders.

20. (1) The principal register of shareholders shall be kept at such places as the Bank, by notification in the Gazette of India, may appoint and, except when closed under the provisions of this Act, that register or any branch register shall during business hours (subject to such reasonable restrictions as the Bank may impose, so that not less than two hours in each day be allowed for inspection) be open to the inspection of any shareholder gratis.

(2) Any shareholder may require a copy of any register, or of any part thereof, on pre-payment therefor at the rate of six annas for every hundred words or fractional part thereof required to be copied.

Contracts.

Form of contracts.

21. (1) Contracts on behalf of the Bank may be made as follows —

(i) any contract, which, if made between private persons, would be by law required to be in writing, signed by the parties to be charged therewith, may be made on behalf of the Bank in writing signed by any person acting under its authority, express or implied, and may in the same manner be varied or discharged ;

(ii) any contract which, if made between private persons, would by law be valid although made by parol only, and not reduced to writing, may be made by parol on behalf of the Bank by any person acting under its authority, express or implied, and may in the same manner be varied or discharged.

(2) All contracts made according to the provisions of this section shall be effectual in law, and shall bind the Bank and all other parties thereto and their legal representatives.

Regulations of Bank.

Regulations of the Bank.

22. The provisions contained in Schedule II shall be the regulations of the Bank in regard to the matters to which they relate.

CHAPTER V.

Management.

Offices of the Bank.

23. The Bank shall have offices in Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, and at such other places in British India as the Bank, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may determine. The Bank may also, subject to the provisions of this Act as to the business to be transacted there, establish an office in London.

Central Board.

24. The general superintendence of the affairs and business of the Bank shall be entrusted to a Central Board of Governors (hereinafter in this Act referred to as the "Central Board"), who may exercise all powers and do all such acts and things as may be exercised or done by the Bank and are not by this Act expressly directed or required to be done by the Bank in general meeting.

Local Boards.

25. Local Boards shall be established at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, and may be established at such other places in British India as the Central Board, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may determine.

Powers of Local Boards.

26. Without prejudice to the powers conferred by section 24, the Local Boards established at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay shall have power generally to transact all the usual business of the Bank, and shall have power as regards entries in the branch registers, respectively kept at those places to examine and pass or refuse to pass transfers and transmissions and to approve or refuse to approve transferees of shares and to give certificates of shares.

Local Boards at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay.

Constitution of first Local Boards.

27. The several persons who were, immediately before the appointed day, respectively the directors of the Presidency Banks shall constitute the first Local Boards of the Bank at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, respectively, and the persons who were then president, vice-president and secretary, respectively, of the said Banks shall fill the same offices in the respective Local Boards until they vacate office in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

Central Board.

Constitution and meetings of Central Board.

28. (1) The Central Board shall consist of the following Governors, namely—

(i) the presidents and vice-presidents of the Local Boards;

(ii) the Controller of Currency for the time being or such other officer of Government as may be nominated by the Governor General in Council to be a Governor ;

(iii) two persons not being officers of Government to be nominated by the Governor General in Council, who shall hold office for one year but may be re-nominated ;

(iv) the secretaries of the Local Boards ; and

(v) two Managing Governors to be appointed by the Governor General in Council after consideration of the recommendations of the Central Board, and who shall hold office for such period as the Governor General in Council may direct.

(2) When at any time after two years from the commencement of this Act a vacancy first occurs in the office of either of the Managing Governors, the vacancy shall not be filled, and thereafter there shall be a single Managing Governor, and the number of the Governors shall be reduced accordingly.

(3) The Governors specified in clauses (ii) and (iv) of sub-section (1) shall be at liberty to attend all meetings of the Central Board and to take part in its deliberations, but shall not be entitled to vote on any question arising at any meeting.

Other Local Boards.

29. (1) Where the Central Board establishes an additional office of the Bank in British India, a Local Board shall be constituted to manage the local business of the Bank.

Constitution of other Local Boards.

(2) The members of such Local Board shall, in the first instance, be such number as may be prescribed but not less than three in number, and shall be appointed in such manner as may be prescribed.

30. (1) If any difficulty arises with respect to the establishment of the Central Board or of a Local Board, or with respect to the appointment of the first Governors or members or to the first meeting of the Central Board or of a Local Board, the Governor General in Council may by order make any appointment or do anything which appears to him necessary or expedient for the proper establishment of the Board and for the appointment of the first Governors and members and for the first meeting thereof.

Power to remove difficulties.

(2) Any such order may modify the provisions of the Act so far as may appear to the Governor General in Council to be necessary or expedient for carrying the order into effect.

CHAPTER VI.

Miscellaneous.

31. (1) The Central Board shall, as soon as may be after the appointed day, with the previous approval of the Governor General in Council, make bye-laws consistent with this Act regulating the following matters, namely:—

Power of Central Board to make bye-laws.

(a) the maximum amount which may be advanced, or lent to or for which bills may be discounted for any individual or partnership, without the security mentioned in sub-clauses (i) to (v) of clause (a) of Part I of Schedule I, and the extent of the sums to which accounts may be overdrawn without security;

(b) the circumstances under which alone advances may be made to Governors, members of Local Boards, or officers of the Bank, or the relatives of such Governors, members or officers, or to companies, firms or individuals with which or with whom such Governors, members, officers or relatives are connected as partners, directors, managers, servants, shareholders or otherwise; and

(c) the particulars to be contained in the half-yearly balance-sheet.

(2) The Central Board may, with the previous approval of the Governor General in Council, make bye-laws consistent with this Act regulating the following matters or any of them, namely :—

(a) the keeping of the register and branch registers of shareholders ;

(b) the distribution of business amongst the Governors and their remuneration ;

(c) the distribution of business among the members of a Local Board and their remuneration ;

(d) the delegation of any powers of the Central Board or of a Local Board to committees consisting of Governors or members, as the case may be ;

(e) the procedure to be followed at the meetings of the Central or Local Boards or of any committees thereof ;

(f) the first appointment and the appointment of members of a Local Board established under this Act ;

(g) the powers of Local Boards established by or under this Act ;

(h) the localities in, and with respect to which such Local Boards shall exercise their powers ;

(i) the books and accounts to be kept at the offices of the Bank ;

(j) the reports and statements to be prepared and made by the officers of the Bank ;

(k) the management of the branches and agencies ;

(l) the renewal of certificates of shares which have been worn out or lost ;

(m) the conduct and defence of legal proceedings and the manner of signing pleadings ;

(n) all matters which are by this Act directed or permitted to be prescribed ; and

(o) generally, the conduct of the business of the Bank.

32. (1) The references in sections 188, 189 and 289 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, and references in any other enactment to the Presidency Banks or any of them shall be deemed to be references to the Bank constituted by this Act. VII of 1913

References to Presidency Banks.

(2) Where by any instrument power is given to invest in or to exercise any rights in regard to shares or stock in a Presidency Bank, then that power may be exercised as if the same power were given by such instrument in regard to shares in the Imperial Bank.

33. In section 11, sub-section (3) of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, after the word "Royal" the words "Bank of Bengal," "Bank of Madras," "Bank of Bombay" shall be inserted. VII of 1913 Amendment of section 11(3), Act VII of 1913.

34. The enactments specified in the Third Schedule are hereby repealed.

Repeals.

SCHEDULE.

(See section 8.)

PART I.

Business which the Bank is authorised to carry on and transact.

1. The Bank is authorised to carry on and transact the several kinds of business hereinafter specified, namely:—

(a) the advancing and lending money, and opening cash-credits, upon the security of—

(i) stocks, funds and securities, other than immoveable property, in which a trustee is authorised to invest trust money by any Act of Parliament or by any Act of the Governor General in Council and any securities of a Local Government or the Government of Ceylon;

(ii) such securities issued by State-aided railways as have been notified by the Governor General in Council under section 36 of the Presidency Banks Act, 1876, or may be notified by him under this Act in that behalf;

(iii) debentures or other securities for money issued under the authority of any Act of a legislature established in British India by, or on behalf of, a district board;

(iv) goods which, or the documents of title to which, are deposited with, or assigned to, the Bank as security for such advances, loans or credits;

(v) liquid assets of a company with limited liability if hypothecated in the prescribed form;

(vi) accepted bills of exchange and promissory notes endorsed by the payees and joint and several promissory notes of two or more persons or firms unconnected with each other in general partnership; and

(vii) fully paid shares and debentures of companies with limited liability, or immoveable property or documents of title relating thereto as collateral security only where the original security is one of those specified in sub-clauses (i) to (v), and if so authorised by any general or special directions of the Central Board, where the original security is of the kind specified in sub-clause (vi):

Provided that such advances and loans may be made, if the Central Board thinks fit, to the Secretary of State for India in Council, without any specific security;

(b) the selling and realisation of the proceeds of sale of any such promissory notes, debentures, stock-receipts, bonds, annuities, stock, shares, securities, bullion or goods which, or the documents of title to which, have been deposited with, or assigned to, the Bank as security for such advances, loans or credits, or which are held by the Bank, or over which the Bank is entitled to any lien or charge in respect of any such loan or advance or credit or any debt or claim of the Bank, and which have not been redeemed in due time in accordance with the terms and conditions (if any) of such deposit or assignment;

(c) the advancing and lending money to Courts of Wards upon the security of estates in their charge or under their superintendence, and the realisation of such advances or loans and any interest due thereon, provided that no such advance or loan shall be made without the previous sanction of the Local Government concerned, and that the period for which any such advance or loan is made shall not exceed six months;

(d) the drawing, accepting, discounting, buying and selling of bills of exchange and other negotiable securities payable in India, or in Ceylon; and, subject to the general or special directions of the Governor General in Council, the discounting and buying of bills of exchange, payable outside India, for and from such Banks as the Governor General in Council may approve in that behalf;

(e) the investing of the funds of the Bank upon any of the securities specified in sub-clauses (i) to (iii) of clause (a) and converting the same into money when required, and altering, converting and transposing such investments for or into others of the investments above specified;

(f) the making, issuing and circulating of bank-post-bills and letters of credit made payable in India, or in Ceylon, to order, or otherwise than to the bearer on demand;

(g) the buying and selling of gold and silver whether coined or uncoined;

(h) the receiving of deposits and keeping cash-accounts on such terms as may be agreed on;

(i) the acceptance of the charge and management of plate, jewels, title-deeds or other valuable goods on such terms as may be agreed on;

(j) the selling and realising of all property, whether moveable or immoveable, which may in any way come into the possession of the Bank in satisfaction or part satisfaction of any of its claims;

(k) the transacting of pecuniary agency business on commission;

(l) the acting as administrator or trustee for the purpose of winding up estates, or the acting as agent on commission in the transaction of the following kinds of business, namely:—

(1) the buying, selling, transferring and taking charge of any securities, or any shares in any public Company;

(2) the receiving of the proceeds, whether principal, interest or dividends, of any securities or shares;

(3) the remittance of such proceeds at the risk of the principal by public or private bills of exchange, payable either in India or elsewhere;

(m) the drawing of bills of exchange and the granting of letters of credit payable out of India, for the use of principals for the purpose of the remittances mentioned in clause (l) and also for private constituents for bonâ fide personal needs;

(n) the buying, for the purpose of meeting such bills or letters of credit, of bills of exchange payable out of India, at any usance not exceeding six months;

(o) the borrowing of money in India for the purposes of the Bank's business, and the giving of security for money so borrowed by pledging assets or otherwise;

(p) the borrowing of money in England for the purposes of the Bank's business upon the security of the assets of the Bank, but not otherwise; and

(q) generally, the doing of all such matters and things as may be incidental or subsidiary to the transacting of the various kinds of business hereinbefore specified:

Business which the Bank is not authorised to carry out or transact.

II. The Bank shall not transact any kind of banking business other than those specified in Part I and in particular—

(1) It shall not make any loan or advance—

(a) for a longer period than six months, or

(b) upon the security of stock or shares of the Bank, or

(c) save in the case of the estates specified in clause (e) of Part I, upon mortgage or in any other manner upon the security of any immoveable property, or the documents of title relating thereto.

(2) The Bank shall not (except upon a security of the kinds specified in sub-clauses (i) to (v) of clause (a) of Part I discount bills for any individual or partnership firm for an amount exceeding in the whole at any one time such sum as may be prescribed or lend or advance in any way to any individual or partnership-firm an amount exceeding in the whole at any one time such sum as may be so prescribed.

(3) The Bank shall not discount or buy, or advance and lend, or open cash-credits on the security of any negotiable instrument of any individual or partnership-firm, payable in the town or at the place where it is presented for discount, which does not carry on it the several responsibilities of at least two persons or firms unconnected with each other in general partnership.

(4) The Bank shall not discount or buy, or advance and lend, or open cash-credits on the security of any negotiable security having at the date of the proposed transaction a longer period to run than six months or, if drawn after sight, drawn for a longer period than six months:

Provided that nothing in this Part shall be deemed to prevent the Central Board from allowing any person who keeps an account with the Bank to overdraw such account, without security, to such extent as may be prescribed.

SCHEDULE II.

(See section 22.)

Share certificates.

1. Every person whose name is entered as a shareholder in the register of shareholders shall, without payment, be entitled to a certificate under the common seal of the Bank (or if the certificate relates to shares registered in a branch register under the official seal of the Bank) specifying the share or shares held by him and the amount paid up thereon: Provided that, in respect of a share or shares held jointly by several persons, the Bank shall not be bound to issue more than one certificate, and delivery of a certificate for a share to one of several joint-holders shall be sufficient delivery to all.

Lien.

Bank's lien on shares.

2. The Bank shall have a lien on every share (not being a fullypaid share) for all moneys (whether presently payable or not) called or payable at a fixed time in respect of that share, and the Bank shall also have a lien on all shares standing registered in the name of a single person for all moneys presently payable by him or his estate to the Bank. The Bank's lien, if any, on a share shall also extend to all dividends payable thereon

Power to sell for default

3. The Bank may sell, in such manner, as it thinks fit, any shares on which it has a lien, but no sale shall be made unless some sum in respect of which the lien exists is presently payable, nor until the expiration of fourteen days after a notice in writing, stating and demanding payment of such part of the amount in respect of which the lien exists as is presently payable has been given to the registered holder for the time being of the share, or to the person entitled by reason of his death or insolvency to the share.

Disposal of proceeds of sales.

4. The proceeds of the sale shall be applied in payment of such part of the amount in respect of which the lien exists as is presently payable, and the residue shall (subject to a like lien for sums not presently payable as existed upon the shares prior to the sale) be paid to the person entitled to the shares at the date of the sale. The purchaser shall be registered as the holder of the shares, and he shall not be bound to see to the application of the purchase-money, nor shall his title to the shares be affected by any irregularity or invalidity in the proceedings in reference to the sale.

Calls on Shares.

Calls.

5. The Bank may, from time to time, make calls upon the shareholders in respect of any moneys unpaid on their shares, provided that no call shall exceed one-fourth of the nominal amount of the share, or be payable at less than one month from the last call; and each shareholder shall (subject to receiving at least one month's notice specifying the time or times of payments) pay to the Bank at the time or times so specified the amount called on his shares.

Liability of joint-holders.

6. The joint-holders of a share shall be jointly and severally liable to pay all calls in respect thereof.

Liability to pay interest on unpaid calls.

7. If a sum called in respect of a share is not paid before or on the day appointed for payment thereof, the person from whom the sum is due shall pay interest upon the sum at the rate of ten per cent. per annum from the day appointed for the payment thereof to the time of the actual payment, but the Central Board shall be at liberty to waive payment of that interest wholly or in part.

Transfer and transmission of shares.

Execution of transfers.

8. The instrument of transfer of any share in the Bank shall be executed both by the transferor and transferee, and the transferor shall be deemed to remain holder of the share until the name of the transferee is entered in the register of shareholders in respect thereof.

Form of transfer.

9. Shares in the Bank shall be transferred in the following Form, or in any usual or common Form which the Central Board shall approve:

I, A B of , in consideration of the sum of rupees paid to me by C D of (hereinafter called "the said transferee"), do hereby transfer to the said transferee the share [or shares] numbered in the Imperial Bank of India to hold unto the said transferee, his executors, administrators and assigns, subject to the several conditions on which I held the same at the time of the execution thereof, and I, the said transferee, do hereby agree to take the said share [or shares] subject to the conditions aforesaid.

As witness our hands the day of Witness to the signature of, etc.

Power to decline to register transfers.

10. The Central Board may decline to register any transfer of shares, not being fully paid shares, to a person of whom it does not approve, and may also decline to register any transfer of shares on which the Bank has a lien. The Central Board may also suspend the registration of transfers for any period during which it has under the provisions of this Act directed that the registers shall be closed.

The Central Board may decline to recognise any instrument of transfer unless—

(a) a fee not exceeding two rupees is paid to the Bank in respect thereof; and

(b) the instrument of transfer is accompanied by the certificate of the shares to which it relates, and such other evidence as the Central Board may reasonably require to show the right of the transferor to make the transfer.

Deceased shareholders.

11. The executors or administrators of a deceased sole holder of a share shall be the only persons recognised by the Central Board as having any title to the share. In the case of a share registered in the names of two or more holders, the survivors or survivor, or the executors or administrators of the deceased survivor, shall be the only persons recognised by the Central Board as having any title to the share.

12. Any person becoming entitled to a share in consequence of the death or insolvency of a shareholder shall, upon such evidence being produced as may be required by the Central Board, have the right either to be registered as a shareholder in respect of the share or, instead of being registered himself, to make such transfer of the share as the deceased or insolvent person could have made; but the Central Board shall, in either case, have the same right to decline or suspend registration as it would have had in the case of a transfer of the share by the deceased or insolvent person before the death or insolvency.

Death or insolvency of shareholders.

13. Any person becoming entitled to a share in consequence of the death or insolvency of the holder shall be entitled to the same dividends and other advantages to which he would be entitled if he were the registered holder of the share, except that he shall not, before being registered as a shareholder in respect of the share, be entitled in respect of it to exercise any right conferred on a shareholder in relation to meetings of the Bank.

Rights of persons acquiring shares on death or insolvency of shareholder.

Forfeiture of shares.

14. If a shareholder fails to pay any call or instalment of a call on the day appointed for payment thereof, the Central Board may, at any time thereafter during such time as any part of such call or instalment remains unpaid, serve a notice on him requiring payment of so much of the call or instalment as is unpaid, together with any interest which may have accrued

Failure to pay call.

15. The notice shall name a further day (not earlier than the expiration of fourteen days from the date of the notice) on or before which the payment required by the notice is to be made, and shall state that, in the event of non-payment at or before the time appointed, the shares in respect of which the call was made will be liable to be forfeited.

Form of notice

16. If the requirements of any such notice as aforesaid are not complied with, any share in respect of which the notice has been given may at any time thereafter, before the payment required by the notice has been made, be forfeited by a resolution of the Central Board to that effect.

Forfeiture of shares.

17. A forfeited share may be sold or otherwise disposed of on such terms and in such manner as the Central Board thinks fit, and at any time before a sale or disposition the forfeiture may be cancelled on such terms as the Central Board thinks fit.

Disposal of forfeited shares.

18. A person whose shares have been forfeited shall cease to be a shareholder in respect of the forfeited shares, but shall, notwithstanding remain liable to pay to the Bank all moneys which, at the date of forfeiture, were presently payable by him to the Bank in respect of the shares, but his liability shall cease if and when the Bank receive payment in full of the nominal amount of the shares.

Liability of shareholders after forfeiture.

Alterati[redacted]ital.

19. The share[redacted]the Bank may, by special resolution and with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, increase or reduce the capital of the Bank:

Power to increase or reduce capital.

Provided that no such special resolution shall be deemed to have been passed, unless at least one-third in number of the shareholders, holding at least one-half of the paid-up capital of the Bank for the time being, be present in person or by proxy, and the majority of such shareholders have voted either by show of hands or by poll, as the case may be, in favour of the said resolution.

20. When any such special resolution to increase the capital has been passed, the Central Board may, subject to the provisions of this Act, and to the special directions (if any) given in reference thereto by the meeting at which such resolution has been passed,—

Procedure on resolution to increase capital.

(a) make such orders as it thinks fit for the opening of subscriptions by the shareholders towards such increase of capital;

(b) allow to the shareholders such period to fill up the subscription as it thinks fit;

(c) prescribe the manner in which the shareholders shall subscribe and pay into the Bank the proportions of new capital which they may respectively desire to subscribe; and

(d) make such orders as it thinks fit for the disposal and allotment of the amount of new capital that may not be subscribed for and paid up in the manner aforesaid.

21. Any new shares shall be subject to the same provisions with reference to the payment of calls, lien, transfer, transmission, forfeiture and otherwise as the shares in the original capital.

New shares.

22. When any such special resolution to reduce the capital has been passed, the Central Board may (subject as aforesaid) determine the manner in which the reduction shall be carried into effect.

Procedure on resolution to reduce capital.

Meetings of shareholders

23. (1) On the first Monday of the month of August in every year, or as soon after such day as is convenient, a general meeting shall be held at such time and place as shall from time to time be prescribed by the Central Board, at which meeting the Central Board shall submit to the shareholders a statement of the affairs of the Bank made up to the preceding thirtieth day of June.

Annual general meeting.

(2) A notice convening such meeting, signed by a Managing Governor, shall be published in the Gazette of India at least fifteen days before the meeting is held.

24. Any ten or more shareholders holding shares, to the aggregate amount of fifty thousand rupees, or any three Governors may convene a special meeting upon giving fifteen days' previous notice of such meeting and of the purpose for which the same is convened as well to the Central Board as also by public advertisement in the Gazette of India, and in two of the English daily newspapers and one of the Vernacular newspapers :

Provided that three months' previous notice shall be thus given of any special meeting held for the purpose of increasing or reducing the capital of the Bank, and shall also be served on every shareholder.

Quorum.

25. (1) No business shall be transacted at any meeting, whether general or special, unless a quorum of twenty shareholders, in person or by proxy, is present at the commencement of such business.

(2) If within one hour from the time appointed for the meeting a quorum is not present, the meeting, if convened by shareholders not being Governors, shall be dissolved : in any other case, it shall stand adjourned to the same day in the following week at the same time and place, and if at such adjourned meeting a quorum is not present, those shareholders who are present shall be a quorum.

Decision by majority of votes.

26. (1) Save as is otherwise provided in this Act in regard to resolutions for the increase or reduction of capital or for the removal of a Governor, every election and every matter submitted to a meeting, whether general or special, shall be decided by a majority of votes.

(2) No shareholder shall be allowed to vote at any such meeting in respect of any share acquired by transfer, unless such transfer shall have been completed and registered at least three months before the time of such meeting.

(3) No shareholder shall be entitled to vote at any meeting in respect of any shares held by him alone or jointly, whilst any call due from him alone or jointly remains unpaid.

Power to declare resolution carried by show of hands

27. Save as otherwise provided in this Act a declaration by the chairman of any meeting, that a resolution has been carried thereat upon a show of hands, shall be conclusive, and an entry to that effect in the book of proceedings of the Bank shall be sufficient evidence of that fact, without proof of the number or proportion of the votes recorded in favour of, or against, such resolution, unless, immediately on such declaration, a poll is demanded in writing by five shareholders present and entitled to vote at such meeting

Poll to be taken, if duly demanded.

28. If a poll be duly demanded, it shall be taken either at once or at such time and place, and save as otherwise provided in this Act, either by open voting or by ballot, as the chairman directs, and the result of the poll shall be deemed to be the resolution of the meeting at which the poll was demanded.

Proceedings and resolutions at meetings to be binding.

29. The proceedings at any meeting, and all resolutions and decisions of such meeting, shall be valid and binding on the Bank, so far as such proceedings, resolutions and decisions are consistent with the provisions of this Act.

Votes of Members.

Votes.

30. On a show of hands every shareholder present in person shall have one vote. On a poll every shareholder shall have one vote for every four shares of which he is the holder.

Votes of joint-holders.

31. In the case of joint-holders, the vote of the senior who tenders a vote, whether in person or by proxy, shall be accepted to the exclusion of the votes of the other joint-holders ; and for this purpose seniority shall be determined by the order in which the names stand in the register of shareholders.

Votes on behalf of lunatics

32. A shareholder of unsound mind, or in respect of whom an order has been made by any Court having jurisdiction in lunacy, may vote, whether on a show of hands or on a poll, by his committee or other legal guardian, and any such committee or guardian may, on a poll, vote by proxy.

Shareholders in default.

33. No shareholder shall be entitled to vote at any general meeting unless all calls or other sums presently payable by him in respect of shares in the Bank have been paid.

Poll.

34. On a poll votes may be given either personally or by proxy.

Form of proxies.

35. The instrument appointing a proxy shall be in writing under the hand of the appointor or of his attorney duly authorised in writing. No person shall act as a proxy unless either he is entitled on his own behalf to be present and vote at the meeting at which he acts as proxy, or he has been appointed to act at that meeting as proxy for a corporation.

Deposit of proxies.

36. The instrument appointing a proxy and the power-of-attorney or other authority (if any), under which it is signed, or a notarially certified copy of that power or authority, shall be deposited with the Bank not less than seventy-two hours before the time for holding the meeting at which the person named in the instrument proposes to vote, and in default the instrument of proxy shall not be treated as valid.

Local Meetings.

Annual local meeting.

37. A general meeting of the shareholders on a Branch register shall be held once in every year at the office of the Bank at which the Branch register is kept. It shall be held on such date as the Central Board may direct Procedure at local meeting.

38. The foregoing provisions of this Schedule as to the convening of general and special meetings and procedure at meetings shall, so far as may be, apply to local and special local meetings of the shareholders on a Branch register :

Provided that references in the said provisions to shareholders shall be deemed to be references to shareholders on the Branch register, and references to Governors and the Gazette of India shall be deemed to be references respectively to the members of the local board and to the local official Gazette.

Qualifications and disqualifications of Governors and others.

Qualification and disqualification of Governors and of members of Local Boards.

39. (1) No person shall be qualified to serve as a Governor or as a member of a Local Board who is not a holder in his own right of unencumbered shares of the Bank, to the nominal amount of ten thousand rupees at the least:

Provided that this provision shall not apply in the case of a person who is a paid servant of the Bank or is nominated or appointed by the Governor General in Council.

(2) No person shall be qualified to serve as a Governor or as a member of a local board—

if he holds the office of director, provisional director, promoter, agent or manager of any other joint-stock Bank established, or having a branch or agency, in British India, or advertised as about to be established, or to have a branch or agency, in British India; or if he is a salaried officer of Government not specially authorized by this Act or by the Governor General in Council to serve as a member; and the office of a Governor or a member of the Local Board shall be vacated—if the person holding it resigns his office or dies;

if he accepts or holds any other office of profit under the Bank;

if he becomes insolvent or bankrupt, or compounds with his creditors;

if he is declared lunatic, or becomes of unsound mind;

if he is absent from the Central Board or the Local Board, as the case may be, for more than six consecutive months; or if he ceases to hold in his own right the amount of shares required to qualify him for the office.

(3) No two persons who are partners of the same mercantile firm, or one of whom is the general agent of, or holds a power of procuration from the other, or from a mercantile firm of which the other is a partner, shall be eligible or qualified to serve as members of the Central Board or a Local Board at the same time.

Removal of Governors and members of Local Boards.

Removal of Governors.

40. The shareholders may, by a special resolution passed by a majority of the votes of shareholders holding in the aggregate not less than one-half of the capital, remove any governor (other than a Governor nominated or appointed by the Governor General in Council) before the expiration of his period of office, and appoint in his stead a qualified person, who shall in all respects stand in his place.

41. The branch shareholders on a register may, by a special local resolution passed by the votes of shareholders holding in the aggregate not less than one-half of the capital on the branch register, remove any member of the Local Board before the expiration of his period of office, and appoint, in his stead, a qualified person who sha[illegible] respects stand in his place.

Meetings of Central Board.

Meetings of Central Board.

42. (1) Meetings of the Central Board shall be convened not less than once in every three months by a Managing Governor.

(2) Any Local Board may require a Managing Governor to convene a meeting of the Central Board at any time and a Managing Governor shall forthwith convene a meeting accordingly.

(3) Three Governors entitled to vote shall form a quorum for the transaction of business.

(4) At each meeting of the Central Board the Governors present shall elect from among themselves a chairman for such meeting, who, if he is entitled to vote, shall have a second or casting vote in all cases of an equal division of votes.

Local Boards.

Term of office and number of members of Local Boards.

43. (1) At the first general local meeting after the commencement of this Act, and at the annual general local meeting thereafter, the two members of the local board who have been longest in office as members thereof shall go out of office. The vacancies shall be filled by election at a general or special local meeting.

(2) Any member so retiring may be re-elected; and if any question arises as to which of the members who have been the same time in office shall retire, the question shall be decided by the Local Board by ballot.

(3) Subject to any bye-laws which may be prescribed the number of members of any Local Board may be varied by a special local resolution.

President, vice-president and chairman.

44. (1) At the first meeting of the Local Board in every year it shall choose a president and vice-president from among its members, and whenever the office of president or vice-president becomes vacant, the Local Board shall, at its next meeting, choose a successor for the remainder of the current year:

Provided that no person shall be chosen to be president or vice-president twice in succession.

(2) The president or, in his absence, the vice-president shall be chairman at all meetings of the Local Board and at all general or special local meetings:

Provided that, if both the president and vice-president be absent at any meeting, the persons present at such meeting shall elect a chairman from among themselves.

(3) The chairman shall have a second or casting vote in all cases of an equal division of votes.

Vacancies.

45. (1) Any vacancy occurring on a Local Board by the death, resignation or disqualification of any member shall be filled up by the remaining members who shall co-opt a duly qualified person to fill the vacancy.

(2) Any member so appointed shall be considered to have held office from the date on which the member in whose place he is appointed was elected or appointed, as the case may be.

General provisions as to Central and Local Boards.

46. No act or proceeding of the Central Board or of a Local Board shall be invalidated merely by reason of the existence of a vacancy or vacancies among its governors or members.

Proceedings of boards not invalidated by vacancies.

47. All acts done by any person acting in good faith as a Governor or as a member of a Local Board shall be as valid as if he was a member of the Central or Local Board as the case may be, notwithstanding it be afterwards discovered that there was some defect in his appointment or qualification.

Acts of members of boards valid notwithstanding subsequent discovery of disqualification.

48. (1) Every Governor and every member of a Local Board shall be indemnified by the Bank against all losses and expenses incurred by him in or about the discharge of his duties, except such as happen from his own wilful act or default.

Indemnity of members of boards.

(2) A Governor shall not nor shall a member of a Local Board be responsible for any other Governor or member, or for any officer, or servant of the Bank, or for any loss or expense happening to the Bank by the insufficiency or deficiency of value of, or title to, any property or security acquired or taken on behalf of the Bank, or by the insolvency, bankruptcy or wrongful act of any customer or debtor of the Bank, or by anything done in the execution of the duties of his office or in relation thereto, or otherwise than for his own wilful act or default.

The Seals.

49. (1) The common seal of the Bank shall not be affixed to any instrument except in the presence of at least three Governors including a Managing Governor, who shall sign their names to the instrument in token of their presence, and such signing shall be independent of the signing of any person who may sign the instrument as a witness. Unless so signed as aforesaid, such instrument shall be of no validity.

Common seal.

(2) The Bank shall have for use by the Local Boards at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay official seals which shall be facsimiles of the common seal of the Bank with the addition of the name of the office where it is to be used.

(3) The official seal shall be affixed to the certificates issued in respect of any shares entered in the branch registers kept at those places and may be used for such other purposes as may be prescribed.

(4) An instrument to which an official seal is duly affixed shall bind the Bank as if it had been sealed with the common seal of the Bank.

(5) An official seal shall not be affixed to any instrument except in the presence of at least two members of the Local Board who shall sign their names to the instrument in token of their presence and such signing shall be independent of the signing of any person who may sign the instrument as a witness. Unless so signed as aforesaid such instrument shall be of no validity.

Officers of the Bank.

50. The Central Board and, subject to the provisions of this Act, the Local Boards shall have power—

Appointment, salaries, suspension and removal of officers.

(a) to appoint such officers, and servants as may be necessary to conduct the business of the Bank,

(b) to grant salaries, pensions and other emoluments to such officers and servants, and

(c) to suspend or remove any officer or servant of the Bank.

51. The Managing Governors, the secretaries and such other officers of the Bank as the Central Board may authorise in this behalf by notification in the Gazette of India are hereby severally empowered for and on behalf of the Bank to endorse and transfer promissory notes, stock-receipts, stock debentures, shares, securities and documents of title to goods, standing in the name of, or held by, the Bank, and to draw, accept and endorse bills of exchange, bank post-bills, and letters of credit, in the current and authorised business of the Bank, and to sign all other accounts, receipts and documents connected with such business.

Accounts, receipts and documents of Bank by whom to be signed

52. No Managing Governor, secretary, inspector manager, or accountant in the service of the Bank, and, without the previous sanction of the board, no khazanchi, cashier or shroff in the service of the Bank and no agent, at any branch or agency of the Bank, shall engage in any other banking or commercial business, either on his own account or as agent for any other person or persons, or shall act as broker or agent for the sale or purchase of Government or other securities.

Officers forbidden to engage in other commercial business.

53. Every person appointed to hold or act in any one or more of the said offices, and every other officer from whom the Central Board may think fit to require it, shall give security to the Bank for the faithful discharge of his duty to the satisfaction of the Central Board in such amount and in such manner as it thinks proper. The security to be given as aforesaid by the person holding or acting in the office of secretary shall not be in a less amount than fifty thousand rupees.

Security from officers.

Accounts and Dividends.

54. (1) The Central Board shall cause the books of the Bank to be balanced on every thirty-first day of December and every thirtieth day of June.

Books to be balanced twice a year.

(2) A statement of the balance at every such period, signed by a majority of the Governors shall be forthwith sent to the Governor General in Council.

(3) The Governor General in Council shall (so long as any such arrangement with the Secretary of State as is mentioned in section 10 is in force) be entitled to require of the Central Board any information touching the affairs of the Bank and the production of any document of the Bank, and may require the publication of such statements of its assets and liabilities at such intervals and in such form and manner as he thinks fit.

Dividends to be determined half-yearly.

55. (1) An account of the profits of the Bank during the previous half-year shall be taken on or immediately after every thirty-first day of December and every thirtieth day of June, and a dividend shall be made as soon thereafter as conveniently may be, and the amount of such dividend shall be determined by the Central Board.

(2) No unpaid dividend shall bear interest as against the Bank.

56. The Central Board may, before declaring any dividend, set aside out of the profits of the Bank such sums as it thinks proper as a reserve or reserves, which shall, at the discretion of the Central Board be applicable for meeting contingencies, or for equalising dividends, or for any other purpose to which the profits of the Bank may be properly applied, and pending such application may, at the like discretion, either be employed in the business of the Bank or be invested in any of the securities specified in sub-clauses (i) to (v) of clause (a) of Part I of Schedule I.

57. If several persons are registered as joint-holders of any share, any one of them may give effectual receipts for any dividend payable on the share.

Audit.

Auditors.

58. (1) Three auditors shall be elected and their remuneration fixed at the annual general meeting. The auditors may be shareholders; but no Governor or member of a Local Board or other officer of the Bank shall be eligible during his continuance in office. Any auditor shall be eligible on quitting office for re-election.

(2) The first auditors of the Bank may be appointed by the Central Board before the annual general meeting and if so appointed shall hold office only until the first annual general meeting. All auditors elected under this section, shall severally be and continue to act as auditors until the first general meeting after their respective elections:

Provided that, if any casual vacancy occurs in the office of any auditor elected under this section, a special meeting shall be called for the purpose of supplying the same.

Government auditors.

59. Without prejudice to anything contained in the foregoing provisions the Governor General in Council may appoint such auditors as he thinks fit to examine and report upon the accounts of the Bank.

Rights and duties of auditors.

60. (1) Every auditor shall be supplied with a copy of the half-yearly balance-sheet, and it shall be his duty to examine the same, with the accounts and vouchers relating thereto. Every auditor shall have a list delivered to him of all books kept by the Bank, and shall at all reasonable times [illegible]cess to the books, accounts and othe[illegible] of the Bank, and may, at the expens[illegible] of the Bank if appointed by it and at the expense of the Governor General in Council if appointed by him, employ accountants or other persons to assist him in investigating such accounts, and may, in relation to such accounts, examine any Governor or any member of a local board, or any other officer of the Bank.

(2) The auditors shall make a report to the shareholders or to the Governor General in Council, as the case may be, upon the annual balance-sheet and accounts, and in every such report they shall state whether, in their opinion, the balance-sheet is a full and fair balance-sheet containing the prescribed particulars and properly drawn up so as to exhibit a true and correct view of the state of the Bank's affairs, and in case they have called for any explanation or information from the Central Board, whether it has been given and whether it is satisfactory. Any such report made to the shareholders shall be read together with the report of the Central Board at the annual general meeting.

Notices.

61. (1) A notice may be given by the Bank to any shareholder either personally or by sending it by post to him to his registered address, or (if he has no registered address in British India) to the address, if any, within British India supplied by him to the company for the giving of notices to him.

(2) Where a notice is sent by post, service of the notice shall be deemed to be effected by properly addressing, prepaying and posting a letter containing the notice and, unless the contrary is proved, to have been effected at the time at which the letter would be delivered in the ordinary course of post.

62. If a shareholder has no registered address in British India, and has not supplied to the Bank an address within British India for the giving of notices to him, a notice addressed to him and advertised in the Gazette of India and a daily newspaper shall be deemed to be duly given to him on the day on which the advertisement appears.

63. A notice may be given by the Bank to the joint-holders of a share by giving the notice to the joint-holder named first in the register in respect of the share.

SCHEDULE III.

ENACTMENTS REPEALED.

(See section 34.)

Year.	No.	Short title.
1876	XI	The Presidency Banks Act, 1876.
1879	V	The Presidency Banks Act, 1879.
1899	XX	The Presidency Banks Act, 1899.
1907	I	The Presidency Banks (Amendment) Act, 1907.
1916	VIII	The Presidency Banks (Amendment) Act, 1916.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The main objects of this Bill are to provide for the fusion into a single Bank of the Presidency Banks now constituted under the Presidency Banks Act, 1876, and, by the creation of a strong unified Bank in close relation with Government, to foster and promote the growth of banking facilities in this country.

2. The question of the creation of such a Bank has been frequently discussed in the Legislative Council and elsewhere. The proposal which gives rise to the present Bill took definite shape last year when the Directors of the three Presidency Banks submitted to the Government of India an outline of a scheme for the dissolution of those Banks and their re-construction as a single Bank. From the point of view of the Bank and its shareholders the advantages to be derived from the consolidation of their common interests and the pooling of their joint resources are obvious. Such a proposal is also in keeping with the growing tendency towards the absorption of smaller banking companies by larger corporations which is so marked a feature of English banking development. Any measure of this kind which tends to the strengthening of institutions of the importance of the Presidency Banks is one that on general grounds would commend itself to the Government of India. The advantages of consolidation from this point of view have been approved by the shareholders of the Banks in general meeting, by the Government of India and by the Secretary of State. There is, however, a further matter which arises in connection with this Bill, namely, the opportunity which it gives for encouraging the provision of increased banking facilities in this country. At the present time, there are more than 200 districts in India and Burma in which there is no branch of the Presidency Banks, and only in very few of these is there a branch of any Bank doing business on modern lines. The second object of the Bill is, therefore, to enable Government to take the opportunity of giving an impetus to the promotion of banking facilities in India. It is contemplated that the Bank now to be constituted will do the banking business of Government, and that in return for this concession it will be required to establish at least a hundred new branches within five years.

3. The provisions of the Bill fall into three distinct groups. The first group comprises the clauses contained in Chapters I and II of the Bill. Clauses 3 and 4 deal with the constitution of the new Bank and the transfer to it of all the assets and liabilities of the Presidency Bank, and also provide for a large initial increase in the capital of the Bank when compared with the total capital of the three existing Banks. Clause 5 sets out the terms on which shareholders in the old Banks will acquire shares and option rights in the new Bank. These terms have been accepted at the general meetings of the shareholders which have been recently held at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay. The remainder of the provisions in this group provide for the dissolution of the Presidency Banks and matters incidental thereto.

4. The second group relates to the business which the Bank is empowered to transact. Speaking generally, with minor exceptions which will be referred to in the Notes on Clauses appended to this Statement of Objects and Reasons, the Bank will be empowered to transact the same class of business as can now be transacted by the Presidency Banks, with, however, one important exception. Subject to the restrictions contained in clause 9, the Bank will be allowed to transact business in London. The intention is that the Bank shall not be permitted to do ordinary exchange business, but shall only be allowed to keep accounts and deposits for its Indian customers. Included in this group are the important provisions contained in clause 10, which enable the Bank under an agreement with the Secretary of State in Council to act as his Banker, but the Bill provides that, if such an agreement is entered into, a power must be reserved thereby to the Governor General in Council to issue instructions to the Bank in respect of matters which vitally affect his financial policy, and in the event of such instructions being disregarded, to terminate the agreement. Furthermore, any such agreement must contain the stipulation regarding the establishment of new branches which has already been referred to.

5. The next group of clauses comprises general provisions relating to shares and contracts and the regulations regarding the "indoor management" of the Bank. A matter which has been a subject of some dispute between the existing Presidency Banks and their shareholders is set at rest by clause 20, which allows inspection of the registers of the Bank by shareholders subject to the conditions therein set out.

6. The general control of the Bank is vested in a Board of Governors constituted by clause 28 with the powers of general superintendence specified in clause 24. The constitution of this Central Board is sufficiently important to call for some explanation. It will consist of the Presidents, Vice-Presidents and Secretaries of the Local Boards and of two salaried officials of the Banks who will be called Managing Governors. In addition to these persons, it will also include the Controller of Currency, who will represent the interests of the Government on the Board, and provision has been made for nomination by the Governor General in Council of two non-official persons who will hold office for a year subject to a power of re-nomination. The object of this provision is to give representation on the Board to the general tax-payer in view of the use of the Government balances which the Bank will obtain if an agreement such as is contemplated by the Bill is concluded with the Secretary of State in Council.

7. While the Bill necessarily contemplates a centralised control for the Bank as a whole, it also contemplates a large measure of local autonomy in regard to the transaction of the business of the Bank at centres, where Presidency Banks are at present established. The business of the Bank at its offices at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay and at any other offices, which may subsequently be established in accordance with the provisions of clause 25, is to be transacted by Local Boards who will, in the first place, be the Directors of the existing Banks. These Local Boards will enjoy considerable powers. The Bill provides for the maintenance of branch registers of shareholders at these places. The names of the existing shareholders of each of the Presidency Banks will be entered in the appropriate branch register, and the control of these registers and the transfer of shares thereon and other connected matters will be dealt with by the Local Boards which will also dispose of the ordinary local banking business.

8. These regulations of the Bank, which if the Bank were an ordinary banking company instead of being a statutory corporation, would be found in the articles of the company, have for the most part been relegated to Schedule II. Opportunity has been taken to re-cast and revise the provisions of this character which appear in the existing Act in the light of further development of company law. The provisions in the existing Act were largely based on the company law as it existed prior to 1876, since which date there have been many important changes. The minor changes in substance and the more technical aspect of the provisions of the Bill are dealt with in the Notes on Clauses, which are appended to this Statement of Objects and Reasons.

NOTES ON CLAUSES.

Clause 1 (2).—This clause has been inserted to enable the Bill to be brought into operation at such date as will involve the minimum of disturbance to the business and affairs of the Bank.

Clause 5.—As it is not proposed to continue in the new Bank the present arrangements for half-shares and stock, a special provision has been made in this clause for a system of fractional certificates. Under clause 5 (4) holders of such fractional certificates will be entitled to be registered for a new share for every Rs. 500 worth of such certificates, or in the alternative to surrender their fractional certificates for a cash payment.

Clause 6 (2).—This sub-clause saves existing pensions of persons who were formerly in the employ of the Presidency Banks as long as the conditions on which these pensions were granted are observed, and provides an authority for the decision of disputes on this point should any arise.

Clause 8 read with Schedule I.—Introduces certain extensions in the classes of business which the Bank is authorised to transact. The business which the Presidency Banks may transact is set out in section 36 of the Presidency Banks Act of 1876. The classes of business there set out have been incorporated in Schedule I, with the following main additions—

(1) that the Bank may advance and lend money on the security of—

(a) trust securities other than immoveable property in which a trustee is authorised to invest trust money by any Act of Parliament, and

(b) fully paid shares and debentures of companies with limited liability, and immoveable property or documents of title thereof, only as collateral security when the initial security is of the nature of a trustee security,

(2) that the Bank may act as an administrator or trustee for winding up estates, and

(3) that the Bank may borrow money in England for the purposes of the Bank's business and give security for money so borrowed by pledging assets.

Under Part II of Schedule I, the limit formerly imposed under section 37 of the Presidency Banks Act of Rs. 10,000 up to which an account could be over-drawn without security is omitted, and the limit left to be prescribed by rules.

Clause 13.—This clause provides for amalgamation with other banking companies provided such companies are registered in India.

Clause 15.—It is intended that transfers of shares on a branch register and the issue of certificates relating to shares so registered shall be carried out by the Local Board concerned, and for this purpose it is necessary to provide for official seals to be used by Local Boards. The provisions relating to official seals will be found in clause 49 of the Second Schedule.

Clause 21.—This clause substitutes for section 9 of the Presidency Banks Act, 1876, the substance of the law contained in section 88 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, as to the form of contracts.

Clause 30.—Is a clause inserted in order to meet any difficulty which may arise in regard to the first constitution of the administrative machinery set up by the Bill.

Clause 33 is inserted to prevent any company formed in future using the names of the "Bank of Bengal", "Bank of Madras" and "Bank of Bombay" as its registered name.

Clause 30 of Schedule II, deals with the voting power of members. Under section 56 of the Presidency Banks Act, the proprietor of capital stock or shares of Rs. 2,000 is entitled to one vote, of Rs. 10,000 to two votes, of Rs. 20,000 to three votes, and so on according to a scale therein set out, subject to the maximum that a holder of Rs. 2 lacs of shares was entitled to 12 votes. The clause does away with the maximum altogether and gives one vote for every Rs. 2,000 worth of shares.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 1st March, 1920 :—

No. 12 OF 1920.

A Bill further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1918.

VII of 1918. WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1918; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and commencement. 1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Income-tax (Amendment) Act, 1920.

(2) It shall come into force on the first day of April, 1920.

VII of 1918. Amendment of section 2, Act VII of 1918. 2. In section 2 of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1918 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act), after clause (12) the following clause shall be inserted, namely :—

"(12A). "Registered firm" means a firm constituted under a registered instrument of partnership specifying the individual shares of the partners."

Amendment of section 3, Act VII of 1918. 3. In sub-section (2) of section 3 of the said Act after clause (ix) the following clause shall be inserted, namely :—

"(x) Agricultural income."

Amendment of section 14, Act VII of 1918. 4. For the proviso to sub-section (2) of section 14 of the said Act the following shall be substituted, namely :—

"Provided that, where the assessee is a company or a registered firm and the taxable income of such company or firm is two thousand rupees or upwards, income-tax shall be levied at the maximum rate specified in Schedule I."

Insertion of new section 14A in Act VII of 1918. 5. In Chapter I of the said Act after section 14 the following section shall be inserted, namely :—

Reduction of tax when margin above a certain limit is small. "14A. Where owing to the fact that the total income of any person has reached or exceeded a certain limit, he is liable to pay income-tax at a higher rate, the amount of income-tax payable by him shall, where necessary, be reduced so as not to exceed the aggregate of the following amounts, namely :—

(a) the amount which would have been payable if his total income had been a sum less by one rupee than that limit, and

(b) the amount by which his total income exceeds that sum."

Repeals. 6. The sections of the said Act mentioned in the Schedule are hereby repealed to the extent specified in the second column thereof :

Provided that such repeal shall not affect the liability of any person to pay any sum due from him or any existing right of refund under the said Act.

SCHEDULE.

(See section 6.)

SECTIONS REPEALED.

Section.	Extent of repeal.
Section 4 . .	The whole.
Section 6 . .	The words—"(i) any salary not exceeding five hundred rupees per mensem received by any member of His Majesty's Forces, or of His Majesty's Indian Forces, as the pay of an appointment which is ordinarily reserved exclusively for members of those Forces ; or (ii)".
Section 11 . .	The words "with the exception of agricultural income".
Section 18 . .	The words "salaries and ",
Section 58 . .	The second proviso.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

1. This Bill is designed to remedy certain defects and supply certain omissions which experience has shown to exist in the Indian Income-tax Act, 1918 (VII of 1918).

2. It is considered desirable to shorten the language of the Act by defining "registered firms." This is provided by clause 2.

3. Section 4 of the Act does not give full effect to the decision reached in Council on March 14th, 1918, on the motion of the Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur. It is, therefore, proposed to repeal it and to make clear by clause 3 of this Bill that the Act will have no application to agricultural income.

4. Clause 5 is designed to remedy the anomaly which occurs under the existing Act when an assessee with an income just in excess of one of the stages in Schedule I and therefore liable to pay income-tax at a higher rate than if his income were just below that stage, finds himself, after the payment of the tax, worse off than he would have been had his total income been below that stage. The provision included in this clause is adapted from the English Law.

5. Of the provisions which it is proposed to repeal under clause 6, section 4 has already been mentioned and the repeal of the words stated against section 11 is consequential to clause 3 of the Bill. The concession contained in the first proviso to section 6 has always appeared anomalous, and now that the rates of pay have been generally enhanced, its retention seems undesirable. On its repeal that of the words mentioned against section 13 follows.

6. A Bill to take the place of the present Super-tax Act, 1917 (VIII of 1917), is being introduced, and, if it is passed, the second proviso to section 53 of the Income-tax Act will have no force, and it is, therefore, proposed to repeal it

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 1st March, 1920 :—

No. 13 OF 1920.

A Bill to amend the law relating to super-tax.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to super-tax; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Super-tax Act, 1920;

(2) It shall have the same extent as the Indian Income-tax Act, 1918; and VII of 1918.

(3) It shall come into force on the first day of April, 1920.

Definitions.

2. (1) In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

"prescribed" means prescribed by rules made under this Act, or by rules made under the principal Act and applied with or without modification under the provisions of this Act;

"principal Act" means the Indian Income-tax Act, 1918; VII of 1918.

"super-tax" means a tax imposed by this Act; and "unregistered firm" means a firm which is not a registered firm.

(2) Save as otherwise provided in this Act, words and expressions used herein and defined in the principal Act shall be deemed to have the meanings respectively attributed to them by that Act.

Taxable income.

3. For the purposes of this Act taxable income shall be the taxable income computed in the manner laid down in Chapter I of the principal Act, subject to the following modifications, namely, that the proviso to section 7, sub-section (2) of section 12 and sub-section (2) of section 14 of that Act shall have no application, and that sub-section (1) of section 12 shall have application only in the cases of unregistered firms and Hindu undivided families.

Incomes chargeable to super-tax and rate thereof.

4. In addition to the tax imposed by section 14 of the principal Act, there shall, subject to the following provisions of this Act, be charged and recovered and paid in the year beginning on the first day of April, 1920, and in each subsequent year—

(a) by every individual subject to this Act, by every unregistered firm and by every Hindu undivided family, a super-tax on his or its taxable income at the rate specified in the Schedule, and

(b) by every company, upon the amount by which its taxable income exceeds fifty thousand rupees, a super-tax at the rate of one anna in the rupee.

Method of assessment.

5. The Collector shall assess the sum payable after considering the returns, if any, made under sections 16, 17 and 28 of the principal Act, and the result of any inquiry made by him under section 18 of that Act. In the cases mentioned in sub-section (4) of that section the Collector shall make the assessment to the best of his judgment.

Application of Act VII of 1918.

6. Sections 19 to 23, 25 to 27, Chapters IV and V, sections 42 and 45 to 52 of the principal Act shall, so far as may be, apply in the case of super-tax as if that tax and also, in the case of section 25, as if any tax due under the Super-tax Act, 1917, were income-tax chargeable under the principal Act. VIII of 1917.

Rules.

7. (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules for carrying out the purposes of this Act and may, subject to such restrictions and conditions as he may impose, delegate to a Local Government the power to make such rules so far as regards the territories subject to that Government.

(2) Any rules made under section 43 of the principal Act may be applied by notification in the Gazette of India or the local official gazette, as the case may be, to the purposes of this Act by the authority which made the same, with such modifications spec[illegible] the notification as may be necessary to [illegible]itate their application to the said purposes.

(3) Rules made or applied under this section shall be published in the Gazette of India or the local official gazette, as the case may be, and shall thereupon have effect as if enacted in this Act.

III of 1917. 8. The Super-tax Act, 1917, is hereby repealed:

Repeal of Act VIII of 1917.

Provided that such repeal shall not affect the liability of any person to pay any sum due from him under the said Act.

SCHEDULE.

(See section 4.)

In respect—
(1) of the first fifty thousand rupees of taxable income.	Nil
(2) of the next fifty thousand rupees of taxable income .	One anna in the rupee;
(3) of the next fifty thousand rupees of taxable income .	One and a half annas in the rupee;
(4) of the next fifty thousand rupees of taxable income .	Two annas in the rupee;
(5) of the next fifty thousand rupees of taxable income .	Two and a half annas in the rupee;
(6) of all taxable income over two and a half lakhs of rupees.	Three annas in the rupee.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

1. The existing super-tax law is not based on the existing Income-tax Act, and one object of the present Bill is to bring the law relating to super-tax into relation with that at present governing income-tax.

2. A second object of the present Bill is to give effect to the proposal, mentioned in the speech introducing the Financial Statement for 1920-21, to abolish the present super-tax on the undivided profits of companies and firms and to replace it by a new super-tax, at a flat rate of one anna in the rupee, on the whole income of companies in excess of Rs. 50,000. The present super-tax will continue to be levied on individual incomes, unregistered firms and Hindu undivided families being treated for the purposes of taxation as individuals. The operative clause of the Bill is No. 4.

3. The remaining clauses of the Bill are concerned with the application of the relevant sections of the Income-tax Act and do not call for comment.

Secretary to the Government of India.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 3rd March 1920:—

No. 14 OF 1920.

A Bill to constitute an Indian Red Cross Society.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the future administration of the various monies and gifts received from the public for the purpose of medical and other aid to the sick and wounded, and other purposes of a like nature during the late war, and more especially for the administration of the monies and property held by a Committee known as the Joint War Committee, Indian Branch, of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem in England and the British Red Cross Society;

AND WHEREAS it is expedient to constitute an Indian Red Cross Society with a view to the continuation in peace time, on a wider basis and with a wider purpose, of the work carried on by the said Committee during the war, and to provide, for the affiliation therewith of other societies and bodies having similar objects; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and extent.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Red Cross Society Act, 1920.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, including British Baluchistan, the Sonthal Parganas and the District of Angul.

Constitution of Indian Red Cross Society.

2. There shall be constituted by this Act a Society to be known as the Indian Red Cross Society (hereinafter called the Society). The first members of the Society shall be nominated by persons who immediately before the commencement of this Act were members of the Joint War Committee, Indian Branch, of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem in England and the British Red Cross Society (hereinafter called the Committee) at a meeting to be summoned and held for that purpose in accordance with the usual practice of the Committee within three months from the commencement of this Act. The number of members to be so nominated shall not be less than twenty-five or more than fifty.

Appointment of Managing Body.

3. The Committee shall also at the same meeting appoint from among the members nominated under section 2 the Managing Body of the Society, the members of which shall hold office as such until a new Managing Body is appointed as hereinafter provided. The number of members of the Managing Body shall not be less than ten or more than thirty.

Power to make rules.

4. The constitution of the Society shall be determined by the Managing Body which shall within six months from the commencement of this Act make rules therefor subject to the condition of previous publication. The rules may provide among others matters for the following, namely:—

(a) the conditions of membership of the Society;

(b) the appointment and term of office of members of the Managing Body;

(c) the choice of representatives on International and other Committees;

(d) representation on the Managing Body of Provincial and State Branch Committees and affiliated societies and bodies;

(e) the constitution of Finance, Medical and other Committees and the delegation of powers to them; and (f) the regulation of the procedure generally of the Society and Managing Body.

Incorporation.

5. The first members of the Society and all persons who may hereafter become members thereof so long as they continue so to be, are hereby constituted a body corporate under the name of the Indian Red Cross Society, and the said Body shall have perpetual succession and a common seal with power to hold and acquire property, moveable and immoveable, and shall sue and be sued by the said name.

Dissolution and transfer of property of Joint War Committee.

6. Upon the nomination of the first members of the Society and the appointment of the Managing Body—

(a) the Committee shall be dissolved;

(b) all property, moveable or immoveable, of or belonging to the Committee, shall vest in the Society and be held by the Managing Body of the Society and by it applied to the objects and purposes hereinafter set out; and

(c) all the debts and liabilities of the Committee shall be transferred to the Society, and shall thereafter be discharged and satisfied by it out of the aforesaid property, and each and every member of the Committee shall be wholly discharged therefrom.

Purposes to which funds of Society may be applied.

7. Notwithstanding anything contained in any appeal for subscriptions or gifts, to or for the purposes of the Committee, the Managing Body of the Society may in its discretion apply—

(a) either the corpus or the income or any part of such corpus or income of any property vested in it under clause (b) of section 6 for the relief of sickness, suffering or distress caused by the operation of war in India or in any other country in which Expeditionary Forces from India may from time to time be employed and for purposes cognate to that object and in maintaining Red Cross Depôts for military purposes;

(b) in accordance with the provisions of section 8 the income only of any such property but not the corpus or any part thereof for the relief of sickness or suffering in India, whether due to the operation of war or not, or in pursuance of any of the objects set forth in the First Schedule.

Constitution of Branch Committees.

8. There shall be constituted in the various Provinces, States and other parts of India specified in the Second Schedule, Branch Committees consisting of members of the Society and subject to the requirements of the Managing Body of the Society for the purposes of clause (a) of section 7 and any provision for expenses of management, the income of the property which has been vested in the Society under clause (b) of section 6 shall be distributed annually among such Branch Committees in the proportion shown in the said Schedule, to be expended by them and at their discretion upon all or any of the objects referred to in clause (b) of section 7.

Affiliation of other Societies.

9. The Managing Body of the Society may also affiliate to the Society any other society or body having all or any of the objects and purposes referred to in section 7, and may provide for the allocation and distribution of funds, through such society or body, to or for any such objects or purposes.

Decision of Managing Body as to purposes final.

10. The Managing Body of the Society shall have authority to determine in all cases what matters properly fall within the scope of clause (b) of section 7, and its decision in all such matters shall be binding on all Branch Committees and affiliated societies or bodies.

Receipt and use of gifts.

11. The Managing Body of the Society may also receive and hold gifts of whatsoever description either for the general purposes of the Society or for any particular purpose for which the corpus or income of the property vested in it by section 6 may be applied under the provisions of section 7, and on receipt of such gifts may, subject to the provisions of rules made under section 4, apply the same to such purposes, either directly or through Branch Committees, or societies or bodies affiliated under section 9.

Powers of Branch Committees.

12. Subject to the provisions of rules made under section 4, each Branch Committee shall have all power to regulate its own procedure and constitution, to receive gifts and expend all monies received by it for its purposes, either directly or through other societies or bodies.

FIRST SCHEDULE.

(See section 7.)

Objects to which the funds of the Society may be applied :—

(1) The care of the sick and wounded men of His Majesty's Forces, whether still on the active list or demobilised.

(2) The care of those suffering from tuberculosis, having regard in the first place to soldiers and sailors, whether they have contracted the disease on active service or not.

(3) Child welfare.

(4) Work parties to provide the necessary garments, etc., for hospitals and health institutions in need of them.

(5) Assistance required in all branches of nursing, health and welfare work, ancillary to any organisations which have or may come into being in India and which are recognised by the Society.

(6) Home Service Ambulance Work.

(7) Provision of comforts and assistance to members of His Majesty's Forces, whether on the active list or demobilised.

(8) Such other cognate objects as may from time to time be approved by the Society.

(9) The expenses of management of the Society and its branches and affiliated societies and bodies.

(10) The representation of the Society on or at International or other Committees formed for furthering objects similar to those of the Society.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

At the outbreak of the great war no Red Cross organisation existed in India, nor does any now exist on a formal basis. Red Cross work was carried on, in addition to its own normal activities, by the St. John Ambulance Association in India until August 1916 when the Indian Branch of the Joint War Committee was established, as a subordinate branch of the British Organisation, with a view to co-ordinating effort on the model of the Joint War Committee in England, which was a combination of the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John of Jerusalem in England. At the time of its inception the Indian Branch of the Joint War Committee had not separate funds and was assisted, in its early stages, by the receipt of the balances then remaining from the funds collected by the St. John Ambulance Association in India for Red Cross work, and by grants made by the Joint War Committee in England. Its main function was the administration on Red Cross lines of the funds supplied to it by the Joint War Committee in England and of such other funds as were raised by local donations, etc.

2. The success which attended the Indian Branch of the Joint War Committee enabled it to build up a position of considerable administrative importance but this position was not formally established until, at the end of 1917, the collections resulting from the "Our Day" appeal placed it in a position of financial independence of the Headquarters of the Joint War Committee organisation in England. The inception of "Our Day," with the magnificent response which it elicited, may be said for the first time to have established in India that vital interest in Red Cross activities which has enabled the Indian Branch for the past two years to extend relief, on its own initiative and under its own control, to various theatres of war in which forces from India have been employed, e.g., Mesopotamia, East Africa, Egypt and India and lately on the North-West Frontier of India.

3. The substantial balance of funds remaining to the credit of the Indian Branch of the Joint War Committee, chiefly as a response to the "Our Day" appeal, made it possible to hope that after the war came to an end, work for the relief of sickness and suffering might be perpetuated in civil life, and proposals with this end in view were discussed in the winter of 1918-19. Simultaneously the Joint War Committee in England (to whom, it should be noted, the Indian Branch were still subordinate) were addressed to ascertain whether it would be considered legitimate if funds which had been collected for the relief of suffering arising directly out of the war, were utilized for medical relief in time of peace with a view to raising the general standard of comfort and efficiency of civil as well as of military hospitals.

4. In England two most important steps have been taken which the Joint War Committee in India may well regard as a starting point in considering their future organisation, and which, incidentally, furnish a reply to the inquiry referred to in the last paragraph. In the first place, the British Red Cross Society has secured a new Charter under which they are authorised to devote their funds to the alleviation of distress in civil life and for the amelioration of hospital conditions throughout the United Kingdom. In the second place, the British Red Cross Society has entered upon an agreement with the Order of St. John of Jerusalem in England, under which it is hoped that co-ordinated action will be taken for the utilization of the resources of both institutions for the common relief of suffering.

5. Moreover as a result of plans which had been developed by the Committee of Red Cross Societies during the early part of 1919, and by a conference of some of the leading medical experts of the World, held at Cannes (France) in April 1919, and with the approval of the Governments of five great powers, viz., Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan and the United States, an International League of Red Cross Societies was constituted for the purpose of associating the various Red Cross Societies of the world in a systematic effort to anticipate, diminish and relieve misery produced by disease and calamity.

An invitation to become a member of the League was issued to the Indian Red Cross Society (which as explained does not yet formally exist) and has been provisionally accepted.

6. The Indian Red Cross Society, when it comes into being, will under these circumstances occupy a status and position exactly corresponding to that of the British Red Cross Society in the Councils of the International League of Red Cross Societies; and it will be entitled to the same representation upon that body as the British or any of the Dominion Red Cross Societies.

7. As a result of these events we have now reached a position which throws upon the Indian Branch of the Joint War Committee with its affiliated Provincial Branches, a very great responsibility. It is now incumbent upon the Joint War Committee with, it is hoped, the backing of all shades of responsible Indian opinion, to establish an independent Indian Red Cross Society with branches in every province, and with functions extending beyond war work in co-operation with the work of St. John Ambulance Association and Brigade.

8. Concurrently with the establishment of an Indian Red Cross Society on a formal basis, it is also necessary to vest in it legal power, on this wider basis, to administer the funds of the Joint War Committee in India, which were collected for the relief of suffering occasioned by the war, and such other sums as may hereafter be collected and credited to it.

The present surplus funds of the Joint War Committee in India will, under the proposals in the draft Bill, become the chief capital fund in reserve for the relief of the sickness, suffering or distress, caused by the operations of war in India or in any other of the countries in which Expeditionary Forces from India may from time to time be employed, and for purposes cognate to that object.

The first charge on the interest of the invested capital will be the maintenance of Red Cross Depôts for military purposes, and, after allowing for the above, the remaining available sums together with such other sums as may from time to time be received in aid of the work of the new Society may, in conformity with what has been decided in England, be devoted to the relief of civil suffering generally, in raising the standard of comfort of civil as well as military hospitals and their administration, and generally in the interest of hygiene.

9 It is proposed that the arrangements be elaborated on a provincial basis and that all allotments to provinces annually of interest on capital should bear relation to the contributions made by provinces to those sums and finally that provincial branches should have complete discretion in the disposal of these allotments of interest, and in the disposal of such other sums as may be collected and credited to the Provincial branch within the province.

With a view to widening as far as possible the field of useful work opening to the Indian Red Cross Society and to the provincial branches, it is proposed to legalise the affiliation with those bodies of societies and bodies having cognate aims and objects.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915.
(5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61.)

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Thursday, the 19th February, 1920.

PRESENT:

The Hon'ble SIR CLAUDE HILL, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., presiding, and 54 Members, of whom 47 were Additional Members.

RESOLUTION RE PUBLICATION OF A PATNA SERIES OF THE INDIAN LAW REPORTS.

The Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha:—"Sir, I rise to move the resolution which stands in my name and which runs as follows:— 11-2 A.M.

'This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that he may be pleased to authorise the publication of a Patna series of the Indian Law Reports containing decisions of the High Court of Judicature at Patna, as in the case of all the other Chartered High Courts.'

Sir, the reason for my bringing up this resolution is the existence on our Statute-book of an Act of this Council, Act XV of 1875, called the Indian Law Reports Act, which lays down that there will be different series of law reports for the various Chartered High Courts, and section 3 of the Act lays down that no Court shall be bound to hear cited or shall receive or treat as an authority binding on it the report of any case decided by any of the High Courts other than a report published under the authority of the Governor General in Council. Now, as I understand this section, it amounts to this, that unless a decision of a High Court be reported in an authorised series of reports bearing the imprimature of the Government of India, it is open to a Court even in the provinces in which the High Court has jurisdiction, to refuse to look at the report or be guided by it. It, therefore, seems to me a serious matter that the decisions of the Patna High Court should not be binding on the Courts even in Bihar and Orissa unless there be an authorised series of the Indian Law Reports. All the other High Courts have got such series; even the Lahore High Court, which was established last year, has recently started its own series. I do not know why it is that the Patna High Court alone, which has now been in existence for five years, has no authorised reports yet. This question has exercised the minds of the people of the province for the last few years, and at the session of the Bihar Provincial Conference, held at Monghyr in July 1917, the President made reference to this particular point. I, therefore, think that it is desirable that there should be for the Patna High Court also a series of authorised law reports as there is for the other High Courts. For one thing, it gives the Patna High Court the semblance of an inferior sort of a High Court compared with the other High Courts, in that it has no series of authorised reports of its own. I understand that at present the Bihar Government subsidise a privately issued journal which contains the reports of the Patna High Court, and in that way assist a private firm which, I am told, has got a contract for publishing it; but I do not think it is desirable that in a matter like this a private firm should have a monopoly. I shall not trouble the Council with this subject at any great length. I hope the Hon'ble the Law Member will accept my resolution."

11-5 A.M. The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"Sir, I cannot suggest to the Council that the Hon'ble Member is not in order in bringing up this resolution before our Council here. But I can see that the matter of the Patna Law Reports is not one of burning interest to this Council, and I hope, therefore, that we shall be able to dispose of it very shortly. The Hon'ble Member's motion is 'that the Governor General in Council should be pleased to authorise the publication of a Patna series of Indian Law Reports.' I may say at once that the Governor General in Council will be very pleased to authorise a series of Patna Law Reports; but I have in my mind a very homely proverb which says that you must catch your hare before you can cook him. It seems to me fairly obvious that before the Governor General in Council can authorise a series of Patna Law Reports, there must be a series of Patna Law Reports. Well, from the very inauguration of the new era in Patna we have pressed the Local Government to have such a series and they have told us frankly that during the war they cannnot manage it. Their statement that they wish to keep up the existing journal under their direct supervision was supported very strongly by the High Court, and they told us they could not start a series of their own. The High Court, I may add, invoked the assistance of the local bar who do not appear to have been very helpful in the matter. Under those circumstences we were constrained to agree to the existing series of reports being retained, in the first place, until the 31st March 1918. About the expiry of that period they came up again and they said that it was still impossible during the war for them to start a series of their own, that they had not got the press machinery, and that they could not get it and then they said (I will quote their words) 'that they hoped at the end of two years to be able to make a satisfactory arrangement on a permanent basis.' Well, the department over which I have the honour of presiding are of a notoriously trustful disposition, and we accepted that statement that at the end of that period a series of Patna Law Reports would be started such as we had always desired. I am not quite sure now that it was not a merely intelligent anticipation of events, because I feel no doubt that by the 31st March 1921 the question of law reports will be a purely provincial matter in which the Governor General in Council will take no doubt a beneficent and, I hope, intelligent interest, but will have very little other concern, and, therefore, when the period for which we have sanctioned this continuation of this journal comes to a close, it will be at all events a matter for the local Council to deal with. I hope myself that they will deal with it in the way we have always wished them to deal with it. I can only say that if my Hon'ble friend is unkind enough to desert the serene atmosphere of this Council in order to find a more practical arena in his own province and there presses the qustion which he has raised to-day, he will carry with him the cordial wishes of the Governor General in Council for his success."

The Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha:—"Sir, as I felt 11-9 A.M. that this question of the Patna Law Reports was not of great interest to the other members of this Council, I made my submissions on it in as few words as possible; and I find that the Hon'ble the Law Member has been equally so in replying to my resolution. I am glad to learn that the present contract with a private firm will expire in April 1921, and I hope that after that the reports will be published with the imprimature of the Government, either the Governor General in Council or the Local Government, as the case may be. The Hon'ble the Law Member has not tried, however, to solve my difficulty in regard to the interpretation of the section which I read out from the Indian Law Reports Act, as to whether I am right in my view that, unless the reports of the Patna Court are published with the imprimature of the Government of India, it is open to Courts even in the province of Bihar and Orissa not to look at them or be guided by them. If that contention be correct, then, I think, it is a matter for very serious consideration, and the fact of some kind of arrangement having been entered into previously by the Local Government with a private firm should not be allowed to stand in the way. However, as I understand that in about a year's time the matter will come up for consideration, I shall not press my resolution now, and I ask leave to withdraw it."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"I would like to say that we shall be very happy to call the attention of the Local Government to the 11-10 A.M. difficulty which the Hon'ble Member has mentioned; but my experience in the past with High Courts, even with the Patna High Court, has been that they pay no attention whatever to the matter."

The Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha:—"I am much obliged to the Hon'ble the Law Member for his assurances."

The Resolution was, by leave of the Council, withdrawn.

[At this stage the Hon'ble the Vice-President took the Chair.]

RESOLUTION RE HIGH COURT RULES.

The Hon'ble Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha:—"Sir, I beg to move the Resolution that stands in my name:— 11-11 A.M.

'This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that a mixed Committee of non-officials and officials be appointed to consider and report upon the expediency of assimilating the rules and practice of the various High Courts in regard to the administration of criminal justice and other matters.'

"I may say at the outset that this Resolution stands on an entirely different footing from that on the subject of the Patna Law Reports, in the sense that it is a matter of great public interest, which is not only confined to the people of Bihar and Orissa, but to the country at large. I may also be permitted to say that I am moving this Resolution in response to a general desire expressed by the Bar, both of the Calcutta and Patna High Courts. My Hon'ble friend Mr. Chanda has told me that he has also received from the Calcutta High Court Bar some instructions on the point that this Resolution should be moved before this Council in view of the important matters involved in its consideration. There are in the country at present six High Courts which have co-ordinate jurisdiction. Each High Court has the right to frame

[Mr. Sachchidananda Sinha.] [19TH FEBRUARY, 1920.]

its rules and regulations as to procedure, with the approval in some matters of the Governor General in Council or the Local Government. Now I find that in some very important matters, especially in regard to the practice of determining criminal cases, these High Courts have framed rules which are divergent on important points, and the practice of the Courts differs materially on certain important aspects of criminal administration. In comparing the rules of the various High Courts—which I have been enabled to do through the courtesy of the Hon'ble the Home Member—I find that the Calcutta High Court has laid down for half a century or more a system of procedure for deciding criminal cases which has found favour with the public at large, in the provinces of Assam, Bengal, and also Bihar and Orissa, which latter were until lately under the Calcutta High Court's jurisdiction. Other High Courts, however, differ from the Calcutta High Court in this matter on certain important points, which I shall presently place before the Council. Now, without going into unnecessary details, it may be broadly said—and here I have the advantage of speaking before the Hon'ble the Home Member who was himself a Judge of the High Court of Calcutta—that in the Calcutta High Court all criminal cases, except those in which there is a sentence of fine, are disposed of by a divisional bench of two judges, both when applications are presented for admission and also when the admitted applications come before the Court for final hearing. But in all the other High Courts (except Patna, about which I shall have a word to say later) the rules lay down that a single judge not only can and does hear all applications when they are filed for admission—which except in cases involving sentence of death or transportation for life he may reject summarily—but that a single judge can and does dispose of the cases when they come up for hearing later, except those involving sentences of death or transportation for life. This, to my mind, is a very serious matter, that all these cases, except those of death or transportation for life, should be admitted or rejected and disposed of by a single judge. From personal experience in the province of Agra, where I practised for many years and having been for now twenty-five years in intimate touch with Allahabad, I may say that there is great dissatisfaction in that province with the system of criminal justice as administered by the High Court at Allahabad, as compared with the provinces which are or have been under the jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court. When the Patna High Court was established in 1916, Sir Edward Chamier, the first Chief Justice of the High Court, declared from the Bench as follows:—

'On the criminal side we have made rules regarding the jurisdiction of a single judge more elastic than Calcutta, but we do not intend ordinarily to make over to a single judge at present any but trifling and unimportant criminal cases.'

This was regarded as the thin end of the wedge, and things have unfortunately turned out exactly as we apprehended. In Sir Edward Chamier's time the practice of the Calcutta High Court was more or less conformed to, but since he left the Court, the practice has been introduced of putting before a single judge cases involving even six months' rigorous imprisonment, and when the Court is closed for the long vacation, a single judge disposes of all criminal cases, except those of sentence of death and perhaps transportation for life. Now Bihar and Orissa naturally regard it as a very serious departure from the practice and traditions of the Calcutta High Court, to which we had been used for fifty to sixty years. It seems to me, therefore, that in view of the divergent practice in the various High Courts on this the most important matter —the administration of Criminal Justice—Council would be well-advised in appointing a committee of experts, official and non-official members, to consider the expediency of assimilating the rules and practice of the various High Courts. It may be asked by some people, not members of the legal profession 'what difference does it make whether a criminal case is admitted or disposed of by a single judge or a divisional bench?' I will, therefore, give a concrete example to illustrate my point. Sometime back I filed an application before a divisional bench of the Patna Court. The judges differed in their view as to whether my application should or should not be admitted; the senior judge thought that the application should not be admitted, the junior took a different view, he thought that the application should be admitted. A rule was, however, granted to me for the hearing before a divisional bench of two judges who acquitted the accused. Supposing the practice prevailed in Patna, as it does elsewhere except Calcutta, of appointing a single judge to dispose of such applications, my clients would have had in that case to serve the term to which they were sentenced. I, therefore, hope that I have been able to convince this Council that it is desirable that in the matter of administration of criminal justice the practice of the Courts should be the same, and that the practice which obtains in the Calcutta High Court should preferably be adopted in the other Courts. It may be said that, if this proposal be adopted, the other High Courts will require a larger number of judges, and that that would add to the cost of the administration of justice.

"I had tabled a question on this subject and asked for information giving me the figures for the last five years to show what has been the net loss or gain from the administration of justice in each province. The information has not been vouchsafed to me yet, but I have reasons to believe that, when supplied, it will show that in almost every province the Government derive a very handsome income from the administration of justice. If, therefore, the Government are called upon to add to the number of Judges in the various High Courts for enabling the Courts to dispose of criminal matters in divisional benches, they should not grudge the additional expense, as it will give much more satisfaction to the people and inspire greater confidence in their mind; and I do not think we are unjustified in asking that the expense to be incurred by Government in increasing the number of Judges should be made available.

"This, Sir, is shortly my submission on the question of the assimilation of the rules and practice of the various High Courts in regard to the administration of criminal justice. In the resolution I also refer to 'and other matters.' Now these 'other matters' are very many, but I have no desire to exhaust them here. I will indicate briefly only some of the questions on which it is desirable that there should be uniformity of practice and procedure in the various High Courts One is the question of the right of audience of counsel from other Courts. This has now formed the subject of discussion for the last thirty years or more on many occasions, and you, Sir, are aware that in some very important trials in the Bombay High Court emiment counsel from Calcutta who appeared for the accused, were refused admission, after going all the way from Calcutta to Bombay. There are also other Courts which resort to a similar practice, and it is certainly desirable that some uniform practice should be adopted in this matter so that the clients may know as to what will happen if they engage counsel from outside their own Court. My friend, Mr. Chanda, has requested me to bring up the question of the Vakils, who are allowed in the Madras High Court to practise on the Original side, but are not so allowed in the Bombay and Calcutta High Courts. Surely there must be some uniformity of practice in this matter. If the Vakils are allowed to appear in the Madras High Court on the Original side, it does not stand to reason why they should not be allowed to do so in Calcutta and Bombay.

"In regard to the question of audience in different Courts, I may mention this. When the Patna High Court was established all of us were asked, or rather induced, to withdraw our names as Advocates from the Calcutta High Court, by being told that thereby we shall be assisting the Court in shutting out Calcutta lawyers from making a raid upon the Patna High Court. We, the simple and gullible folk in Bihar, accordingly withdrew our names from the Calcutta High Court, but in spite of our having done that, we find that the Judges of the Patna High Court are so much enamoured of Calcutta lawyers that a number of them have been allowed to appear in the Patna High Court. Calcutta lawyers have been repeatedly appearing in the Patna High Court. We make no grievance of that, but I will just cite an instance of what happened the other day when a Calcutta client wanted to take to Calcutta from Patna Mr. Hassan Imam, who was himself for years a Judge of the Calcutta High Court. The Calcutta Judges said: 'No, we are not going to allow a man from the Patna High Court to come here'. Now it is obviously unfair that we should have been made to withdraw our names from the Calcutta High Court, and while lawyers from the Calcutta High Court are allowed to appear in the Patna High Court, yet a leader of our Bar was refused permission there. Although I am not trying to exhaust all the points, I hope I have indicated sufficiently the various matters, apart from criminal administration of justice, on which it is desirable that there should be uniformity of procedure. I, therefore, hope that the Hon'ble the Home Member will in this particular matter not adopt that policy which he often does—I do not say he does it willingly—of non-possumus. I think in this matter, which is not a political one, he will see his way to accept my resolution."

11-25 A.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda:—"Sir, as the only member of the Calcutta High Court Vakil Bar present in this Council—I may be wrong, as I believe my Hon'ble friend Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur is still a member of the Vakil Bar of the Calcutta High Court, in any case as a member of that Bar, I have much pleasure in giving my cordial support to my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sinha's motion. As he has said, many matters are in an anomalous condition. Take for instance one glaring case. In Madras, the vakils who have got a worthy representative here in my esteemed friend the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma, have the right of audience on the Original side of the High Court, but in Calcutta a lawyer of the eminence and position of Dr. Sir Rash Behari Ghose has no right of appearing on the Original side of the Calcutta High Court. This and other matters require to be looked into, and with these words I support the motion."

11-27 A.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Sir, when I first saw this resolution I was in some doubt as to the particular rules which the Hon'ble Member had in his mind. Rules are issued by the High Courts on the criminal side under the Government of India Act, under enactments of this Council and under the Letters Patent. Thus, rules for the guidance of the lower Courts are issued under section 107 of the Government of India Act and under certain sections of the Criminal Procedure Code. The procedure for the exercise of the ordinary original criminal jurisdiction is prescribed by the Letters Patent, and is contained in the Criminal Procedure Code. The procedure on the appellate side again is regulated partly by rules and partly by the Code of Criminal Procedure; the particular rule to which the Hon'ble Member drew attention now about divisional benches is framed under the authority of the Government of India Act. I will read section 108, sub-section (1) of that Act:—

'Each High Court may by its own rules provide as it thinks fit for the exercise, by one or more judges, or by Division Courts constituted by two or more judges, of the High Court, of the Original and Appellate jurisdiction vested in the Court.'
